CITY WILL BUY 4000 TONS COAL TO STOCK UP MUNICIPAL YARD

Firm in Toronto Offers to Supply All That is Required at Stated Price---Cost to Consumer Here Will be About $10 a Ton.

The coal problem which has been a source of considerable worry to Mayor Duffue and the City Council is practically solved if the good intentions of the aldermen result in a contract for the coal supply for the city fuel yard being signed.

Last night acting on the proposition that had been given Mayor Duffus over the telephone the council in special session instructed Aldermen Dobbin and Worth to proceed to Toronto this morning and secure for the city 4000 tons of coal.

A Supply in Sight.

Yesterday afternoon Mayor Duffus was called up on the telephone and a proposition made to him that will at least ensure for the citizens of Peterboro an emergency supply of fuel and the aldermen may be able to go still farther and get an unlimited supply of nut, egg, and stove coal so that the wants of all the citizens will be met be they large or small users. The only question is the price. The quotation is a little higher than that at which some have secured coal but the aldermen thought that the coal users of the city would be willing to back them up in removing all doubt about next winter's supply' The city expect that the price will be $10 or a little less per ton delivered. The quotation that the city received is as follows for coal f.o.b. Toronto and the firm had to know by tonight how much the city could handle.

Egg, per ton	$7.05
Stove, per ton	7.25
Nut, per ton	7.40

With a possibility of a 25c cheaper rate.

The freight from Toronto to Peterborough is 70c per ton and the best figure that the city could figure on allowing for delivery and shrinkage was about $1.75 per ton.

Aldermanic Views.

When the mayor put the matter before the council Ald. Smith thought that the price was too high. The local dealers will sell you what you want now at $10 per ton.

Ald. McIntyre was strong for the city to accept the offer and relieve the minds of the citizens.

Mayor Duffus felt the same way. He had no guarantee where his own supply was coming from unless the city secured it.

Ald. Saunders was quite willing to pay a little more to the city and be sure of his winter's supply and he felt that the citizens would buy their supply from the municipal yard at the higher price. At any rate it would be a lever against higher prices on the part of the coal dealers.

Ald. Dobbin stated that he had been given an option of renting a coal yard where 400 tons of coal could be stored with the use of scale, office and telephone. If the citizens would take their coal from the car the coal in storage would go a long way to supplying the half ton and small user. The City Treasurer had agreed to take the orders and the money for the coal. The city would run the coal proposition on a strictly cash basis.

To Buy 4000 Tons.

Ald. McIntyre moved that the city secure 2000 tons of stove and 2000 tons of nut coal at the prices quoted above. Ald. Saunders seconded it and the motion carried.

The original motion was for the city to purchase 5000 tons but it was pointed out by the City Solicitor that that would exceed the amount asked for the purpose in the application to the railway board.

Ald. Worth was sure that having this supply on hand would have a tendency to be a regulator on the price charged by the coal dealers. There would be no talk of charging $12.00 a ton for coal.

JUDGE HUYCKE SAYS CANADA MUST WAKE UP TO ITS DUTY

Discusses War in Address to Grand Jury--This Country Has Been Least Active of All Colonies and Yet Her Sons Have Covered Native Land With Glory.

The general sessions of the County Court of Peterborough County opened here this afternoon in the City Council Chamber before his honor Judge Huycke. The bar was represented by Crown Attorney Hatton, Messrs. G. N. Gordon, O. A. Langley, J. R. Corkery, Joseph Wearing, and J. Green.

The Grand Jury were called and all but one of those summoned, M. E. Howson, answered to the roll call and Reeve John Young of Ennismore was seected to take his place.

The Grand Jury are: John Young, Ennismore, (foreman); James Blakely Asphodel; Thomas Braden, Lakefield; John Clark, Galway; Fred Finnie, Peterboro; A. J. Fife, Peterboro; A. A. Fowler, Peterboro; Ben Kindred, Otonabee; P. J. McFarlane, Otonabee; E. G. Preston, Smith; W. D. Ventress, Harvey; Wm. Williamson, N. Monaghan.

Judge Huycke's Address.

Judge Huycke in addressing the Grand Jury took advantage of the occasion to welcome them and to express his appreciation of their eminent fitness to serve. The generosity of the Mayor and City Council in placing the council chamber at the disposal of the Court was praised and the thanks of the Sessions and the Judge extended to them.

Judge Huycke while speaking on the accommodation of the court referred to the restoration and renovation of the Court Huse which was damaged by fire last December and asked the jurors to consider a recommendation, if they saw fit, asking that the County and City councils combine to build a combined City and County building which would be sufficient for both. The city needs a new building and the opportunity was at hand where the future could be provided for. He asked them to go through the old building and make such suggestions as they saw fit. Peterboro was on the eve of exceptionally prosperous times and he would like it urged upon the authorities to make it something worth while.

CAPT. BURNHAM NOTIFIES PARTY THAT HE WILL NOT STAND AS CANDIDATE AT NEXT ELECTION

CAPT. BURNHAM TO BE ASKED TO RESIGN SEAT

That Is What Local Citizens Say Is Only Course Left Him.

MAKE WAY FOR ANOTHER

If He Resigns Attempt Will Be Made to Elect Successor By Acclamation.

EXECUTIVE TO MEET

A meeting of the executive of the West Peterborough Liberal-Conservative Association will be called to consider the letter sent by Capt. Burnham to President Moore, and the indications are that his resignation will be accepted.

The citizens of Peterborough who know Capt. Burnham best were not surprised at the announcement that he had resigned as the nominee of the party or at the reason he gave for making this step. The Captain has always been a continual source of surprises to his friends and enemies alike. No one was able to forcast the stand he was likely to take on any public question. He has a way of thinking for himself that is peculiarly his own.

West Peterborough electors, no matter of what party, want a representative at Ottawa who will help win the war and who will uphold any government that makes that the paramount duty of the hour. As one citizen said today to The Review what the country needs now is conscription, the control of food supplies and the nationalization of railways.

Capt. Burnham will not only be taken at his word and his offer to withdraw as the party's nominee be accepted but there will be a demand made from him to resign his seat in the House at once if he finds himself out of accord with the Government. If he does this prompt action will be taken in this city to supply his place. Leaders of both parties discussed the situation today and a program was decided upon.

If Capt. Burnham sends in his resignaton to the Speaker of the House the Patriotic League will be asked to call a meeting of representative citizens who are members of both parties. These will decide on a policy in which partisanship will have no place. The object is to form in Peterborough just such a coalition as Premier Borden is attempting to create at Ottawa. Some citizen will be chosen to represent the riding at Ottawa in the place of the present member, a man who will have no platform except one, the chief plank in which is "win the war." The choice of such a gathering would be ratified at a mass meeting of the electors and then his election would be made unanimous. Every effort will be made to prevent political strife and to avoid the dividing of the electors by holding an election. Whether Capt. Burnham holds to his seat until the end of his term or resign at once, this is the policy that is being advocated today. Even if there is a general election the probability is that an independent representative will be sent to Ottawa by unanimous consent.

Capt. Burnham is doubtless sincere in his convictions but in this matter he exhibits characteristics that are peculiar to himself. He is disposed to anticipate the course of events and is noted for his intolerance of the opinions of others. He has aways been prone to act on his own initiative and to ignore the counsel of others interested in the matter at issue equally with himself.

Finds Himself Unable to Support Premier's Conscription Bill Because No Levy is Provided Upon Wealth as Well as on Men---May be Asked to Resign Seat at Once.

Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., has placed in the hands of President Moore, of the Liberal-Conservative Association, his resignation as nominee of the party in West Peterborough. The reason given by him is that he cannot conscientiously support the Borden Conscription Bill for the reason that it does not conscript wealth as well as the manhood of the country. Capt. Burnham sets forth his views in full in the following communication to President Moore:

"TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE WEST PETERBOROUGH CONSERVATIVE ASSOCIATION:

"Dear Sir:

"Many have been hoping that when the Prime Minister brought down his Military Service Bill, popularly known as the Conscription Act, it would have contained a plan for the organization of all the resources of Canada and not simply for the selective draft of the man-power alone. The other taxable resources of Canada are money, private property, materials, etc. In Great Britain and in the other allied countries all these things are made to bear their fair share of conscription. Why not in Canada?

"The national income tax of Britain is well known. We have nothing of that kind here. Then again, the revenue of Canada, that is the national money power, is made up of the revenue taxes paid in by all Canadians, and all sums raised for carrying on the war are repaid out of it. Except perhaps the tax on war profits, which refers, however, only to profits over and above those accruing to the lot of industry in general at an unusual time. The war taxes merely bring those upon whom they fall down to the level of the rest, and are not taxes on property held for a rise, or, properly speaking, income taxes, and therefore do not constitute a sufficient answer to the objections raised by those who think that it is not British or Canadian fair play to make the masses contribute both the man-power and the money-power (revenue) while large quantities of idle property are left as before, and the incomes of the rich also, both of which very largely escape.

"I do not deny that the rich give generously, but there is an obligation nevertheless upon those private individuals who have large sums of money, timber limits, mines and the like, in the form of natural and other resources, to put their possessions by means of an income and extra property tax at the service of the State, just as in the case of man-power.

"A case will illustrate. A man too old to go to the front has perhaps only a moderate income, but is holding up for a favorable chance to sell other extensive possessions. He has no sons or daughters. Is it fair to conscript or force others and not him? Is it fair to take the man-power and money-power of the masses and leave the money-power and wealth of the few uncompelled? As so many great religious and other bodies have said, manifestly not. 'The last man and the last dollar' means more than 'the man' alone.

"The Prime Minister is a tower of strength to the cause and to the Empire, but his bill is not in my opinion equitable as it stands, and as there is a promise of nothing further in that regard I cannot support it. This is a suitable time for me to take such a step as I am taking, and I cannot think of the men and women at the front and of the people at home in Canada, and do otherwise.

"Therefore, Mr. President, in view of the fact that we may have a general election at any moment, I place my resignation as the choice of the Conservative party of West Peterborough at the last convention in your hands. That will leave us both free to do as we see fit.

"The safety of the State, both at home and abroad, is dependent upon a broader bill than the Prime Minister's bill brought down today, and, as I have already made known my objections and hopes in the proper quarters, I am at liberty to tell my constituents in this way that to my infinite regret I cannot support this bill as it now stands.

"As my constituents have no chance to give their views, I will not vote against the bill. I repeat that I cannot vote to saddle the whole burden of the war, men and money, on the great mass of the people alone. There must be sacrifice all round or Canada cannot throw herself unitedly and overwhelmingly into the mighty struggle.

"The following resolution of the Presbyterian General Assembly at Montreal largely expresses my views, but not the meaning of the Borden Bill:

> "'Montreal, June 10.—The Assembly desires to express its appreciation of every legitimate effort to rouse the sluggards among the youths of Canada to a consciousness of duty, and to enroll those who are available in a great crusade for the world's freedom.
> "'It endorses the policy of selective conscription as applied to the battlefield, and of the universal conscription of the talent, wealth and energy of the Canadian people.'"

OTTAWA PAPERS SAYS ACTION IS SPECTACULAR

Journal Discusses Capt. Burnham's Withdrawal as Party Nominee.

HE MIGHT HAVE WAITED

But That Contention Is Right and That People Are of Same Mind.

(Special to The Review.)

OTTAWA, June 12.—The Journal and Citizen give great prominence to Capt. Burnham's letter to the constituents in which he resigns as nominee of the party.

The Journal says editorially:

Mr. Burnham, M.P., has chosen a rather spectacular wny of impressing upon the government the need for imposing a tax on excess incomes simultaneously with the enforcement of compulsory military service.

The Journal newspapers have strongly advocated that this be done. It seems to us so obviously the fair and proper thing, that we cannot help thinking Mr. Burnham will soon have an opportunity to withdraw his letter to his nominating association. We are convinced that the successful working out of the compulsory service bill hinges upon the Government's decision to impress into the service of the state private wealth that has hitherto escaped the tax collector.

It should be pointed out, however, that a taxation scheme could not be tacked on to a conscription bill. Possibly Mr. Burnham thinks Sir Robert Borden should have made some announcement yesterday that the Finance Minister was preparing a supplementary budget. Tactically that would doubtless have been the wiser course. Mr. Burnham not only voices the views of his own constituency but of people generally.

PARIS, June 12.—Artillery fighting was rather violent in the region of California Plateau and south-east of Corbeny. The submarine was towed into Cadiz and stripped of her wireless apparatus so that she could not communicate with the vessels of Central Powers interned in this port. Repairs to the German submarine will take at least two days, but it is believed the vessel will be interned. The submarine is 450 tons and carries a crew of 22, two tubes and two rapid fire guns.

NOTHING CAN SAVE GERMANS FROM DEFEAT GEN. HAIG SAYS

It is Only a Question of How Much Longer They Can Hold Out Against Such Drives as That of Last Week.

(By Stewart Lyon.)

British Headquarters in France, June 12.—Although the Germans continue to splash shells about the positions won by British last week east of Messines Ridges they have attempted no further counterattack. On the other hand the British having thoroughly consolidated the new line running due north and south, as well as east of Oosttaverne and are further securing their new ground by pushing patrols well forward. Thus far they have met with comparatively little resistance from the enemy, who appears to be undecided whether to make a further stand or to fall completely back to his Warneton line. The British are pressing toward this town. Most of the artillery firing comes from long range guns. Seven field guns were captured late yesterday. Information reaching British indicates the temporary disorganization of German forces, or at least nervousness regaring their position between the converging Ypres Comines Canal and the River Lys.

Gen. Haig has issued a special order of the day congratulating General Plumer and the entire second army which he commands and saying the complete success of their attack last Thursday is "an earnest of the eventual final victory of the allied causes.

Gen. Haig emphasises the fact that the position attacked was one of great natural strength on the improvement of which the enemy had labored for three years and that the British casualties were gratifyingly light. The full effects of the victory cannot be estimated yet but that they will be very great is certain.

After detailing the advantage which the Germans had in possessing the ridge which gave them a foreknowledge of and the time to prepare for the British attack Gen. Haig declares the capture of Messines shows nothing can save the enemy from complete defeat and brave and tenacious as the German troops are it is only a question of how much longer they can endure the repetition of such blows.

The total number of prisoners taken by the Canadians in their record breaking raid last week was 168, including four officers.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, JUNE 12, 1917

CAPT. BURNHAM RESIGNS.

CAPT. BURNHAM, M.P. for West Peterborough, has placed his resignation in the hands of President Moore of the local Liberal-Conservative Association and refused to be a candidate again in the general election which everybody in touch with the situation feels is impending. The Captain was renominated at a convention of the party held in 1914, soon after the breaking out of the war, and when it was thought that Premier Borden would go to the country for a mandate.

In his letter to President Moore, Capt. Burnham states his position at considerable length. He cannot support the Conscription Bill that has been brought down by Premier Borden and which was laid before the House yesterday. His reason is that there is no provision made for the conscription of wealth, of the talents and resources of the country, as well as the manhood. Capt. Burnham also believes that there should be a national income tax imposed as one means of raising revenue for the prosecution of the war.

It is aparent to the most skeptical observer, then, that Capt. Burnham is at odds with the Government that he was elected to support, and that he would be expected to continue to support if he appealed to his constituents for re-election. He assails the Government on its strongest point. It has always been admitted that the financial affairs of the nation have for the past six years been in competent hands. Sir Thomas White's administration of his department, especially since the war broke out, has been one of the marvels of the financial world, and has elicited admiring comments from monetary experts in the United States and Great Britain.

If the Military Department had been handled with the same success as that having to do with the finances, Canada would have at least one million men under arms today instead of a little over one-third of that number. The present urgent need is for more recruits. It is to supply these recruits that the bill has been designed when Premier Borden had satisfied himself of the necessity, after a personal investigation of the war situation in Europe, and after he had discussed the matter with the military authorities at the centre of the Empire. It is men, not money, that is the crying need of the hour.

Capt. Burnham believes that a national income tax should be imposed. On this question he is clearly at odds with the Finance Minister. Sir Thomas White has been urged by the Opposition, press and party, to levy such a tax. He has refused, and his reasons were clearly stated. The authority to tax incomes is a matter that rests with the provinces, and Sir Thomas has always maintained that double taxation is something to be avoided.

Capt. Burnham has simply flown off the handle again. He takes too much for granted and is unduly alarmed. His fears are groundless. His plea for the manhood of the country as against the wealth is unwarranted. Conscription of the resources will follow as a matter of course the conscription of men. The more urgent matter is naturally taken up first. The rest will come in due time. The Government has already appointed a food controller and another official to regulate the matter of supplies, as far as it is possible to do so. Eligible men in the service of the Government and employed in the munition plants have been ordered to present themselves for examination. Every physically fit man under the age of 45 years is liable for military service. The conscription that Capt. Burnham insists on will come to meet a necessity created by the other.

The majority of the people of Canada, it is felt, are in favor of conscription. Party politics disappear before the issue now confronting the country. If Capt. Burnham finds it impossible to support the Government in the bill introduced in the House yesterday, he had only one alternative, and that was to resign. He would certainly receive little consideration at the hands of the electors of West Peterborough if he appealed to them for support on such a platform as he appears to have constructed for himself.

West Peterborough will, if this question is referred to the people, elect a man to Parliament who will hold up the hands of Sir Robert Borden in this matter, and that, too, regardless of the former party affiliations of the man so chosen. There is already a movement on movement on foot among the citizens to hold a funeral and lay politics at rest for the time being at least. It is not unlikely that a mass meeting will be held and some definite action taken before the question is many days older. West Peterborough is no longer divided along the old party lines. The burning issue is the war, and the ambitions of individuals, private citizens or politicians are no longer of moment. The war must be won, Canada must do its duty, no matter what becomes of the hopes or the foibles of the individual or the party.

The merchants and manufacturers of this city have received blank forms, to be filled out with a sworn statement of the profits they have made during the past year, and on these profits a tax is to be levied. Wealth has already been conscripted. There is not a resource in the country upon which a levy will not be made. Wealth and manhood will alike bear the burden when conscription is put in operation.

REV. BEN. SPENCE.

THE TEMPERANCE CAUSE in the past has suffered more at the hands of its avowed champions than it ever has from its out-and-out opponents or secret adversaries. Hyperbole is not argument, and exaggerated statements make skeptics instead of allies. Any worthy cause requires nothing more than to have the plain truth uttered on its behalf. Anything in excess of this works an injury which is lasting, even if it be subtle.

Rev. Ben. Spence has paid one of his periodical visits to this city in the interests of the cause on which he is heralded as an authority. He is certainly in a position to lay claim to such a distinction, as he has been identified with it for a lifetime, and has derived the main portion of his livelihood from his labors on its behalf.

Preaching in one of the leading churches in the city last Sunday, Mr. Spence is reported as saying that "any paper that publishes a liquor advertisement is worse than if it sold its columns to advance the interests of Germany in this country."

Foolish words these, words fraught with danger to the man who is rash enough to utter them. Any newspaper publisher who has run liquor advertisements in his paper has an excellent chance to sue Mr. Spence for criminal slander, if he deemed such procedure worth while. To publish liquor ads. is a legitimate business. To run them or not is simply a question of business policy, just as any other matter that arises daily in the profession. To take up the cudgels in behalf of Prussianism would be rank treason, punishable by imprisonment. There is a distinction as well as a legal difference between the two policies, both of which Mr. Spence is pleased to regard as illegal. The man who is engaged in a legitimate business recognized by law is surely not to be classed with the traitor to his native land.

Mr. Spence has always been a sincere advocate of temperance. He has also been a devoted partisan. He and the organization with which he is so prominently identified have always been a reliable asset to one particular party. Mr. Spence has spoken when he might better have remained silent. He has refrained from expressing himself on other occasions when a word from him might have had weight.

When the liquor party was running as a candidate for the Legislature in a Western Ontario constituency a shareholder in a brewery and an open opponent of the Ontario Temperance Act, Mr. Spence and his organization watched the contest from afar, preserving an attitude of more or less benevolent neutrality. They took the same course when a Government candidate was routed in a Toronto constituency with prohibition as the issue.

"On to Ottawa" is Mr. Spence's new slogan. There is a political ring about the phrase. There is a constitutional question involved, as all recognise, except, perhaps, the professional agitator.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THE MAN who wants a referendum on conscription is opposed to conscription.

• • • •

THOSE WHO are opposed to conscription are are opposed also to voluntary enlistment.

• • • •

HE WHO SAYS conscription should be referred to the people hopes the people will defeat it.

• • • •

"CONSRIPTION—but conscription of wealth too"—is another excuse. The man who says that is against conscription.

• • • •

CONSCRIPTION is the proper thing. That is why its opponents dare not oppose it openly. That is why they talk of a referendum and of conscription of wealth.

• • • •

AGITATORS IN QUEBEC say they would fight only if Canada is threatened. But if an invading army should land in Quebec it would be repelled only by troops from other provinces.

• • • •

THE SOCIALIST who says you cannot destroy militarism with militarism forgets what is generally recognized as the best weapon with which to withstand the drives of Satan.

• • • •

"LIBERAL PARTY SPLIT," says a headline. There is little room for making more fragments of a party that has only thirteen out of the eighty-five members of Parliament from Ontario.

• • • •

THERE ARE thousands of people in Canada winning the war these days by passing resolutions and signing petitions. We could have saved thousands of lives if we had known three years ago that the war could be won by tongue and pen.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Jimmy's Desire.

(St. Thomas Times.)

James Simpson, the Toronto labor man, is opposed to the forcible enlistment of loafers and slackers. He prefers to see the public-spirited young men do all the fighting for the country, leaving the cities to be populated with habitues of pool-rooms, race tracks and other resorts where "cheap sports" congregate.

Fighting Against Nature.

(New York Sun.)

There is no such thing as fighting natural law. When we can make an apple fall to the sky instead of the earth, when we can make the moon rise in the west and set in the east, when we can make ice hot and fire cold, then we can upset the law of supply and demand, and not until then.

Mostly Misinformation.

(Toronto News.)

Ontario has been supplied with too much positive information concerning Quebec by people who seem to know little or nothing of Quebec conditions, Quebec sentiment or the history of the French province.

They Understood.

(Toronto Star.)

The war is a repudiation of the fanatical teachings of International socialists. The workingmen of Britain refused to sacrifice their country to the men who would have had them oppose conscription. Their eyes were open.

SIR OLIVER LODGE AND PARADISE

A gentleman who has felt the stress of the long drought in Ontario since last September 16th, heard a glad gospel the other day at last. His friend had been reading Sir Oliver Lodge's "Raymond," and in conversation on the subject made the startling communication that one of the "messages" from spirit land spoke of beer, cigars, and whisky sodas to be had over there, "just the same as in England, only better and cheaper." "Well, and is that a fact," exclaimed the sufferer in this vale of prohibition. "It's the best tidings I've heard in many a moon. I'll just wind up my affairs and strike right out for Paradise," according to the London advertiser.

The new book of Revelation which promises a bar in heaven, spirits to the spirits, seems likely to be the subject of dispute and disagreement. It is most revolutionary revelation, a doubtful doctrine. Crossing the bar will be from the closed side in Ontario to a wide open side yonder. And yet the novelty, like other novelties, resolves itself on a little consideration into a renewal of an old belief. The Greeks held for nectar on Olympus and the ruder Goths revelled in fancies of mead-drinking in their heaven, the heroes draining fathomless cups for ever and ever. Browning's Rabbi ben Ezra looks forward to a merry sort of hereafter:

"The festal board, lamp's flash and trumpet's peal,
The new wine's foaming flow."

Now old fancies find a confirmation, it might seem, in the reply of the spirit of Sir Oliver's medium.

An objector may here arise and ask, "But was this beer-drinking, cigar-smoking spirit in heaven? Is he not rather to be located elsewhere?" The conclusive answer is that he seemed to be quite happy and enjoying himself. Smoking a cigar is a very different matter from being yourself lit and smoked as a moment's cheroot by Lucifer or his men.

Such goings-on in Elysium as smoking and drinking may suggest an endless continuance of the fight for prohibition, not only in this world but in the next. But doubtless these material pleasures are conceivable as divested of any harmful, earthly associations. As there will be glorified bodies, so it may be believed that the joys of the flesh will be proportionately grorified, being purged of the thousand ills that mere mortal flesh is heir to. The wine, too, the whisky, and the rest of it will be more spiritual than spirituous possessed of all the exhillarating effects without the poison. Oh, yes, it is easy to explain the difficulty. As at Cana, the best wine was reserved to the last, so "the best is yet to be" in yet another life, as Rabbi ben Ezra would say. It will be inocuous! And yet, and yet, ah, will that please all? Will it not be a grapejuice paradise after all, if there be not one drop of poison and wickedness here and there in pipe or bowl?

MASON'S MELODIES

We can't understand a modern war—the kind that we've been planning for—without abundance of long green; therefore, go slow on gasoline, and foolish things of every sort; quit drinking grape juice by the quart, quit eating pie three times a day, and idly throwing coin away. For soon you'll face a heavy tax that will put stitches in your backs, and freeze your gay and winning smile, unless you've laid away a pile. We cannot run a modern scrap, and push the kaiser off the map, that butcher who too long hath sinned—we cannot do him up with wind; 'twill take a large and mighty bar'l, to to put the tax on Bill and Carl. The tax that you will have to pay won't set you back for half a day, if you'll be prudent, now, and wise; cut out imported smokes and pies; blow in less staple brands of coins for venison and tenderloin; don't bet your money on the nags, spend less for needless gaudy rags. Life's been for years one grand sweet song, we've lived in luxury so long, it may at first seem quite a strain to save a share of what we gain. But if we pickle sundry dimes we'll bless ourselves in after times, when tax collectors come around, to nail the shilling and the pound.

Wit and Wisdom

No Equal To It.

Governor Holcomb of Connecticut, being congratulated for his refusal to permit Sunday sports, said to a Hartford reporter:

"We want to do away with the idea that a good time means a vicious and ungodly time. We want to do away with the Washington White idea.

"A lawyer, you know, stepped to the edge of an excavation and yelled down one day:

"'Is George W. White down there?'

"'What's wanted?' said Wash.

"'Did you originally come from Nola Chucky, Mr. White?'

"'I sure did.'

"'Have you got an aunt named Chloe Clay,'

"'I sure have.'

"'Then, Mr. White, I beg to inform you that said aunt has just died, leaving you a fortune of $50,000.'

"'Golly!'

"Wash White for a year, in a frock coat and patent leathers, lived the life. Then he put on his overalls again and went back to the pick and shovel. He was cleaned out.

"The same lawyer found him in the same excavation the next year.

"'Washington,' he yelled down the hole, 'more news for you. Your uncle has died in Nola Chuky. It's a round hundred thousand this time.'

"'I don't think I can take it. I ain't as strong as I was once, and it's doubtful if I could go through all that again, boss, and live.'"

Didn't Want a Story.

A khaki-clad warrior with a wounded arm entered the train and sat down opposite an inquisitive old gentleman. "Oh, Tommy, you're wounded!" exclaimed the latter, pleasantly. "How did it happen?"

"Well, it was this way," began Tommy, wearily, "I was told to get even with a German sniper. He was stuck up a tree about a mile away. He was a sergeant, as I could see—"

"As you could see?" interposed the old gentleman. "At that distance?"

"Yes, I could see his stripes. Well, we fired at each other. He got one in at me that broke my bayonet and hit me in the arm. But I soon settled him."

"With a wounded arm?"

"Yes, easy. Suddenly I heard a yell, and a whole lot of them started to climb out of the trenches. I fired as quickly as I could, and 50 of them went down."

"Fifty," said the old gentleman, doubtfully. "That's a lot, isn't it?"

"Yes, 50," said Tommy, who was getting annoyed. "Then I fixed my bayonet—"

"But you said your bayonet was broken."

This was the last straw. "Look here," said Tommy, angrily, "you dont want a story you want an argument."

The Sham Fight.

One battalion of the local Territorials had challenged another to a sham fight.

The defenders took possession of a magnificent position on a cinder heap overlooking the six-foot-wide river. To make themselves secure they "blew up" the only bridge by simply posting up a notice to say they had done so.

Imagine, then, their indignation when they saw the enemy calmly crossing the bridge, every man holding his rifle high over his head.

"Here, I say, you know!" called out the captain of the defenders, angrily, "you can't cross that bridge! Can't you see it's supposed to be blown up?"

"That's all right," replied the attacking sergeant, calmly. "We're not crossing the bridge. Can't you see, we're supposed to be swimming?"

MAJORITY FOR THE PREMIER

LONDON TIMES THINKS CANADIANS WILL FAVOR CONSCRIPTION.

LONDON, June 12.—The Times says editorially that Canada has so far maintained party government, but there, too, its day is clearly passed. This new phase of Canadian politics is a direct result of the imperial war cabinet.

"Compulsion is no light thing for Canada to undertake," continues The Times. "The entry of the United States has made it easier but it still is a path beset by pitfalls and genuine difference of opinion is envitable. The people of this country will do well to avoid jumping to rash conclusions about the motives of the Liberals, who are resisting compulsion' It is fatally easy to talk as though this opposition were nothing but the opposition of the French people of Quebec. They cling to their traditions and have a rooted objection to compulsion which they have never hesitated to proclaim and justify on grounds they believe to be entirely consistent with real devotion to the British connection. It is not too easy for us to see eye to eye with them, but at least we can abstain from rash reproaches which must necessarily ignore their point of view. That it is no ignoble point of view is shown by the fact that it is shared by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and many of his most distinguished followers. Needless to say we have little sympathy with these views, which we believe to be profoundly mistaken. Sir Robert Borden has evidently made up his mind to do what he believes to be necessary and abide by the result. There is every sign that his resolution will be supported by a solid majority of the Canadian people'"

MEXICAN BILL PASSED ON LADY BY AN ITALIAN

Lindsay Police on the Lookout for Sharp Stranger.

Mrs. David Hudson, of Lindsay, complained to Chief Short yesterday that a worthless Mexican ten dollar bill had been passed upon her on Saturday last.

It appears that during the day an Italian called at her residence and wished to purchase a chicken. He called her by her name and said he had worked with Mr. Wm. Henley last year on the G.T.R. bridge, quite close to her home. Mrs. Hudson did not remember him, but agreed to sell him the chicken. He had only 60 cents in change (the chicken being $1.00), but he produced a ten dollar bill which Mrs. Hudson was unable to change. Her son George had $8.00 and her daughter $2.00, which they loaned her, and the Italian was handed his change. He also purchased half a dozen eggs for which he promised to pay on Sunday, but he failed to show up.

Mrs. Hudson was not altogether satisfied with the ten spot, and on visiting a local bank was informed that it was worth thirty cents. Chief Short, however, believes that the bill is worth nothing.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Sleepy-Time Story About a Beautiful Spring Blossom.

LEGEND FROM OLD GREECE.

Quaint Tale of a Handsome, Golden Haired Lad Who Fell In Love With His Own Reflection—The Nymph In the Pool—Birth of a Flower.

When Uncle Ben came to see Little Ned and Polly Ann he had a bunch of yellow cup shaped flowers. He said: I will tell you the STORY OF NARCISSUS.

The daffodils and the jonquils all belong to the narcissus family and are among the first flowers to bloom in our gardens in the springtime.

These, of course, I bought of a man who sells flowers. They were raised in a hothouse.

Daffodils do not grow wild in this country, though in some parts of southern Europe they do.

The name narcissus was given to the flowers by the Greeks.

They had a story about them which you may like to hear.

Long ago, the Greeks' story ran, there was a handsome lad named Narcissus. So beautiful was he that every one who saw admired him.

Most of his time was spent in wandering about the woods and fields alone. One day he went to the woods to hunt. Tired and thirsty near the middle of the day, he looked about for a place to get a drink.

Deep in the forest he found a beautiful clear, deep pool. It was shaded by tall green trees, and the violets that grew by the water were the most lovely and fragrant of their kind.

Narcissus knelt to drink from the pool, and lo, just beneath his own face looked up another, a face which he thought the most attractive he had ever seen.

There were no mirrors in those days save the polished silver ones that belonged to kings or the rich. The simple country youth did not know that it was his own face that he saw looking up at him out of the water.

Narcissus leaned down and the face in the water seemed to come closer, but though he dipped his in the pool he could not touch the other.

The foolish boy was happy, for he thought that what he saw in the water was the nymph or the fairy guardian of the pool.

But, though he begged the image to come out of the water and talk to him, of course it could make no reply. Day after day Narcissus came to the pool to gaze at himself in the water. He forgot to eat, to drink, to sleep and at last he faded away and died. But he did not really die, for from his body sprang a wonderful flower whose golden head hung over the pool as his head so often had done. The flower was called narcissus, and, though I would not have you believe this story true, yet it may help you to remember the name.

The Mayflower.

Trailing arbutus, or the mayflower, is to the northeastern part of North America the true harbinger of spring. In the pine woods of the north it makes its fight against the cold weather and wins. Through the long, bitter winter its leaves stay green, and its dainty little flower blossoms out in the coolest days of spring. Of all the flowers of the wildwood trailing arbubtus is one of the wildest. It grows in profusion, carpeting the cool glades, its faint perfume sweetening the forest. But when taken to a garden it sickens and dies.

Baseball Season Has Begun.

All over the country the warm spring sun has wrought a transformation. Along with flowers and green leaves the game of baseball has appeared. Balls, bats, masks and mitts have taken the places of marbles and tops. The American boy is the most enthusiastic of all baseball fans, and everywhere he is to be seen engaged in this favorite diversion. The group here pictured was snapped by the camera man on the side lines. They are watching a runner who had just made a hit.

POOR BLOOD AND WEAK NERVES

(By F. Raymond Ward, M. D.)

Lack of strength is about the first symptom of violation of the laws of health. There come nervousness, unsteady hands and limbs, skin eruptions, dizziness, sleeplessness, heart palpitation, and with the feeling that the life blood is being sapped comes complete prostration. In this condition the sufferer is indifferent to all things and looks upon life with a gloomy, melancholic view.

It is given as a statistical fact that seven out of every ten people in the United States are suffering from nerve exhaustion, and of this number less than half realize it. They know that they have gloomy thoughts, a depression of mind, an impaired memory, dizziness and headache, wakeful nights and spells of extreme exhaustion, but they attribute it to any other cause but the right one. They feel languid, irritable and restless, the why and wherefore of which they cannot explain. They are suffering from nerve exhaustion, a condition which is undoubtedly the means of causing more misery and crushing more hopes than any other trouble that flesh is heir to.

Nervous exhaustion will not cure itself. The sufferer who thinks that nature alone will bring about a restoration of health is simply deluded by a false hope. He will realize that if the power of realizing is left him, when he becomes a hopeless victim to one of the many diseases which follow in its path.

Those suffering from nerve exhaustion or loss of energy as a result of overwork, mental worry or violation of nature's laws are quickly restored to sound health by Dr. Ward's special treatments. Dr. Ward's office is located at 79 Niagara Square, Buffalo, N. Y., which is right opposite the McKinley Monument. His office hours are Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays 9 A. M. to 9 P. M., and Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays 9 A. M. to 6 P. M. Sundays 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. Consultation and examination is always without charge.

Exquisite Iron Jewelry.

A Toronto jeweler has a set of earrings, necklace, locket and bracelets, all made of cast iron by a Prussian jeweler more than a hundred years ago. The Jewelers' Circular says they have a wonderfully fragile appearance, and their preservation is due entirely to the exquisite workmanship. They were made to replace gold jewelry given by women to the government when Prussia was crushed by Napoleon.

Postage Stamps as Money.

An interesting innovation has been introduced in Russia owing to the scarcity of small coins. To meet the difficulty postage stamps of the value of 10, 15 and 20 kopecks have since Oct. 1 been in use as paper money. At the same time they can be used for postage, but they are printed on stouter paper and have an overprint on the back in black which denotes the new use to which they have been put.

Military Does Not Know Why Gen. Byng Quit

OTTAWA, June 12.—General Sir Sam Hughes asked in the Commons if the Government had been notified of the retirement of Sir Julian Byng from the command of the Canadian army overseas, and, if so, whether or not a Canadian officer would be appointed to the position.

Sir Edward Kemp said that no information had been received, but he expected to be able to make a statement in the House to-day.

PETERBORO WATER GOOD FOR MONTH OF MAY

At a meeting of the Peterboro Utilities Commission held last evening a report was presented from C. A. G. Spence on the condition of the city water for the month of May.

It says: "The water throughout the month has been in a satisfactory condition. The presence of organic matter was detected about the middle of the month but this was only of a transient nature and at the present time there is no sign of infection."

AS TORONTO PAPERS HAVE IT

Trouble For Borden.

The Globe says: One of the first results of the introduction of the Conscription Bill has been more trouble for Sir Robert Borden in the defection of one of his hitherto ardent supporters from Ontario. After hearing the provisions of the bill in the Commons, Capt. Burnham, Conservative member for West Peterboro', who recently returned from active service overseas, wrote out his resignation as Conservative candidate for his riding at the next election.

Not Opposed to Conscription.

The World says:

Mr. Burnham is not opposed to compulsory military service — far from it. He has been a strong advocate of conscription, but he is opposed to conscription of man power unless there goes along with it conscription of all the resources of the country.

"I was amazed this afternoon," he said when asked by The World what the reasons were for his resignation, "to find that the prime minister had made no provision in the bill for this." He added that when the working men of the country were called upon to give up their lives for their country, the rich men ought to be called upon to give up their wealth. There were too many men with large incomes who had not done what they should.

Will Not Vote.

The Mail and Empire says: Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., Conservative member of Parliament for West Peterboro, has broken with his party on the conscription issue as introduced this afternoon in the House. In a letter addressed to the president of the West Peterboro Conservative Association he resigns as choice of the Conservative party to contest the riding next election.

Capt. Burnham believes that the man-power of the country should not be alone made subject to selective draft, but in effect declares that wealth should be conscripted as well.

Mayor Congratulates Sir Joseph Flavelle

An Exchange of Courtesies When Latter Was Made a Baronet.

When Sir Joseph Flavelle received his title from the King, Mayor Duffus sent him the following letter of congratulation:

Dear Sir:—

Permit me, not only on my own behalf, but more especially on behalf of the citizens of Peterborough, to heartily congratulate you on the signal and deserved honor you have received from His Majesty the King. We feel gratified that you, a former highly esteemed citizen and one whom very many here still hold in warm regard as a friend, have been so honored, for such honor is not bestowed without good reason, and we know that you have given valuable and untiring service to the Empire in this great struggle, and we are pleased to see your service so recognized.

Yours very truly,
(Sgd.) JOS. J. DUFFUS,
Mayor.

Sir Joseph's Reply.

Imperial Munitions Board, Ottawa,
June 7, 1917.

Dear Mr. Mayor:—

You have done a great kindness and conferred a highly prized honor in writing me, expressing on behalf of yourself and the citizens of Peterborough congratulations for the recognition His Majesty has been pleased to bestow upon me. How my memory goes back to the years spent in Peterborough and the kind friends who have been constant and true. The first telegram to reach me Monday was from an old boy friend still in Peterborough, a Roman Catholic. I was most grateful for it. After all, the old friends hold a peculiar place in one's affection.

Again thanking you, I am, Mr. Mayor,

Yours faithfully,
(Sgd.) J. W. FLAVELLE.

It was finally decided to call a public meeting to hear addreses on the question, and the Board of Education will be asked to furnish the speakers for the meeting.

THE FAMOUS VIOLINIST ASTOUNDS HER CRITICS

Miss Menges Lifts Her Audience Up Into the Realms of Ecstacy---Floods the Hall With Marvellous Melody.

Miss Isolde Menges, the famous English violinist, who with Eysae ranks as the greatest artist in the world, simply astounded a select and critical audience in the Conservatory of Music Hall last evening, when she carried a responsive gathering away into the realms of delightful ecstacy. Her wonderful performance is not merely a mechanical manipelation of an instrument of wood and strings, but a marvellous outpouring of the soul of an impressionable artiste, using the violin as a medium for contact with the souls of others less gifted, and irresistibly transporting them through varied moods—now one of deepest pathos, then through all the fire of love and passion, and again lifting them up in a joyous flood of entrancing melody, rivalling the morning song of happy feathered songsters at the break of a perfect day. Her conception of the compositions of great classical authors stamps her as a musical genius of inherent talent, augmented by exceptionally faultless intonation, and the fullest measure of concord and harmony acquired by the closest study of the possibilities of her versatile instrument. Her expression is exhiliratingly contagious, holding the audience spell-bound until their pent-up feelings find vent in a perfect thunder of applause following the termination of her numbers in either a breath-holding smorzando or soul-stirring crescendo.

Miss Menges' program last night was pleasingly varied, and afforded acceptable scope for an exhibition of her marvellous technique, vigorous manipulation of the bow and exceptionally clever trills. The enchanted audience were insistent in their demands for encores to every number, and she responded twice with the following: "The Moment Musicale" by Schubert, and Beethoven's Minuett.

The Instruments.

The violins used by this charming young musician are a Stradavarius of the 1709 period, and a Guanarius of the 1709 period, both representing a small fortune in themselves.

The Programme.

1. Sonato in E Major—Handel.
2. (a) Nocturne in E Flat—Chopin-Saraste; (b) The Prophet Bird—Schumann-Auer; (c) Caprice Viennois—Kreisler; (d) Tambourin Chinors—Kreisler.
3. Concerto—Mendelssohn.
4. Souvenir de Moscow Wieniawski.

Miss Beattie's exceedingly capable accompanying work on the splendid Heintzman piano, kindly supplied by Mr. Britton, Ye Olde Firme's local manager, considerably enhanced the pleasure of the evening's recital.

Coming Again.

These recitals which Miss Menges is now giving between seasons are offered philosophically and scientifically, with a view to fostering the higher development of musical recognition and education, otherwise it is doubtful if Peterborough lovers of music would have had the privilege of sitting through any such entertainment as that of last night. Miss Menges has generously consented to enter into a return engagement for next Wednesday evening with an entirely new program, when it is to be hoped that a crowded house will justify her management's assumption that a considerable portion of this community appreciates high class recitals and are willing to pay homage to phenomenal talent with their substantial endorsation. This will be a golden opportunity for hearing violin playing, as perhaps it will never again be demonstrated in Peterborough.

RESIDENTS ASK BETTER STREET CAR SERVICE

Petition Forwarded to Hydro Commission With Recommendation That Request be Granted as Soon as Possible.

At the special meeting of the city council held last night a number of communications were dealt with.

From W. C. Austin and other residents living in the northwest part of the city asking that an effort be made to secure better street car service for them. The petition was sent to the Hydro Electric Commission with a recommendation that the request be granted if possible and without delay.

From Miss Henrietta Peck objecting to the calling of the Ashburnham foot bridge after ex-Ald. Edgar and making suggestions This was referred to the Board of Works.

From Mrs. H. D. Robertson, Ald. Stratton and family acknowledging council's resolution of condolence at the death of the late Mrs. Hunter.

From Henry Hope and Sons asking that the Council take immediate action to improve the sanitary conditions at their plant. The city engineer will be requested to report on the matter at once to the Board of Works for action.

Street Improvements.

Ald. Smith drew the attention of the Street Commissioner to the bad condition of the approach to the west end of the Hunter street bridge and asking that a few loads of gravel be placed in the holes.

Ald. Stratton also had the same complaint regarding the junction of Monaghan Road and Charlotte street.

Ald. Worth wanted Cedar and Elm streets graded and oiled.

ALLOWED HENS AT LARGE IS FINED $2 AND COSTS

Thomas Birk of East City allowed his hens to run at large and they scratched up a neighbor's garden. At the Police Court this morning the defendant appeared and the Magistrate heard the case. A fine of $2.00 and $2.60 costs was imposed.

There are a number of other citizens who are breaking the bylaw in this regard and this ought to be a warning to them to keep their hens closed up.

MAJOR SUTCLIFFE REPORTED MISSING

A mesage received by Mr. F. W. Sutcliffe, of Lindsay, yesterday conveyed the information that his son, Major Charles E. Sutcliffe, of the Royal Flying Corps, had been officially reported missing June 6th.

Major Sutcliffe went overseas with the 77th Batt. in 1916, and afterwards joined the Royal Flying Corps. He developed into an expert airman, and the last letter received told of his aerial experiences on the western front.

The news that he was missing was received with regret by his friends, and hope was expressed that he would soon be located.

"OH! CECIL."

Big Musical Comedy Showing At Grand Opera House.

One of the finest musical comedies which ever came out of the City of London is to be presented at the Grand Opera House Monday next, June 18, by the James Dallas Corporation.

"Oh! Cecil," the attraction in question, has proved itself just as popular in America as in England and the company which will present it here is one of more than average ability.

Mr. Vern Dushayne has the leading role and will be favorably remembered for his excellent work here last season in "Peg O' My Heart," and it is in the role of Cecil that he found his greatest and latest part. With Mr. Dushayne will be those clever performers and laugh creators, Frank Gilham, David Stanwood and Billy Pritchard, whilst that versatile little soubrette, Miss Lulu De Treves sings and dances herself through the two hours of entertainment. Miss Jeanette Watson as Ruth Martin does good work, as also do Thelma Kingsford, Ada Phoenix and Billie Bennett.

An excellent chorus and a pony ballet of pretty attractive ladies help to keep the merry laugh continuous.

The scenic production is acknowledged by theatrical managers to be much in advance of the usual kind sent out on the road.

Seats will be on sale at the theatre on Friday.

Council Decides To Back Up City Engineer Parsons

The request of Mr. J. Hopwood for permission to keep his temporary garage on the vacant lot next to the Barrie Building was up before the city council last night, and the council decided that they would not interfere with the order of removal issued by the city engineer. Many of the aldermen had viewed the structure and were not very much impressed with the stability or the fire-proof qualities of the garage.

CHAPLAIN'S PRISONERS

Persuaded 450 Germans to Surrender to 18 Irishmen

The exploit of a chaplain, who, with eighteen enthusiastic Irishmen, brought in "450 very thankful, if somewhat dejected, Germans," was referred to by Sir Philip Sassoon in a speech at Folkestone. It is stated that a party of the Dublin Fusiliers, accompanied by the padre, when returning from a reconnoitring expedition, were assailed by rifle fire from a wood where it was known the enemy were entrenched. They immediately sought the refuge of shell holes, and from there fired a round of shots at the wood. Evidently the fire proved effective, for three Germans emerged from the wood with their hands held up in token of surrender.

The chaplain advanced to meet the trio, and informed them that one of their number could return to the wood and give the remaining Germans the assurance that their lives would be spared if they surrendered. The German who had been deputed to give the message to his compatriots promptly left, but failed to return. The chaplain decided to enter the wood and see the officer in charge of the enemy. He did so, and the result of his enterprise was that 450 Germans offered to surrender.

They emerged from the thicket, but when confronted with only 18 Fusiliers and not an entire battalion, — they probably surmised—a number of them sought to return to the wood, with the obvious intention of renewing the combat. The "Dubs," however, sent a bullet or two in the direction of the retreating soldiers and soon dispelled all notions of retaliation. It is stated that one of the German officers approached the priest and asked that he might be spared the horrors of torture. At the same time he significantly pointed to a bundle of banknotes which he held in his extended hand. He received the apt retort "We are British soldiers, sir, not thieves."

HARRY LAUDER'S BEST ON EMPIRE'S ALTAR

"I'm a Mean Man," But He Gave His Only Child—Tragedy of a Comedian

Two nights after Harry Lauder heard that his only child had been killed in France the famous comedian took his place in a revue in London "lest other members of the company go hungry." That night the company on the stage saw Mr. Lauder dash the tears from his eyes again and again as he went before the footlights to start the audience into roars of laughter. All that evening the people in the theatre before and behind the scenes were laughing and crying with him. Nearly two and a half years before, when Mr. Lauder was touring in Australia, his son came fresh from his studies at Cambridge to join him and Mrs. Lauder. The boy arrived on August 2. Two days later a cable came from England when they were at breakfast. It said, "Mobilize; return and report to depot at earliest. —War Office."

"John" was at that time in a Territorial regiment. "What do you think of that, dad?" said the boy. And the father spoke like thousands of other fathers must have spoken on that day. "Well, my boy," he said, "if you go you will do your duty by your father and mother.

"Always a Vacant Chair"

"If you go out to the front, while you are absent there will be a vacant chair. If you do not come back there will still be that chair kept for you."

Later he was given a commission and went out to the front, and got wounded at Festubert and sent home. He recovered and went back again, and one day was found unconscious from shell-shock and later developed pleurisy.

All For His Heir

"They say I'm a mean man," said his father, "but I was saving it all for the boy." His friends say that he has saved $700,000. It was all for John. John had everything that a boy could wish for. He had the best education and he did not disappoint his father. He had motor cars, and he travelled on the continent a great deal. The beautiful estate in Scotland that his father bought was all for his boy.

At Cambridge the boy thrashed a bigger fellow for sneering at his father for being a comedian. The boys were great friends afterwards. John at one time thought of going to the Bar, but after the life in the trenches he said he felt he could not take up a book again, but that he would settle down on the land with the girl to whom he was engaged.

HABITS AND CUSTOMS OF INDIA'S RACES

The population of India, says a London paper, is far more diverse than is generally thought. They talk about 150 different languages, and are divided up into forty three distinct nationalities. There are 2,378 main castes besides a large number of sub-castes. There are 200,000,000 Hindus, from which, fortunately, we can draw fighting men; 60,000,000 Mohammedans, while among the Hindus there are 50,000,000 or degraded people of no caste, whose touch, or even shadow, is supposed to cause pollution. The girls are of all sorts, bright little things with pounds' worth of gold ornaments round their necks and arms and in their ears and noses. These are Brahman children, who must be married before they are ten, and are then kept secluded in their mothers' homes till the final marriage ceremonies are complete, when they are passed on to the houses of their mothers-in-law.

Native Hindu Grace

A Brahman or Hindu girl has refined features, and in figure is what the French call petite. Their carriage is erect, their limbs are beautifully moulded, and their every action is graceful. With regard to families, twenty people will frequently live in the same house dependent on a solitary wage-earner. Limited in number but mighty in influence are the Parsees, who hold the wealth of Bombay in the hollow of their hands and dwell in the loveliest mansions around the coast. They conform to European customs, and live as much like Europeans as it is possible for a coloured race. They build hospitals and colleges after the European manner.

Sun Worshippers

Parsee women are not merely well educated, but as free to travel and to mix with men as the women are of an alien race. Yet these people, the Jews of India as they have been called, still worship the sun, and in their Towers of Silence lay out their dead to be devoured by the birds of the air. The reason is that they refuse to defile the elements of earth, fire, and water with dead bodies, and so deliver them up to be torn to pieces by the vultures.

FOR SLEEPLESSNESS

Treat sleeplessness calmly; recognize that it means nothing to the man who is sound. Also, return to simple meals. For breakfast, at eight, and supper, two small ripe apples, grated with the skin and mixed with oatmeal, a dessertspoonful of sweet condensed milk, and some ground nuts, to form a substantial plate of porridge. In addition, wholemeal bread and butter, or fat bacon, and a cup of all milk coffee free from caffeine. Oranges, bananas, plums, and other fruits can be substituted for apples. For dinner, at one o'clock, daintily-cooked vegetables, two or more kinds or a savory made of vegetables and cereals; fruit, milk, or any nourishing and agreeable pudding, followed by lettuce (always lettuce) and salad oil, fresh fruit, and nuts. No alcohol, no tea. This diet—no further drink will be needed—will mean health, sleep and something to live for.—Tit-Bits.

PARKER A CANADIAN

Novelist and Politician Enjoyed Chequered Early Career

Gilbert Parker, who attained prominence in British politics as well as widespread fame as a writer of fiction, was born in 1862 in Camden East, Ont. The gifted knight of the pen is the son of Joseph Parker, a non-commissioned officer of the British army who settled in Canada. After completing his education at the Ottawa Normal School and Trinity College, Toronto, he emigrated to Australia for the benefit of his health. It was many years ago that he landed in Sydney and found his first profitable employment for his pen as a member of the editorial staff of the Sydney Morning Herald. While "down under" he wrote a play or two for the Australian stage, and an acting version of "Faust," but his efforts toward the elevation of the drama were not brilliantly successful. He travelled extensively among the South Sea Islands and published a volume of travels.

It was upon his return to his native Canada that the young author discovered the human material which inspired his first important work of fiction. The Metis and half-breeds of the Northwest, among whom he spent some time, were incorporated in his first novel, "Pierre and His People," which was published in Toronto in 1893. Several other works of fiction dealing with French-Canadian life followed and achieved for the novelist an international reputation. In 1895 he married Miss Amy Vantine, a New York heiress, and subsequently settled in London, becoming a Unionist member of Parliament in 1900, and a knight in 1902.

HONOR GOOD ROADS HEAD

Sam R. Henderson of Manitoba Was Seven Years President

Three hundred lusty male voices were lifted in cheering, 600 hands gave one lengthy burst of concentrated applause, and 300 Manitoba men stood on their feet and almost raised the roof off Manitoba Hall in singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," when Sam R. Henderson, for seven years president of the Manitoba Good Roads Association, formed the embarrassed central figure of one of the most pleasing events in the history of the Association. President Henderson was presented with a costly, heavily jewelled and suitably engraved gold watch in recognition of his record of valuable service as the chief executive officer of the Association, being taken completely by surprise at the annual banquet of that body.

A stands for Attaboy! yelled o'er the

When a player produces the best that he's got;
It stands, too, for Anger, and critics take note—
It's the umpire's fault, because he gets our goat.

When Ty Cobb showed up in New York recently for his first bow before the fans there this season, he found out that these well-known baseball enthusiasts have a long memory. Cobb's attention was several times called in no uncertain fashion to the rumpus he had with Charlie Herzog and the Giants during the spring training trip. It will take Ty a long time to get over what he heard, and he will perhaps have learned that fans are loyal to their team, come what may—at least, they won't stand for anybody abusin' 'em except themselves.

The weather has certainly played havoc with the baseball schedules this year. Up to a very short time ago Richmond was the only city in the major and minor leagues that had not had a game postponed on account of the rain.

Ladies and Gentlemen! Your attention is invited for an inspection of Nick Cullop, a well-known Yankee back-stop. It's a curious kind of ball that gets by Nick these days, and it looks as though that eminent gentleman were out for a record.

There is considerable pep in the Toronto team of the International League Wise ones say that this team is just about getting into the best form, and will take some beating in the final grab for the pennant. If you don't believe it ask Queen City fans.

As for the Montreal team of the same league, lack of organization and strabismus of the batting eye seem to be the reasons for its position. Individually the players class up pretty fair, but the machine needs gearing up.

Optimistic Oscar says: "Falling overboard isn't half as dangerous as being in the trenches. Before you drown you come up three times for air; come up once in the trenches and a sniper gets you."

Over in Australia they believe they have found another Les Darcy in Tommy Uren, the new middleweight champion who recently defeated Jimmy Clabby and Eddie McGoorty. However, our Australian friends shouldn't be too optimistic about Uren just because he beat these two boxers. Everybody knows that Clabby, as well as McGoorty, are more or less back numbers, and were fast descending the ladder even when Darcey beat them. One doesn't like to speak ill of the departed, but the suspicion is rapidly growing that Darcey would not have lasted very long if he had been permitted to meet some of the foremost ring artists in America with whom he anxiously sought bouts.

There once was a sculptor named
Phideas,
Whose knowledge of art was invidious;
He carried Aphrodite
Without any nightie,
Which startled the very fastidious.

Racegoers are having their troubles these days, particularly those who like to do a little betting on the horses—didja ever see a racegoer who didn't like to? Well, anyway, here's what they're up against in many states where the horses may run for wagers are forbidden except when they are made orally. This kind of bet is permitted, for instance, in New York. But the trouble is that these wagers canont be settled inside the track enclosure. So the racegoers are asking themselves why is it that if an oral bet is legal, it isn't legal to pay it? And on the other hand, if an oral bet is legal, why is a cash bet illegal? Of course nobody can answer such questions, especially not those in authority. It would seem to the ordinary individual not engaged in seeking to chloroform his conscience that a bet is a bet whether it is made verbally, in cash, or by promissory note or in any other manner. If betting is permitted let it be done openly. It it is illegal, then let the law be enforced against betting of every kind.

Otto Knabe, former manager of the Baltimore Federal League team, and prior to that, star second sacker of the Philadelphia Nationals, will celebrate his thirty-second birthday tomorrow. He was born in Garrick, Pa., and started playing professional ball in the Western League with Colorado Springs and Pueblo in 1905. He then went to the Pirates, but was turned over to the Toledo team of the American Association. After a season with this club he returned to Pittsburg, but was immediately exchanged for Camnitz, of Philadelphia. When the Federal league was organized he was made manager of the Baltimore club.

1901. — Austim Rice defeated Tommy Feltz in 20 rounds at New Britain, Conn. This bout was declared to involve the bantamweight championship, which had been in dispute since 1898. Rice was never recognized as champion. This honor went to Harry Harris, who had defeated Pedlar Palmer in England a short time before.

1905.—Stanley Ketchel knocked out Kid Fecor in 5 rounds at Butte, Mont.

1909.—Ad Wolgast knocked out Tedy Peppers in 10 rounds at Kansas City.

LAWN BOWLING

Season Opened With Bright Prospects Yesterday

Who said the lawn bowling club was dead? Several have thought so, but with these spring days of June it has sprouted out most encouragingly, and any person who attended the meeting last night would say it is still a very much alive institution.

It has been the privilege of the writer to attend many of the spring organization meetings, and for numbers and enthusiasm there has been nothing in the past to equal it.

Some have said that during these war times the money could be better employed elsewhere. Well, there have been people who have said the same thing since the days of "the box of alabaster ointment" down to the present, but the man who works all day, no matter what his avocation may be, can have more healthful enjoyment and for less money than even motoring. And who will say that man does not need such relaxation?

The "green" has come through the winter in splendid shape, and you should waste no time in calling up the president, Mr. Brightman, or the vice-president, Dr Hammond, or the secretary, Mr. Walter Oke so that the rinks may be made up and ready to start with the good weather.

RUSSIAN ARMY AGAIN ACTIVE

ARTILLERY SET FIRE TO A VILLAFE AND DESTROY SUPPLIES.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, June 12.—An official statement issued today by the Russian war department says: Our batteries on the western front shelled the village of Merrishkia three miles north of Tvereth and caused a big fire. The military staff of the enemy quartered there fled pursued by our artillery. Near the village of Nikovitchi southwest of Pinsk our artillery successfully sheled an assemby of wagons and explosions were heard. On the rest of this front there were fusilades in certain sectors.

JUDGE HUYCKE SAYS CANADA

The attention of the jury was directed to the cases of a criminal nature that would come before them and the law as it applied to each case clearly explained.

The Grand Jury were asked to visit as many of the public institutions as possible and to report any extravagance or cases of meanness or neglect that might come to their notice.

Judge Huycke stated that he had received a request from the Attorney General to discourage as far as possible jury cases and acting on this he was going to cut off the jury notice in all civil cases and if he could not get an agreement to try them without a jury, he would enlarge them until the fall.

The criminal cases would have to be tried by jury and would be first disposed of in order that the Petit Jurors could return to their homes.

Referring to the war Judge Huycke was of the opinion that the people of this country had not taken the matter seriously enough. It had not dawned on them yet what it meant to the British Empire and to humanity. They were fiddling with the liberty of humanity and Canada was still fiddling. Of all the colonies Canada had been the least active and in spite of this the Canadian boys were covered with glory. Three names were inseparaby connected with the name Canada, Ypres, Courcelette and Vimy Ridge.

He was proud of the boys who had fought for and maintained the dignity of Canada and thought it was a shame and a disgrace that reinforcements were not being sent to relieve them after so long a seige of hardship in the trenches.

FARM RECRUITS HOLD SOCIAL

SOLDIERS OF SOIL HAVE A REUNION AT NICHOLLS OVAL.

A very enjoyable time was spent at the Nicholls Oval Saturday evening, when the boys of the County of Peterborough, who are helping to win the war by assisting the farmers of the county to produce more food, gathered to receive the badges presented by the Ontario Government for their loyalty to their country in helping to produce more food at this critical time.

The programme opened with a baseball match, Farmers' Sons vs. City Boys. The game was very evenly contested up to the 4th period, then the Farmers' Sons got their tillery working to perfection, and it kept the city boys busy chasing the ball to all quarters of the field.

At the end of the game the official scorer announced the score, Farmers sons 10, City boys 7.

The farmers sons had imported two outsidesr for the game, namey, H. W. Kingerely of the National Council Y.M.C.A., Toronto, and the Boys' Secretary of the local Y.M.C.A. which accounts for the terrible bombardment which took place in the 4th innings.

At 8 p.m. the boys and their parents and friends gathere around the big camp fire where songs were sung and a good social time was spent for a half hour. Mr. J. E. Smith, chairman of the boys work committee of the Peterboro Y.M.C.A., called on Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., to present the government badges to the boys. As Mr. Gillespie pinned the badges on the boys, he inquired how the boy was enjoying his work on the farm. The boys admitted that the work was hard, but was pleasant and it was doing them good.

Mr. H. W. Kingerely, representing the National Council of the Y. M. C. A., presented the Canadian standard efficiency tests, which is doing so much for the building up of the Canadian boys, and which is being used in connection with the food production campaign.

The very enjoyable and profitable evening came to a close at 9.30 with the singing of the National Anthem.

SERGT. VICTOR LAID OUT COLD

DR. ZELL HUNT DID TO HIM WHAT HUNS COULD NOT DO.

When Dr. Zell Hunt, the hypnotist, who is giving performances in the Grand Opera House, called for volunteers to submit to his tests last night, Sergt. Victor, a returned veteran, and three boys responded. These, with two young ladies who travel with Dr. Hunt, were put under the occult influence and made to perform just such antics as the doctor decreed. Sergt. Victor was put as completely to sleep as if he had been made the victim of a German gun, and lay helpless on the floor of the stage while one of the deluded maidens wept over him as a friend who had passed over the dark river.

The doctor is a marvel. He was born deaf, and yet can speak as well as anyone, and has no trouble in making out ordinary conversation by simply watching the lip movements of the speaker. He is a master of the art of hypnotism, something that so many people refuse to believe in for the simple reason that they cannot understand it. The most of people will be willing to admit the existence of lightning, though some cannot explain it. They know that it rarely strikes twice in the same place, and that it seldom needs to.

Dr. Hunt will continue the performance tonight, an outline of which is given in another column.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

TWOMEY—CURTAIN.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at St. Martin's Church, Ennismore, this morning at 6 o'clock between Johanna Curtain and Frederick Twomey. The bridesmaid was Clara Corkery and Edward Perdue assisted the groom. After the wedding breakfast at the Empress Hotel the happy couple left for points west, and on their return will reside in Ennismore.

Mrs. Corbett, of Cornwall, is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. A. Aylmer, of Weller Street.

Miss M. Archer, who has been visiting at Port Hope, has returned home.

Mrs. C. W. Balmer McAllister, High Prairie, Alta, and formerly of Peterboro, who was in Victoria during the National Chapter, I.O.D.E., sessions, has left for her home in the Peace River district. She met her husband at Edmonton, and was accompanied by him the remainder of the way northward. Mrs. McAllister's was one of the very interesting reports given at the National Chapter, showing what a Daughter of the Empire can do in one of the thinly populated outposts of the Dominion. The Municipal Chapter at High Prairie has raised over $400 since October, and every woman with the exception of two, and all the young people of the district are members. As there are no servants employed in this newly-opened part of the country, Mrs McAllister, who is regent of the chapter there, is particularly proud of her workers, who have organized so efficiently for work that they now send boxes to thirty-seven men who have gone from among them to serve with the Canadian forces overseas, also parcels of sox, tobacco and candy. They have a hall of their own and are combined in many patriotic undertakings. The executive of the National Chapter has extended special congratulations to Mrs. McAllister and her I.O.D.E. workers.

Miss Ethel McKee left this afternoon for Edmonton, Alta., where she will visit her sister, Mrs. Osborne, for some months.

Miss Alma Foote left per C.P.R. this afternoon for a visit to her sister in Moose Jaw, Sask.

Ottawa, June 13, (Special to Review.)--Sir Thomas White announces a measure leading to an income tax. This will satisfy public sentiment demanding the conscription of wealth as well as men. Capt. Burnham declares himself satisfied and will stick with party.

CAPT. BURNHAM TAKES SAME STAND ON CONSCRIPTION AS THAT TAKEN BY MR. BALFOUR

Ottawa Citizen Praises Member for West Peterborough for Breaking With Government---Says Borden's Bill is 'Inspired by Ideas of Autocracy.

(Special to The Review.)

OTTAWA, June 13. — The morning papers indicate that the Premier has been warned that his conscription bill does not go far enough, and it is said a provision will be made for an income tax by another bill which will relieve the situation and remove all objections to the Government's present form of conscription. The Citizen has the following article today:

Mr. Burnham and Mr. Balfour.

"While democracy is the battle cry of the Liberal allies, Canada is confronted with the possibility of being reduced to a abroad and through ignorance in abroad and through ignorance in high places at home. It is to the credit of Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P. for West Peterborough, that he refuses to be associated with the Government in any such narrow minded policy. In this Mr. Burnham is in good company, for there is more in common between Mr. Burnham's protest and Mr. Balfour's recent speech than between the Dominion Government and Mr. Balfour

Inspired by Autocracy.

"The whole message of Mr. Balfour to the Canadian House of Commons sounded this inspiring note. 'We have staked our last dollar upon democracy,' he said, 'and if democracy fails us we are bankrupt indeed. But I know that democracy will not fail us.' Mr. Balfour's message apparently passed completely over the head of the Dominion Government. Still, after three years of war, as in peace, under the hypnotism of German efficiency, the Prime Minister has

AN INSTRUCTIVE SESSION OF PETERBORO BAPTISTS

Stirring Addresses Dealing With Problems Engendered by the War---A Meeting Full of Interes: to Citizens in General.

Last evening's open session of the 115th annual convention of the Peterborough Baptist Association, in Park street Church, was of an exceptionally interesting and instructive character, not only to the clergy and laity present, but also to visitors of other denominations. It revealed a broad-minded interest in the nation's present and future welfare, and citizenship in general, worthy of emulation. The addresses were mainly based on existing and coming conditions engendered by the world-wide war, and the need for preparedness to meet with religious influence the many perplexing problems which will assuredly arise with the return of our brave defenders from the battle front of Europe.

Mr. T. F. Matthews presided over the proceedings in a very acceptable manner.

The work of the choir showed excellent training, and a quartette by the Misses Nicholls and Sandford and Messrs. Pacey and Gladman was exceedingly well rendered.

Addresses of Welcome.

Rev. D. Brown, pastor of the church, extended in fitting terms a warm welcome to representatives from the association's different churches and pointed out the present-day call for hard work in Christ's vineyard and the need for a lively realization that in unity there is strength. He was sorry not to be in a position to tender the freedom of the city, but hoped that would be offered through the Moderator before the convention closed.

Rev. Mr. Grobb conveyed the greetings of the Ministerial Association, which he characterized as a very agreeable band of Peterborough clergymen. "We don't talk here of Church Union," he said, "because we are blessed with something far more precious—"Church Unity." He congratulated the Baptists upon all that they had achieved during their 115 years of organization, and pointed out that they are now meeting under exceptional circumstances— the third year of a great war—the exigencies of which should dominate all their deliberations and mould all decisions. He wished them every success, and hoped that the gathering woud result in great profit to the great church to which all belong.

The Replies.

Rev. Mr. Smith, replying for the association, expressed unqualified appreciation of the cordial words of welcome extended the visitors, and congratulated Park Street Church on its splendid progress under the regime of Pastor D. Brown, to whose efficiency the conditions of the church and its growing influence all testified. To Mr. Grobb the reverend gentleman replied that he had yet in his travels to find a more sincere, cordial and genuine brotherhood than that of the Peterborough Ministerial Association.

Moderator's Address.

Mr. T. F. Matthews here delivered an exceedingly comprehensive and concise address on "The War and Our Work," dealing with the questions of adequately recognizing the debt we owe our soldiers at the front, how to repay our obligation to those who return, and the crying need for preparation to combat the industrial interruption and that measure of religious scepticism which is bound to follow the declaration of peace.

The meeting voted that this excellent address be published in The Canadian Baptist, and it will also be found in its entirety on another page of this issue.

GERMAN AIRPLANES BOMB LONDON AND 49 ARE KILLED

One Shell Struck School House and Ten Children Lost Their Lives---Fifteen in Aerial Fleet and One Brought to Earth by Air Craft Guns.

LONDON, June 13. — Enemy airplanes bombarded the east end of London this morning. The official statement says: Lord French reports that about fifteen hostile airplanes were heard crossing the east coast and passing in the vicinity of the Nores about 11 o'clock. They proceeded in the direction of London, separating when they had covered about half the distance. The east end of London has been attacked and bombed, but no reports have been received of casualties or damage done. Anti-aircraft guns of the London defences have been in action. A large number of airplanes are still up in pursuit.

In the Commons, Chancellor Bonar Law said 31 persons had been killed and 67 injured in the raid over London, as far as ascertained. A bomb struck a school house, killing ten children and injuring fifty. One German airplane is reported brought down.

The east end of London, in which live the city's poor, suffered heavily from the raid. Bombs fell in many congested districts, and while the number of casualties has not yet been ascertained, two hospitals report handling upwards of fifty cases, four of whom died and many of whom were seriously injured.

(Later Despatch.) — Up to the present 49 persons have been reported killed and 200 injured in the London area as a result of the German airplane raids this morning, says an official statement issued this evening by the government. The final casualty returns may show a greater total, the lists being incomplete. Several engagements occurred in the air, but the results at present are uncertain. Numerous bombs fell rapidly in the east end of London.

The raid over the city lasted about 15 minutes.

LOCAL EXECUTIVE TO MEET NEXT TUESDAY TO DEAL WITH LETTER OF CAPT. BURNHAM

Will Accept His Withdrawal, Ask Him to Resign Seat and Will Pass Resolution of Confidence in Government.

A meeting of the executive committee of the West Peterborough Liberal-Conservative Association will be held next Tuesday night to deal with the matter of Capt. Burnham's withdrawal as nominee of the party. It was at first intended to call the meeting for tomorrow night as the emergency justified prompt action but it was finally decided to postpone it until all the members could be given the opportunity to attend. A full attendance is requested. Whatever action may be taken by the committee it is almost certain that three separate matters will be disposed of.

Capt. Burnham will be taken at his word and his resignation as nominee accepted.

He will be asked to resign his seat in Parliament if he finds it impossible to support the Government in this crisis.

A resoluton will be adopted expressing unqualif'ed confidence in the Borden Administration.

In a situation such as exists at Ottawa today there is a feeling that a constituency so important as West Peterborough should not be either unrepresented or misrepresented. Capt. Burnham has declared that he will not support the conscription bill although he will not vote against it. He will remain neutral. Peterborough will not be satisfied with such a course on the part of the man chosen to represent them. The demand for conscription has been insistent in this city and now that the time has come to put it into effect the citizens are naturally anxious to be heard from and not have their request rendered of no effect, by the stand taken by the Federal member.

Premier Borden has been urged by local citizens to take up the very course that he has adopted now. It would be unfair to the Premier to leave him in the lurch when the test comes and to have no vote recorded in his support when the House decides the question.

The effort to bring about a coalition of the two parties in this riding will not be abandoned although there is little hope of ultimate success. Some of the officials in the patriotic league are in favor of it but there are partisans in the Opposition ranks who are not likely to listen to such a proposition. Coalition is no more in favor among them in local affairs than it is in national questions at Ottawa. The Government supporters are, however, ready to accept the issue with confidence in the result whenever the trial of strength comes.

LIBERALS TAKE ACTION.

(Special to The Review.)

OTTAWA, June 13.—An afternoon bulletin by The Citizen announces that the Liberals will bring down an amendment to the Borden Bill calling for conscription of wealth as well as men. It is said that the Government is now considering a similar measure.

TOO MANY CIVIL SERVANTS ARE ON OTTAWA PAY ROLL

Twelve Thousand Draw a Total of Twelve Millions in Salaries and Ten Percent Are Not Needed Says Conservative Member.

(Special to The Review.)

OTTAWA, June 13. That twelve thousand civil servants in Ottawa draw twelve million dollars a year and that ten per cent of these could very well be done without, was the statement put forward in the Commons yesterday by Mr. R. B. Bennett, of Calgary, in discussing the Civil Service Bill. He said there were too many efficient public servants outside of Ottawa who were not sufficiently paid. He mentioned the case of a wounded soldier, who was getting only $75 a month, on which to support a wife and family. "If the minister of finance," he said, "can find money to put 12,000 employes on a living wage basis he can find money to do likewise to outside employes."

He advocated taking hold of the civil service in Ottawa, and putting it on an efficient basis. How long, he asked, would the Minister of Finance put up with such conditions as existed at Ottawa amongst his employes when he was manager of the National Trust company.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 13, 1917

WITH THE PRESBYTERIANS.

THE OTTAWA CITIZEN devotes considerable space to the withdrawal of Captain Burnham as nominee of the Conservative party in West Peterborough and republishes in full his letter to President Moore. The Citizen says:

> Captain J. H. Burnham, Conservative M.P. for West Peterborough, has broken with the Government on the conscription issue and has sent a communication to the president of the West Peterborough Conservative Association, resigning as choice of the party in the riding as standard bearer at the next election. He gives the association in the riding free hand to act as they wish in the circumstances, reserving to himself the same status. He will not vote against the bill, but will not support it.
> Captain Burnham believes something more than a selective draft of man-power is necessary to put all of Canada's resources in the forefront of battle and also for the safety of the State at home. It is not fair, he holds, to make the masses contribute both the man-power and the money-power, while the "large quantities of idle property are left as before and the incomes of the rich also, both of which very largely escape."
> In other words, Captain Burnham stands, as he says, on the same ground as the Presbyterian General Assembly.

The Presbyterian Church, always on the lookout for the wanderer as it is, will gladly welcome Captain Burnham to its fold and give him a seat among the elect well up in front. The Captain has always been something of an unsettled spirit in the religious field, and has held original views on this as on other subjects of moment. His friends will be pleased if it transpires that he has settled upon a creed and found a spiritual haven at last

LET SIR THOMAS WHITE DO IT.

AT EVERY METHODIST Conference held in Ontario during the past week or two the speakers have declared for conscription, not only of the nation's manhood, but of its wealth. The General Assembly, the Parliament of the Presbyterian Church, now in session in Montreal, have taken the same stand. The sentiment seems to be unanimous throughout the country, and political leaders of both parties are at one on the issue. The Baptists' Association, now in session at the Park Street Church, have not yet formally taken the matter up, but at last night's session one of the leading speakers, ex-Mayor Urquhart, of Toronto, declared for conscription of both wealth and manhood.

Even if a government did not realize its duty of itself, it could not fail to read the signs of the times as indicated by the recent course of events. The man with money must be called upon to do his part, to make his sacrifice, just as is the man who has half a dozen sons of fighting age. The burden was unevenly adjusted under the voluntary system. It must be equally borne when the new order goes into force.

The matter of the conscription of wealth is for the financial department of the Government. Such a provision could not be incorporated in the Conscription Bill. The latter creates a necessity which it is the duty of Sir Thomas White to provide for, and he has hitherto met every demand that has been made upon his administration. No one has a right to assume that nothing will be done to conscript wealth, even though no announcement to the contrary was made when Premier Borden brought down his bill Monday. The policy of the Government has always been to say nothing until they are ready to act, and the probability is that the same policy has been adopted in this matter.

GRAFT AND GRAFTERS.

SIGNS ARE NOT LACKING that the work of the modern church is taking on new vigor. The pastors of two of the leading congregations in this city recently made graft and grafters the subject of their evening discourses and showed no mercy in their treatment of the one or the other. It was not always thus. It is not so long ago that the ministers flayed only the sinners of old, and let the present-day trangressor pursue his reckless career unchallenged.

It is apparent, however, that neither of the pastors in question understands the code of political ethics as it is generally observed, and that fact is the best guarantee that the ministers have been preserved unspotted from the world and its devious byways. The standard of morality set up for the guidance of private citizens is not supposed to be binding on those who are too often called, by courtesy alone, public servants.

In politics the honest man is generally regarded as the one who, if he is purchaseable, will not offer himself and his influence for sale to one side after he has already concluded negotiations with the other. To "stay bought" is supposed in that grade of society to be the highest possible brand of integrity.

Men hold high places in political parties for various reasons. Some are born leaders and possess magnetic influence over their fellows. Others are hard workers and successful organisers. Still others excel in oratory, and then there is the man with a turn for business, the man who can, in the parlance of the day, get "money out of a turnip" if the necessity arises. He holds his place in the councils of the party because he can supply the funds required in every political campaign, and these funds are raised in various ways.

It is an open secret that the contractor who secures work from any government, that the man who is the recipient of any substantial favor from the same source, is expected to "come across" with the needful when money is needed to keep that government in power. The contractor knows this when he puts in his tender, and adds the probable amount of his contribution to the total. It is not the contractor, but the taxpayers, who really put up the donation, subscription or whatever it may be called. There are objections to the method, but unfortunately these objections are not always based on morality. The real dissatisfaction with the plan is that members of the party on the outside naturally are averse to being made to pay through the nose to help keep their opponents in the affluence of office.

According to the code there are honest and dishonest grafters. The first is the man who conscientiously refuses to enrich himself at the public expense. All the money he collects is faithfully turned into the party bag. The other variety is more selfish, and part of the money that passes through his hands is appropriated for his personal use. Such a man has really no social standing, even among the men who profit by his manipulation.

The "grafter," as the modern minister appears to understand the term, would resent any insinuation to the effect that he is a man of no morals, provided he can measure up to the standard of the one first referred to above.

Political campaigns are, or should be, one of the greatest forces that can be employed to educate the people in matters that closely concern their temporal welfare. Money is required, money to be expended legitimately, for such purposes. It is all a question of raising it. Churches are supported by voluntary contributions. Men who are willing to give of their worldly possessions in support of their creed should not hesitate in extending the same material aid to their political faith. Voluntary contributions towards the expenses of an election campaign would tend to increase the popular interest and arouse the enthusiasm of the people. The elector who has money invested in the issue is certain to turn out and vote, as he has contributed, to bring success to his investment.

Levying assessments on contractors is, to say the least, questionable business policy. A congregation erecting a church would not be disposed to be liberal with the builder in the matter of extras and look for this extra allowance back in the way of a subscription to the general funds of the church, even though none but the members themselves were directly interested in the transaction.

WHY GERMANY FIGHTS ON.

THE MILITARY STRENGTH of Germany is being exhausted, slowly it may be, but none the less surely. Each succeeding drive by the British and their allies leave the Huns more exhausted than ever. Italy is forcing back the Austrian troops, and on every battle front the Central Powers are being worsted. Then why does Germany so stubbornly continue the fight that from this distance appears hopeless?

Germany cannot hope to win. Even the mad and blasphemous Kaiser must be convinced by this time that, with all the civilized powers on earth arrayed against him, he has no chance. He cannot hope for victory, but he probably carries on the struggle, while his people both in the trenches and at home suffer, on the chance that he can make better terms of peace with the Allies so that his own future will not be a total blank.

The Kaiser would probably lay down his arms at once if he received assurance that everything would be left as it was before the war, the status quo ante, as President Wilson calls it. Peace on such terms would be really a defeat for the Allies, as the very object of the war would not be attained. Even the United States is opposed to such an arrangement, and when peace terms are finally arranged it will likely be found that the Americans are as insistent as their European allies for a compact that will assure the future amity of the world. This will include the restoration of Alsace and Lorraine to France, the restoration of Belgium, autonomy for the dismembered Polish Empire, and such retribution as will keep Germany in place for all time.

That there can be no stable government without the consent of the governed is being demonstrated in every ag of the world.

PLENTY OF COAL NEXT WINTER

While anthracite is the cream of the coal world, soft coal is the steady stream which makes the wheels go. A Massachusetts legislative commission found that though nine companies, all closely associated with the railroads which control the anthracite coal of the nation, had made but slight increases in prices, practically all of it had been diverted to certain markets so that the consumer was forced to use bituminous coal, and the big price increase was put on him there.

As usual the consumer is told to economize. A statement credited to Edward N. Hurley is that half of the 600,000,000 tons used annually is lost through ineffective methods. Waste in thousands of grates from homes to factories makes a big increase above the absolutely necessary demand.

This year five railroad men under the Council of National Defense are directing the operation of the 250,000 miles of railroads in the United States. Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio, member of the advisory commission, says that there will not be any shortage of coal next winter. Hoarding of it now in localities which can be supplied then is forbidden. Ore boats which last year went up-lake empty now haul coal on every trip. It is being stored on water routes.

Railroads are in the midst of a serious shortage with no prospect of immediate relief on account of their inability to get any considerable supply of rolling stock from the shops. The rush has been increasing since September, 1915. It will be further increased when the government starts moving troops and their supplies.

Shippers are blamed for much of the shortage by not loading and unloading cars promptly. A shipper is allowed forty-eight hours "free time" after the "first 7 a.m." for loading or unloading after being notified by the railroad that the car is ready. If he is notified at 8 a.m. his "free time' starts at 7 a.m. the next day, giving him actually seventy-one hours. Since May 1 the demurrage charge for holding a car past the free time is $2 for each of the first five days and $5 a day after that. Until last December it was $1 a day. Figures for twelve months on 2,198 cars held more than two days show one held 123 days.

Last year $9,657,235 demurrage was collected by the railroads at $1 for every day exceeding two. Including the two days, that is equivalent to 28,971,705 cars for one day. In Germany the average time for loading or unloading is six hours, twelve at both ends of a run. In this country it averages four days. If German efficiency had been secured here, 14,485,852 of these cars might have been used for a day. Roads claim a car earns between $5.50 and $10 a day. At $7.25, by keeping these cars working, the roads would have received $105,022,427 instead of the $9,657,235 received for letting them stand still.

How to Increase Efficiency.

Strenuous efforts are being made by the executive committee of the American Railway Association, under the Council of National Defence, to increase the efficiency of the 66,500 locomotives and the 2,575,000 freight cars in America. In an appeal from Fairfax Harrison, chairman, now being sent to the railroads of the country, he shows on paper how to add the equivalent of 16,625 locomotives and 779,000 cars by increasing the work of the present equipment.

The average capacity of the nation's freight cars is 39.7 tons each, while the average load is 17 tons, or 43 per cent of their capacity. Saving in every line from smoke consumption to demurrage is urged.

SAVING ESSENTIAL TO VICTORY

More than half a billion dollars has been added to the national debt of Canada since the war began. Financial obligations are increasing with every day of the struggle. The need for thrift becomes more imperative every hour. In outlining the national measures essential to victory, Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George told Great Britain that "we shall need every man that we can put in the field every dollar that rigid private and public economy can provide and every effort which a united people can put forth" The words are as applicable to Canada as they are to the United Kingdom. The public must support the national savings campaign launched by the Government. "Serve by saving" should be the war rule of every man and woman in the Dominion. Canada needs every man that it can put in the field and every dollar the rigid private and public economy can provide. Save your dollars and purchase Government War Savings Certificates.

MASON'S MELODIES

Where'er the German soldier walks, destruction, like his shadow, stalks. He comes upon some old world town on which the ages have looked down, a town, perhaps, whose crumbling walls were builded by the ancient Gauls as a protection for their home against the conqueror from Rome. All legended and gray with age—the German wrecks it in his rage, and strews the storied buildings round, in blackened ruins, on the ground. The grand cathedral, which uprears, as it has done a thousand years, its noble steeple to the sky must in a heap of wreckage lie. Where'er the German soldier wends, all decent human feeling ends; should he advance or yet retire, he marks his path with death and fire. The kaiser throwws his men away: "Let them be slain, if they shall slay; advance, however great the loss and draw on me for one iron cross." This is the spirit of Red Bill: "What is the difference whom we kill, or what we ruin or deface, though we may shock the human race, so we have gained another trench, or foiled the British or the French?" This is the savage foe we'll meet—and batter till he owns defeat.

Presence of Mind

A shy young man had been calling for months on the sweetest girl in the world but being bashful, his suit languished. Finally she decided it was up to her to start something, so the next time he called she pointed to the carnation in his buttonhole, and said:

"I'll give you a kiss for that carnation."

The young man's color outdid the carnation in brilliancy, but the exchange was made. Then he grabbed his hat and started to leave the room.

"Why, where are you going?" she asked in surprise.

"To the florist's for more carnations," he called from the room.

A Warning

Before he attained to the front rank of his profesion, Fred Kitchen, the famous comedian, used to tour Europe in an acrobatic turn with a partner named Rayol.

One week they were at the Eldorado theatre Naples, and after the performance they went for a stroll along the famous embankment, known as the Waterfront.

"Prety soon," says Fred, in telling the story, "we reached a statue and, lo! it nodded gravely towards us."

"'Did you see the statue nod?' said my partner.

"'I certainly did,' said I.

"'Well,' said he, 'I'm going back to the hotel and to bed before I get run in. It's that confounded Capri wine.'

"So ashamed of ourselves back we went, and sneaked up to bed.

"But at breakfast time next morning both of us seemed to be amazingly fresh considering our dissipation of the night, and we could not understand why we had such good appetites until the waiter said:

"'Did the gentlemen feel last night's slight earthquake?'"

THE SILENT TOAST

(Chaplain Frederick George Scott, 1st Canadian Division.)

They stand with reverent faces,
And their merriment give o'er,
As they drink the toast to the unseen host
Who have fought and gone before.

It is only a passing moment
In the midst of the feast and song,
But it grips the breath as the wings of death
In a vision sweeps along.

No more they see the banquet
And the brilliant lights around,
But they charge again on the hideous plain
When the shell-bursts rip the ground;

Or they creep at night like panthers
Through the waste of No Man's Land,
Their hearts afire with a wild desire,
And death on every hand.

And out of the roar and tumult
Or the black night loud with rain,
Some face comes back on the fiery track
And looks in their eyes again.

And the love that is passing woman's
And the bonds that are forged by death
Now grip the soul with a strange control,
And speak what no man saith.

The vision dies out in the stillness;
Once more the tables shine,
But the eyes of all in the banquet hall
Are lit with a light divine.

The Cost of Living.

Dealing with the high cost of living, in Parliament, Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, had this to say:

"It is probably safe to say that thirty million men, if not a good many more, have been withdrawn from production work to engage in destructive work. It is said that those men consume at least fifty per cent. more than they would if they were civilians. That gives us the equivalent of 45,000,000 men consuming foodstuffs and producing nothing, withdrawn from productive labor and engaged in destructive labor. Before the war broke out there was just enough food grown to cover the world's consumption; we had not to throw any surplus food into the sea. Take 45,000,000 from producing; set them to destroy life and property; take that, in connection with the fact that last year, with slight exceptions in certain places, crops were short the world over, and with all this destruction and waste going on lessening production, and you have the main factors causing the advance in prices. Some people tell us that the rise in prices is due to cold storage and combinations. I admit that in some cases these things have had a slight influence on prices, but the main factors are those I have stated."

Girl Tried to Enlist.

Determined to avenge the killing of her two cousins and her wounded brother, an eighteen-year-old Ottawa girl donned male attire and applied at the base recruiting office a few weeks ago to be enrolled as a stretcher-bearer in the "Ammunition Column." The masquerade was discovered. Being compelled to admit her sex, she explained that she had tried to go overseas as a nurse, but could not take the necessary three years' course, and believed she would be accepted as a stretcher-bearer.

Amulets and Mascots.

"In respect to belief in magic, witchcraft, and the use of amulets and mascots, the war has occasioned a retrograde movement of two hundred years, and shown that the coating of refinement was very superficial," said Mr. Edward Lovett in a recent lecture at the Horniman Museum, Forest Hill. He attributed to the introduction of motoring, with its dangers, a revival in the belief in charms before the war. As to the effect of the war, he instanced that a child's caul, esteemed a safeguard against drowning, which a little over two years ago could have been bought for two shillings, recently sold for two pounds ten shillings—the increased price being due to the submarine. Nearly every man now fighting carried a mascot, usually beneath the clothing. In the case of the Russians, French, and Belgians these were generally of a religious character; the others were charms of substitution—the small image to divert the evil eye; the charms of "inoculation," such as fragments of enemy shell and symbolic amulets. Referring to the wooden statue of Hindenburg raised by the Germans and the driving into it of nails, he said it is remarkable that the Germans, great students of folk-lore, should be doing in such a case that which, according to folk-lore, was certain to bring the subjects to a disastrous end.

Peat in Dominion.

From 140,000 acres of peat recently discovered in one district in Canada it is estimated that 115,000,000 tons of fuel could be procured. Deposits of peat in Montreal and Ontario districts are said to be capable of yielding 50,000,000 tons.

"Indian Red."

Dogwood was the source of the "Indian red" with which the warriors at one period dyed their eagle feathers and buckskin clothes. They procured the dye from the roots of the tree.

THE KITCHENETTE

But City Women Like These Real Playhouse Arrangements.

BE SCRUPULOUSLY CLEAN.

How to Hide Your Entire Cooking Outfit in a Nutshell, to Say Nothing of a Bureau Drawer or the Washstand, Is the Modern Problem.

When arranging these little dollhouse cooking places one should condense arrangements in every possible manner. If a closet with a window is used all the better, as the opening will provide draft for smells, and the closet can be got up a good deal in a regular kitchen manner. There could be the white paint that cleans so easily, a brick red linoleum and white enameled shelves set with an array of cooking vessels and attractive crockery utensils for holding the things of the larder. If much cooking goes on an icebox is indispensable, and the portable nursery ones are just the sort to get, as these are very small, although generous enough for the use of two persons. A coffee pot, three earthenware casseroles, a double boiler, two saucepans and two of the little French plats of frying pans are enough furnishings for a modest closet kitchenette. If the householders are tea drinkers the tea table, with all the apparatus used, could stand in the living room and so leave still more space in the kitchenette.

These little makeshift kitchens, which women of domestic tastes have caused to be introduced into the smartest apartments, are the inspiration for wonderful inventions in the way of cooking conveniences. One is a baker which seems to have been devised at the first period of the metal age—a simple perforated tin plaque lined with something or other and topped with a heavy tin cover in one piece. On this minute thing almost anything small enough to go under the cover can be baked to a T, potatoes especially well. An omelet pan, folding at the center so that the goody itself does not have to be turned, a glass coffee grinder and pepper and salt casters with two and three bottles are among the other handy things.

Business women are given to putting their kitchenettes in odd places, in bureau drawers, washstands, in the space a door between rooms sometimes gives, and so on. But if the little space used is fitted up compactly and kept neatly it may be anywhere. One thing is certain—the kitchenette adds to the joy of life. It is, above all, the cure open to the woman away from home for homesickness and folly. But one must learn to cook, of course.

Hats are this season particularly lovely, and the fabrics and materials used do much to contribute to their charm. This means, of course, that it will be comparatively easy to obtain hats that harmonize with the rest of one's garments.

WHY WOMEN WRITE LETTERS

To Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co.

Women who are well often ask "Are the letters which the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. are continually publishing, genuine?" "Are they truthful?" "Why do women write such letters?"

In answer we say that never have we published a fictitious letter or name. Never, knowingly, have we published an untruthful letter, or one without the full and written consent of the woman who wrote it.

The reason that thousands of women from all parts of the country write such grateful letters to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives, once burdened with pain and suffering.

It has relieved women from some of the worst forms of female ills, from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, nervousness, weakness, stomach troubles and from the blues.

It is impossible for any woman who is well and who has never suffered to realize how these poor, suffering women feel when restored to health; their keen desire to help other women who are suffering as they did.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Sleepy Time Story About an Always Welcome Spring Visitor.

AN OLD AMERICAN LEGEND.

How an Indian Maiden Rescued a Handsome Young Warrior From a Wicked Magician—A Strange Race In the Forest Destroys a Sorcerer.

Well, said Uncle Ben to little Ned and Polly Ann, this evening I am going to tell you about

THE BLUEBIRD.

As you know, the bluebird is one of the first birds that come to us in the spring.

According to the old Indian story, the first bluebird was a brave, a young man who had been changed by a wicked magician into a bird with red and blue feathers just like the bluebird. He was to be a bird until some beautiful maiden would consent to marry him.

One day Minda, a young Indian girl whose father and six brothers had all been killed by a bad magician, was out in the forest gathering sticks. The bluebird flew down to the branch of the tree beside her, and Minda, who had never seen a bluebird before, admired it. She was astonished when the bird spoke to her, telling her that he was a young man, who had been turned into a bird. He asked Minda to marry him. Though at first she would not agree, she at last became his wife. After that the hut in the woods where Minda and her mother and little brother lived was always warm and comfortable, for the bluebird, who had now become a handsome young brave, hunted and fished and brought wood for the fire.

One day the old magician called and asked the young man to run a race with him. That was the way he had killed Minda's father and brothers. Minda and her mother were frightened when the young man agreed to race with the old magician.

The next day they all went to the lake where the magician lived.

Now, it always happened that whoever lost a race to the old magician came rushing in at the end, knocked his head against a stone post and dropped dead. So the young man ran his best and was as swift of foot as the old man. The magician then changed himself into a fox and passed the young man. The young brave then changed himself into a bluebird and got in front of the old magician. The magician next turned himself into a wolf, then into a deer, then into a buffalo. After that he was unable to take on any new forms, and the young man, who was now bird and now man, won the race, and the bad old magician ran his head into the stone post.

"My work is done," the young brave said to his friends. "I must leave you. Only my bride may go with me."

Then he and Minda, his wife, were changed into bluebirds, and they flew away, singing as they went.

And they were the first bluebirds. Since then, so the Indians say, bluebirds have always been seen on earth to cheer the heart of man each year with their promise of the banishment of that cruel old magician, Winter.

And if you will listen to their songs you will hear them caroling their promise, "Tru-ly, tru-ly!"

World's Largest Flagstaff.

A huge log 250 feet long and weighing eighteen tons was recently transported from British Columbia to London to be erected as a flagstaff in Kew gardens.

Upon its arrival in London a number of cranes, operating simultaneously, slid the timber free from stanchions and deck houses and dropped it into the water, where a line was secured to its butt to tow it up the Thames river to Kew, where it was erected.

WRONGDOING.

If society is to be further uplifted, if it is to be kept from slipping back, it must hold firmly to the right of saying that wrong is wrong, no matter who commits it or how guilty others may be. If there can be no responsibility and no condemnation till we get a perfect world there can be no way of holding the world up to the level which it has already reached.

Really Antique.

An excellent plaster of paris cast may be seen in one of the Egyptian galleries of the British museum of the famous sycamore statuette known as the "Sheikh-el-Beled," or "Village Sheikh." The original dates from 3900 B. C. and is still in perfect condition, although it is the oldest known specimen of woodcarving. It represents an overseer of the workmen engaged in building the pyramids close to Sakkarao, where it was discovered.—London News.

No Pure Water.

Owing to the extremely solvent powers, pure water is never found in nature, the nearest approach being found in rainwater, which, as it is formed in the upper regions of the atmosphere, is the purest that nature supplies, but in descending it brings with it whatever impurities are floating near the surface, which in the neighborhood of cities are always numerous; hence perfectly pure water is hardly to be found, even the artificially distilled being only approximately so.

Fishing That Is Not Sport.

One way of catching herring is by driving nails into a board so that they stick out several inches. The boards are then dragged through the shoals, and the fish catch between the nails and are pulled by the boardful into the boats. In one year more than a million pounds of herring were caught at Prince Rupert and frozen by the cold storage plants to be sold for bait. Something like 125,000 pounds of codfish are annually taken for the same purpose.—Christian Herald.

SLACKERS ARE WORRIED.

Find Themselves Between the Devil and the Deep Sea.

Miss E. Cora Hind, correspondent of the Montreal Journal of Commerce, and agricultural editor of the Manitoba Free Press, is, and deserves to be, esteemed a perfectly trustworthy authority on all manner of farming affairs in West Canada. As travelling inspector and estimator of preparations and crops of all kinds, including cattle, she has been accustomed for years to beat the band of male rivals. Of late she has been touring Alberta and Saskatchewan. She reports a season backward by reason of an unusually hard winter, but soil in good condition generally, and with abundant moisture to carry seed wheat, etc., forward to the rainy time of June. There the one adverse factor was a notable shortage of labor, which has been amended in a way that can't but interest observant people. The wise lady, dating from Calgary, says in the Journal of Commerce, "The fact that the United States has entered the war, and that there is every prospect of conscription in that country, has materially helped the labor situation in Western Canada. Numbers of Americans, who rushed away from Canada when the National Service cards began to circulate, are now rushing back again, fearing conscription in the States. They are between the Devil and the Deep Sea, but they seem to have decided that the Devil of National Service in Canada is less to be dreaded than the Deep Sea of Conscription in the U. S. A. Canadian Government officials are not saying much, but they have the number of many of these weak-kneed patriots."

Also she reports that high prices of grain in the States, which are now open to receive Canadian wheat free of customs taxation, will increase production in West Canada, one evidence of which is the suddenly increased demand and prices for heavy work-horses in that region. People throughout both the Republic and the Dominion are now "all in one box" in respect of being alike threatened with a serious shortage of necessary food next winter. Against which danger they are alike to be insured, as far as possible, by increase of production in any and every region of either country. Since the coming crop is to be pooled, big yield anywhere will more than usually tend to ease supply everywhere within the pool.

Another effect of the Republic's war policy is advantageous to Canada, inasmuch as some forty thousand young "slackers" of this country, who skipped to the States for fear of conscription, are now reported to be hurrying back to hard work for high wages at home. Here they can be safe from "the draft."

Somewhere Else.

Two French Canadian citizens were travelling down a river in a houseboat. One of them knew the river and the other did not. They anchored for the night on a bar. Along toward daylight the craft went adrift. Three hours later the motion awoke one of the travellers. He poked his head out of the door. An entirely strange section of scenery was passing. "Baptiste, Baptiste!" he yelled "Get up! We ain't here!" His comrade roused himself and looked out. "No, by gar!" he said, "we're twelve miles from here."

BOARD OF HEALTH ISSUES FINAL WARNING TO MEN WHO SELL MILK

Some Offered for Sale is Below Average and if This Continues Names of Offenders Will be Published.

The Peterborough Board of Health met last evening when there were present Ald. Duncan (chairman) Dr. Amys, M.O.H., A. Murty, and Sanitary Inspector Stapleton.

The report of the expenses of the Queen Mary Hospital for the month of May was received. It also showed the amount expended since the first of the year.

Queen Mary Hospital Expenditures

	During May	Total
Drugs and medicines	$21 00	$75 94
Groceries and provisions	93 17	276 66
Light	5 00	23 87
Salaries	128 26	765 82
Telephone		23 20
Water		30 00
Incidentals	24 49	96 68
	271 92	1312 17

Miss Reid, the Superintendent of the Hospital, also reported that during the month of May four cases of contagious diseases had been treated and all had recovered and been discharged. One of the cases was menengitis. There were no cases in the institution on June 1st.

Milk Tests.

Sanitary Inspector Stapleton presented a report of the milk tests made during May and some of the milk was found to be very close to the minimum allowance of butter fat. This will be the last opportunity that the milkmen who are serving their customers with a lower grade of milk than the average will have as the board intend to publish the result of the next tests. It is only fair that the dairymen who a serving milk of high grade should get the benefit of the expense they have incurred in improving their herds. Some of the milk tested as high as 4.90 while one was as low as 2.90 and others around 3.00 which is the minimum.

Want Increase in Salary.

Miss Reid asked for an increase of $100.00 per year and she also asked that Miss Spears be given an increase.

The applications will be taken up at the next meeting of the Board.

Must Get Licenses.

Many of the store keepers are under the misapprehension that they can sell bottled milk without a license. Any vendor of milk must obtain the necessary permit from the City Clerk.

Enforce the Dog Bylaw.

The City Council will be asked to arrange for a more strict observance of the Dog Bylaw. There are a great many dogs running at large and the M.O.H. attributes the recent case of rabies to the stray dogs.

CROSSED OCEAN IN A FORTNIGHT ON GERMAN SHIP

BUT IT IS NOW USED BY GREAT BRITAIN AS TRANSPORT.

"We had to wait for many months to get a ship to take us back to Canada, even after our passports were given us, and we were all glad to get back here," said the spokeswoman for a party of soldier' wives who reached Kingston after fifteen days' voyage and train journey from Liverpool. They report an eventful voyage across the Atlantic. They came over in what was formerly a German passenger ship, one of those which was interned in the United States when war broke out which has since been converted into a transport ship by the allies. Her name, either as a German ship or as a converted transport, was not disclosed to the passengers, who were told but little on their way across.

They had but forty hours to prepare for the voyage after being notified that they might sail, but they did not let that stop them. They were anxious to get home, and hurried their preparation, and seemed relieved to reach the city late on Saturday afternoon.

According to what could be learned from them during the brief stay at the station conditions in England in the line of foodstuffs is only fairly good The new rationing rules are in force, and in some lines of produce the people are allowed only stated amounts Prices are high for all kinds of produce and foodstuffs, and the people realise that their safety depends on a course of the most rigorous saving of everything in the line of food.

WILL GET GRAVEL FOR ROAD WORK BY PROCEEDINGS

TO EXPROPRIATE MATERIAL NEEDED IN N. MONAGHAN.

The adjourned meeting of the North Monaghan Court of Revision was held at the Court House, Peterborough on Monday evening, June 11. All the members of the court were present, with Mr. R. A. Dobbin in the chair. The appeal of the Brinton Carpet Company was heard. Mr. B. D. Hall, representing the company, said that the land was assessed too high, the buildings and business assessment too high. He claimed that the portion of land sewn in grain and used for agricultural purposes should not be assessed for business tax. (The business assessment of this company has been used for school purposes only).

Moved by Mr. Rye, seconded by Mr. Bell that the gross assessment of the company be $30,700.00 for school purposes, etc., and that the fixed assessment of the company for 1917 be $10,000.00; that on account of the company using about six acres of their land for agricultural purposes their business assessment shall be levied only on the portion of land occupied and used for business purposes, namely two acres. This is a reduction of $4,500 in the assessment for school purposes only.

Moved by Mr. Williams, seconded by Mr. Bell that the assessor make the necessary change in the assessment of lots 115 and 116 plan 48, assessed to Israel Payne, but now owned by H. B. and W. E. Taylor.

Moved by Mr. Rye, seconded by Mr. Bell that the Court of Revision adjourn and that the assessment roll be hereby confirmed.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Dobbin, seconded by Mr. Bell that Mr. Williams and Mr. Henry be a committee to see Mr. Waldron, and try to make arrangements to get gravel from him. Also that if they cannot make satisfactory arrangements to get the gravel that proceedings be taken to expropriate whatever quantity is needed for road purposes.

Moved by Mr. Dobbin, seconded by Mr. Henry that Mr. George Moncreif, road commissioner for Division No. 5, be authorized to build and repair the culvert mentioned in the high court's decision in the Lockie case; that Mr. Moncrief purchase cedar timber and build the east culvert, and also the culvert on the disputed road, also that he do any necessary repairs to the west culvert.—Carried.

WE MUST PREPARE TO MEET THE AFTERMATHS OF WAR

Mr. T. F. Matthews Deals in a Masterly Manner With the Perplexing Problems Engendered by Present Great Struggle---Must Prepare for All Eventualities.

The following is a verbatim report of the splendidly appropriate and timely address delivered by Moderator T. F. Matthews last evening at the 115th Annual Meeting of the Peterborough Baptist Association, in Park Street Baptist Church. It reveals a commendably thoughtful and comprehensive study of the perplexing problems which now face Canada, and with which we shall have to grapple with increasing force at the conclusion of the war. The address needs no comment; it speaks for itself, and should appeal to all citizens alike, irrespective of party or creed.

THE WAR AND OUR WORK

Ministers and Brethren of the Baptist Church.

It was with feelings of considerable diffidence that I accepted the honorable position of Moderator of this association and it is now with similar feelings that I rise to say a few words on such an important subject as "The War and Our Work." It is a subject that opens such tremendous possibilities that no man—and indeed no body of men—could pretend to do more than feel their way along, perhaps what may be termed "unknown paths," because in the history of the world there has been no war of such magnitude as the present one, embracing as it does such a large percentage of the important nations of the world, and creating such vast religious, political and financial problems that have been hitherto unheard of Being, therefore, cognizant of certain of these problems that have to do with our religious and social life, is it not our duty to endeavor to boldly face the situation as we find it and try to evolve from it all just where our responsibility rests and what means should be adopted to meet the obligations thereby imposed.

At the outset one is confronted with the thought that the question naturally divides itself into two main headings—"What are we at present doing for our soldiers at the front, and how are we preparing to receive them at the close of the war," and "What are we doing to preserve the ideals and traditions of the Christian Church in order that our country may be the better on account of the war?"

Splendid Work

In so far as the first heading is concerned I believe that there must be a consensus of opinion that all the various branches of the Christian Church have done and are continuing to do a splendid work. It would be invidious to make comparisons when all denominations are straining every nerve to help our soldiers and brighten their lot with Christian ministrations and material comforts. But this, after all, is the easiest task that the church has to face; the harder task will come when our soldiers, freed from the strain and stress of warfare, return home and themselves faced with the temptations of the world, unsettled to some extent by their experiences and by the knowledge that those of us who have remained at home are indebted to them by an obligation that can never be adequately repaid The problems in connection with the returning soldiers are many, and will require the best wisdom of the wisest men, and in this connection it is our first duty to see that those soldiers who have been wounded or otherwise incapacitated in this great fight for liberty and democracy are treated as men, and are given such aid as a grateful country should hand out to them. We shall have to learn many things before we can put ourselves in the position of acting as teachers. Amongst other things we shall have to acknowledge the very salient fact that the trenches are in some features rivals of the churches. In a certain sense they are producing more genuine religion than many of our churches can furnish The explanation is not far to seek: a hum-drum and easy-going life, even if half of it is spent in the church or the cloister, is not as likely to bring forth all man's superior attributes in the same way that a daily struggle with death will do. Is not the strenuous life, carried out under right ideals, the only life that leads to godly living: and does not the old saying, "Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do" still stands? It is, therefore, our privilege and our duty to "Keep the home fires burning," and be ready to welcome home the returning heroes. But we must accept the phrase, "keep the home fires burning," in a large sense and apply it to our homes, our business, our schools and our institutions in order that we may be worthy of those who have fought and returned and of those who have so nobly died for us.

Stupendous Problems

Before passing on to the second thought, may interject what appears to me as social and business problems, but which will appeal to the sympathies of the churches.

An English writer has stated that the stupendous problems will include:—

(a) Three women to two men of marriageable age.

(b) More old men than young men.

(c) More boys than workers in their prime.

(d) More physically unfit than physically fit.

(e) Millions of men to be fitted again into civil employment; millions of women who have learned men's work and have earned their wages.

(f) Millions of manual workers who will have become accustomed to wages twice or three times as high as they earned in pre-war days and who still expect these wages.

(g) Greatly diminished food supplies for many years owing to ravage of cultivated lands, diminished breeding stock and shortage of production.

(h) High commercial freights, dear imports and handicapped exports owing to shortage of ships.

These are only a few of the major problems that will confront Europe after the war. These will be also our problems perhaps in a lesser degree, but nevertheless serious problems that must be met by statesmen, religious leaders and others. As we sit here, there is in session at Winnipeg a large number of manufacturers who are discussing these same matters, and who will endeavor to formulate some plan whereby the returning soldiers will be taken care of and industrial interruption be reduced to a minimum. To me it is very evident that we will all have to exercise considerable patience during the period of re-adjustment that must come after the war. No nation in the world has survived the evils that flow from a badly governed prosperity. I would refer you to Rome, Egypt, Greece and Persia. The war has made this whole North American continent prosperous beyond the wildest dreams, and adverse trade balance has been turned into a tremendous balance in our favor, but let us be warned in time. We are indifferent wardens of our wealth, lavishing it with a generous hand on material things and all to sparsely on those that tend to the spiritual uplift of the people.

This perhaps bears on what I termed in the beginning of these remarks as the second main heading, "What are we doing to preserve the ideals and traditions of the church in order that our country may be the better on account of the war." I fail to find a satisfactory solution for the problem, for as yet we do not know what will happen.

German Barbarity.

Dr. John Clifford on January 15 last used these words in his address, the subject being "The Spirit of the World":—

"I must remind you that never was that spirit more fiercely tried than in 1916. Two years and a half are passed, and we are still in the furnace, and the flames are hotter than ever. The foe is still in the field and on the sea and in the air; still ruthless, brutal, defiant of all international law and every dictate of humanity. The roar of the tumult still sounds in our ears; the tragic sacrifices rend our hearts, vast populations of women and children are wandering foodless and homeless. Villages are pillaged, homes are shelled, shattered and burnt, hideous and obscene savageries are perpetrated, thousands of inoffensive and innocent dwellers in Belgium are carried into hateful slavery in a strange land; myriads of sufferers cry "How long, Lord, how long; we are compassed about with a great night, we do not know what to do; our eyes are lifted up unto Thee."

The condition, as outlined by Dr.

Acting Sergt. "Jiddie" Miller Writes Interesting Letter to His Parents.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Miller have received the following interesting letter from their son, Acting Sergt. Walter (Jiddie) Miller who has been through the recent fighting with his unit:

May 19, 1917.

Dear Father and Mothers:—

Just a few lines to let you know I am well and hope you are all well at home. Well, Dad, we are having a well-earned rest and we are getting lots to eat and too much to do so we can't kick. Our division got everything we went after and held it, but we had lots of casualties as might be expected. One of our boys, Ernie Abraham, has been recommended for the Military Medal and I know everybody will be very pleased. He sure earned it by what we hear and know. He was the sergeant. Doug is well and so are all the boys that are left, about seven or eight of us.

I had charge of a platoon last time in and we only had one killed and three wounded and we were under some bombardment too. A lot of the old boys said it was the worst they ever saw Fritz put over.

Did Mr. Webb tell you I wrote to him? I got a dandy parcel from the church and of course I had to write and thank them for it. I guess the people will miss the soldiers quite a bit now.

Well, the fellows that are eligible that are there yet should come over here and see the real fighting boys and they would feel like new men. Why, they are playing ball just outside the hut now—I mean the ones that are not either winding up their Ingersolls or lousing up. That's the saying out here.

I had a letter from Tom today. Will Cuthbert had been down to see him. I hear regularly from the girls and they can write dandy letters, believe me. I was very disappointed when I could only get four days' leave. I had practically no time at all after I went around and saw all my relations.

Well, I guess I will close now, so will say bye-bye. With love to all from your loving son,

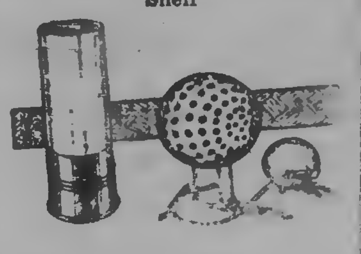
JID.

SEA-GULLS AS FOOD

Make Edible Delicacy when Split and Smoked

In New Zealand a small gull, not very much larger than a tern, called the "mutton bird," is caught and cured. The birds are skinned, split open and smoked. They are then packed flat in baskets and exported, some to Australia and some to America. The usual method of preparing them for the table is to soak them all night in salt and water. This removes the slight fishiness which is left after smoking. They are grilled as a kippered herring is grilled, and when cooked are not unlike the fish to taste. They are, however, much more delicate.

Golf Tee Made from a Shotgun Shell



Instead of making golf tees in the usual manner I used the brass end of a shotgun shell, weighted with a small iron ball attached to a string, says a correspondent. The device was made as an experiment and proved so useful and convenient to carry that I continued to use it.—Popular Mechanics.

Greatest Shipowning Town

The town of Yarmouth, N.S., is a modest port and the population in the seventies was less than since the century turned. But in 1876 no less than 130,000 tons of shipping was registered at Yarmouth. In 1871 the tonnage was 90,000, and even then it was boasted that Yarmouth owned more shipping than London had in the reign of Charles II. or all Great Britain when America was discovered.

MAGDALEN ISLANDS

Owned by English Admiral—Lonely Spot in Gulf

French is spoken in the Magdalen Islands, but English is also commonly in use and Entry Island is an English-speaking colony. The Bird Rocks, the chief breeding spot of gannets and gulls, is very difficult to access and visitors have to be drawn up in a huge net-basket by the lighthouse keeper and his men. The steamer makes the call to these rocks once a month, the infrequency of her visits being due to the fact that the landing is at all times attended with some danger Etang de Cap Havre, Maison, Etang du Nord and Grindstone are the chief settlements on the islands and the port of call for the mail, passengers and freight boats which run between Picton harbor and the Magdalens every Monday and Thursday

The Magdalen islands were granted in 1798 to Admiral Sir Isaac Coffin in a fee simple and whose heir, Admiral Coffin, now holds them. The tenants pay a yearly rent of one shilling per acre, but of late an ordinance has been passed by the Government of the Province of Quebec making it possible for tenants to buy the land outright, but it seems that few wish to become land owners at the price of $4 per acre, preferring for reasons of their own to pay the shilling rental.

CAPT BURNHAM

committed himself to a conscription policy which certainly would seem to be inspired by ideas of autocracy. It ignores the inspiring principles of Mr. Balfour's speech, especially that part in which the British statesman said: 'But when democracy sets itself to work, when it really takes the business in hand, I hold the faith most firmly that it will beat all the autocracies in the world.'

"Canada must not be legislated into becoming the most servile state in the league of British nations. Under servile political partisanship the possibility is there."

Church Union Issue Has Been Shelved

Discussion Is To Be Dropped for Two Years After the War.

MONTREAL, June 13.—The 43rd General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada here unanimously agreed on a course in regard to the projected union of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational denominations, which practically assures a discontinuance of organized propagandism for and against the object until two years after the conclusion of the war and averts the imminently threatened split in the Presbyterian Church through the determination of the Presbyterian Church Association.

That the Presbyterian Church should be continued independent of the union, a resolution was adopted by a standing vote, urging that, inasmuch as the 42nd General Assembly which met at Winnipeg last June, had provided that union should not be consummated until the second assembly after the close of the war, organized propaganda should in the meantime be discontinued by both sides.

Circles and Bands.

Miss M. A. Nicholls submitted the report of Mission Circles and Bands, which showed gratifying advance in all branches of the organizations. The financial statements showed commendable increases in Foreign and Home Missions. The report was adopted.

Young Women's Work.

Miss H. S. Ellis, B.A., principal of Moulton College, delivered a stirring and touching address on "Young Women's Work," in the course of which she contended that the three great corner stones of our national safety are the Church, School and Home—the Church to inspire, the School to instruct and the Home to illustrate. These three great institutions should be developed, safeguarded and fortified. Young people must be trained to know what they are and why they are what they are; they should be as positive that they are Christians as they are sure that they are Canadians. After the war conditions will be such as to open to young women larger opportunities than ever before, and they should be trained, educationally and religiously, to be capable of availing themselves of the varied privileges then offered. A higher type of womanhood will be in demand to undertake that good, constructing and uplifting work—both spiritual and material—for which there will be, following peace, so great a need. Turning to the question of what provision to make for soldiers on their return, Miss Ellis contended that wonderful characters are being developed on the battlefield, which might eventually be appied to God's work at home and abroad. She made a strong appeal for subsequently applying existing masculine and feminine energy in aid of the war to the Lord's work at home and abroad, and urged every church to have its own young women's and children's organizations, and to support its own missionary. Under the new conditions we must, she concluded, "get back to God."

The Struggling Church.

Mr. Thos. Urquhart of Toronto, read a carefully prepared and able paper on "The Struggling Church in the year of struggle." He prefaced his subject by eulogizing the splendid service Rev. Mr. Webb, pastor of Murray Street Church, is contributing to the Home Mission interests of the Baptist denomination. In this year of struggle, he continued, young men have gone to the front to fight and keep the war away from their home land. A stranger coming to Canada, where business and pleasure march hand in hand as usual, would not dream that we are vitally engaged in this great world-struggle. We have nc idea of the tremendous sacrifices being experienced in England, France, Italy and even in the enemy countries, and this country is not putting forth anything like its real strength. It is time that the government conscripted men, money, aye, everything, and laid them all on the altar of sacrifice in defence of religious and civil liberty and universal freedom. He made a strong appeal for men and women to relieve the church of its great financial struggle by giving regularly and systematically. Every member should recognize his or her individual responsibility in this respect. Then the church must struggle to exalt righteousness above sin, and its members should exert themselves to protect soldiers on their return from the seductions of materialism, with which Canada will be in danger of being swamped for some time after the war. The land will be open to Japs and all other Allies—desirabe and undesirable — and Christians must meet their heros from the front with the gospel of Christ, to minimize the dangers of association with alien acepticism and vice. We must consequently prepare today for a tomorrow.

LOOKING FOR BUGS IN CITY GARDEN PLOTS

"Look out for the potato bug" is the warning issued by expert gardeners to the amateur cultivators now busy on the vacant [illegible] within and without the city. The enthusiasm which characterized the planting of the tubers will not characterize the digging of the harvest of potatoes if nothing is done to teach the willing gardeners to destroy the enemy that lies in wait for their crop.

The potato bug is a subterranean Hun. He hides in security until the luscious young plants begin to peep out into the light of day, then he comes up and begins his summer-long meal.

NO TRACE OF BODIES

Reeve Clark says Victims of Drowning Will Never Be Found

Reeve John Clark of Galway, is in the city serving on the Grand Jury at the County Court. When asked as to the probability of the finding of the bodies of the two men drowned in Drag Lake, he stated that he did not think they ever would be recovered owing to the great depth of water in the lake. He referred to a previous drowning two or three years ago near the same spot when a man and woman were drowned and not a trace of the bodies was ever found.

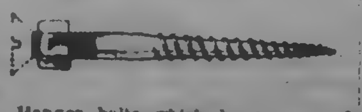
AFTER THE WAR

Land Settlement and Agriculture Will be Stimulated

In the post-bellum period Canada will need as much real production as it can manage. Farming ought to have a big stimulus. There are only two ways of bringing up our output—to bring in trained farmers, or to educate green settlers. The release of our own large armies and immigration of British ex-soldiers will give us the raw material which ought to be turned to agricultural account. To provide training facilities on inviting conditions and terms is to attract thousands of men who otherwise would drift about, settling in the cities and towns when and how they could. The great obstacle to land settlement is ignorance of farm conditions—for farming is a technical trade, not a refuge for the failures at other occupations. By all means, the opening of the door to settlement, through training and settling facilities, ought to be as wide as possible for returning and immigrating soldiers.

Instead of Hanger Bolt



Hanger bolts which have a wood screw on one end and a machine screw on the other are not always carried in stock by hardware dealers. When they cannot be obtained a substitute may be made by sawing off the head of a wood screw and cutting machine threads on this end.—Popular Mechanics.

Indians in Northland

Indians in the Northland are more prosperous and healthy than they were years ago. During 1917 the Indian commissioner received several reports from sub-inspectors in the northern wilds. Practically no sickness and no sign of a shortage of food was noted. A year ago special arrangements were made with the Hudson's Bay Co. to feed the Indians to prevent starvation. Fur-bearing animals are more plentiful and the trading posts are paying a better price for skins than they were previously.

Time to Step Forward

Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, says the time has come for the dairymen of Saskatchewan to take a step forward. For the last ten years they had been preparing for this step, and now it was their duty to take it.

We cannot have phenomenal laying and superior meat qualities at the same time. Why not make 150 eggs per hen per year the limit?

ALBERTA HAD WORLD'S RECORD WHEAT CROP

Dramatic Features Attended Threshing of Field That Saved the Day—Farmer is Businessman

A Lethbridge, Alta., writer says: The record has been made in the growing, harvesting, threshing, and marketing of the world's record wheat crop for big acreage and the details are being entered according to a cost system like that of a great factory, while C. S. Noble dictates the story of how he surpassed all records of wheat crops from a farm as big as 1,000 acres. When the last load of grain, hauled by a team of prize Clydesdales, arrived at the elevators, completing a total of 54,383 bushels from 1,000 acres, behind it was a procession of autos filled with members of the Lethbridge board of trade.

How Record Was Made

The story of "How I Did It" includes the use of the most modern methods of business. The telephone at the central office was the main channel for personal directing of operations which covered nearly two square miles and required 120 men.

When his presence was required at any place he had a high powered automobile at his door which whirled him there at high speed. It was not many years since Mr. Noble left the United States to make a modest start in Alberta. When he made the record he owned three farms and his crop for the year was worth nearly $100,000.

Last Field Saved Day

It was threshing time which told the story of a crop record. When the wheat from the last field was reached it was seen that the world's record would be surpassed if this grain threshed thirty-nine bushels to the acre. It went sixty-four bushels and brought the average up to nearly fifty-four and one-half bushels an acre for the entire acreage. There was a throng present and moving pictures were being taken. Suddenly a belt broke and it looked as if the climax would be postponed to another day. But feverish work repaired the belt and the crowd cheered as the last of the wheat came from the separator.

WHEN CANADA BUILT MANY WOODEN SHIPS

In Early Days Nova Scotia Owned More Tons of Shipping Per Head than Any Other Country

Mr. P. St. Clair Hamilton, writing in By-water Magazine, says: Canada once excelled and carried the flag into every port open to navigation for some twenty odd years. With the decline of ship-building one province of Canada beyond all others suffered the destruction of her greatest industry. Nova Scotia owned more tons of shipping per head than any other country in the world. Yarmouth, where the first Nova Scotian vessel was built, became the chief ship-owning port in the world, in proportion to population, and was the last to let go. Nova Scotia, which as I have said was our chief wooden ship-owning province, launched her first vessel, a shallop of 25 tons at Fish Point, Yarmouth, in 1761, and from that date to the end led all shipping fleets in number and tonnage. Their first vessel referred to was called the Pompey, without bowsprit and with both ends alike, for use in fishing.

1875 Greatest Year

The year 1875 saw Canadian shipping at its greatest, with a registered tonnage of 304,000, and 188,000 tons launched that year. Then came the "decline and fall," until 1896, when only 10,700 tons were built and the registered tonnage of the Dominion was only 14,100. The building was largely confined to fishing vessels, although the old home of shipping, Yarmouth, had begun to start small companies to own and operate steel sailing ships, built for them in Great Britain. Since 1896 there has been an increase in tonnage built, reaching the highest point in 1916, when our registered tonnage was 102,239. Wooden shipping was confined entirely to fishing vessels, however.

Then Came Collapse

"By 1896," says Mr. Hamilton, "the building of big wooden ships practically ceased. Grass-covered, rotted timbers show where the 'ways' from which ships were launched were. With other parts of Canada it meant some loss. To many in Nova Scotia it spelt ruin. Their marine insurance companies went out of existence; banks went under, or were taken over by Upper Province institutions. The headquarters of one, which still bears its old provincial name is at Ottawa, others were united to Montreal banks. Others were wrecked, and sorrowing shareholders lost everything. So ended the wooden ship-building industry."

CANADIAN MUSIC AS VIEWED BY DR. VOGT

Former Head of Mendelssohn Choir Desired to See Big Permanent Orchestra in Toronto

The music loving citizen of Toronto and of the country generally learned with very great regret that Dr. A. S. Vogt had discontinued his work as conductor of the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir. During its twenty years of active existence under his baton the choir appeared in seventy-eight concerts, sixty-two of which were given in Massey Music Hall, four in Carnegie Hall, New York, one in Symphony Hall, Boston, six in Elmwood Music Hall, Buffalo, two in Gray's Armory, Cleveland, and three in Orchestra Hall, Chicago. Dr. Vogt was accorded one year's leave of absence in 1912-13 in order to visit the great music centres of Europe preparatory to the proposed but deferred visit of the Mendelssohn Choir to Great Britain and the continent.

Leaders Should Specialize

In withdrawing from choral work, Dr. Vogt was influenced by a firm conviction that the musical life of Canada's larger cities had developed to a point which demanded concentration on the part of some of the city's prominent musicians along special lines of activity, rather than by a weakening of their influence through attention to a number of sometimes conflicting spheres of work. The remarkable growth of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, with the marked expansion of its examinations throughout the Dominion, and the plans adopted by the musical director governing the public recitals of the institution, required, for their proper development Dr. Vogt's undivided attention.

It was his intention to take an active part in a serious movement to interest the citizens of Toronto in the local orchestral situation. In the opinion of many patrons of music an effort worthy of the importance of the cause should result in the establishment of a permanent Symphony Orchestra in Toronto on a scale inviting comparison with the great orchestras of New York, Boston, Chicago, Minneapolis, rendering it unnecessary to seek American orchestral assistance for any of Canada's most important concerts.

Great National Body

In giving up his connection with the Mendelssohn Choir, Dr. Vogt withdrew from a creation of his own which had brought great honor to himself and his native Province and Canada. As a practical indication of the high artistic standing of the choir in Boston and New York it may be mentioned that when the organization was perfecting its plans for the proposed European tour of 1915, which was abandoned because of the war, amongst the propositions then laid before the choir was one from the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the co-operation en route of the choir in two concerts, for a performing fee of $6,000.

THE PASSING OF THE MOUNTED POLICE

An institution whose gradual disappearance will cause some natural regret is the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. For decades they have been the tireless, and fearless and capable upholders of the law throughout an immense area. Their fame has travelled over the earth. Their reputation has ever been of the best. But the advance of civilization has curtailed their usefulness. To a great extent their functions have, little by little, been taken over by other bodies. Their jurisdiction has decreased as settlement has spread over the prairie. When Saskatchewan and Alberta were erected into provinces, the Mounted Police were still retained because the new governments were unwilling to undertake at once the expense of replacing them. They therefore remained, but the arrangement was admittedly temporary. The same might be said of their position in the added territory of Manitoba.

The war hastened changes which were bound to come anyway. The members of the force have been anxious to get to the front and the Dominion authorities have exerted themselves to gratify this ambition as far as possible. One consequence is that the duties they have hitherto performed in Alberta are to be taken over by a department of police under the jurisdiction of the province. The announcement of this contemplated change may be taken as indicating the passing of the old regime. The Royal Northwest Mounted Police will never be the same again. They will still have work to do in the wilds of the far north and no doubt they will do it well, but they will no longer be an integral and intimate part of the life of the West.—Winnipeg Telegram.

In certain districts a homesteader may secure an adjoining quarter-section as pre-emption. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate 50 acres extra. May obtain pre-emption patent as soon as homestead patent on certain conditions.

A settler after obtaining homestead patent, if he cannot secure a pre-emption, may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Holders of entries may count time of employment as farm laborers in Canada during 1917, as residence duties under certain conditions.

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

There will be no more betting on the races in Canada after Aug. 1 which looks like a deliberate slap at the breding interests there. How can the breed of horses be improved if a bookmaker can't lay odds?.

There has been nothing said about the revival of the sport of kings at Hawthorne this year, probably due to the fact that the kings aren't having much sport these days.

Some of those conference polo vaulters ought to be useful when it comes to getting by the barbed wire entanglements. Fit out a company of college athletes with poles and let them vault the obstructions and spike the enemy's guns, whereupon the infantry can advance at its leisure and occupy the position, thus saving the expense of the preliminary bombardment and the maintenance of the barrage..

After reading those extracts from the diary of the Chicago gentleman addicted to dope, one is led to the conclusion that it is almost as difficult a habit to break as the habit of talking back to the umpire .

The Torontos have completed the construction of their reinforced concrete dugouts and shelters and expect to remain where they are all summer and then some.

Ball players, it is said, are not necessarily good bomb throwers for the trenches, because a bomb thrower uses a stiff arm delivery. Something like the veterans in his later years.

UNTIL AFTER THE WAR

The Hamilton Herald's famous road race around Hamilton bay, covering a distance of 19 miles, 168 yards, will not be run this year. This will be the first time since 1894 that the blue ribbon running event of Canada has not been run.

It is the opinion of the proprietors of the Herald Publishing Company that the race should not be continued during these strenuous times of war. Sports have been curtailed in every city in Canada during the past year, and it is felt that even such a long-established event as the Herald race should be dropped until the war is over.

Last year the race was open to soldiers only. The management was in favor of calling it off altogether, but the military authorities urged that it be continued and confined solely to those in khaki.

Canada's greatest race will be resumed after the war, and it is expected that the long-distance game will regain its popularity of several years ago.

BILLY SUNDAY MADE A HIT

Was In New York as Ball Player 31 Years Ago

The Rev. Dr. William Sunday was in New York in June thirty-one years ago, but in a far different capacity. Billy Sunday, the evangelist was Billy Sunday the baseball player on that occasion and he made a hit that time, too. His hit will be found duly recorded in the score and account of the New York-Chicago baseball game of June 5, 1886, played at the old Polo ground, at 110th Street which evidently was considerable on that occasion.

Sunday has been carrying the tattered score card of that game around these many years. On the cover was a picture of Danny Richardson second baseman of the Giants, and on the back the home games of the local nine. Just underneath the tabulated score inside the covers, next to Sunday's name was a whisky advertisement. Chicago won the game 4 to 0.

Cap Anson, who was in that game with Sunday, says the latter is a better evangelist than he was a ball player, but on this particular day his baseball work seems to have been above reproach, though his name does not find a place in the story of the battle. Still, it was a grand army of baseball talent, that old Chicago crowd, and it took a good man even to be last, which Sunday was.

Times Have Changed

Times have changed. "Ladies and gentlemen attended the games in those days. Now they are "fans." Gentlemen gnawed their canes. Nowadays they gnaw peanuts. Happy girlhood hoped and went on keeping score. Nowadays nobody ever sees any members of the order of girlhood or grandmotherhood keeping score. The story of a ball game in those days had some pretence too literary flavor. Nowadays if one goes in for that sort of writing he speaks a foreign tongue to many "fans." Ten thousand was a vast crowd in those days. Nowadays it would be lost in the depths of spacious grandstands, and Billy Sunday, instead of being merely "Sunday, r.f.," nowadays preaches to more than that number.

Scenic Features, Hunting and Fishing in Salmon River Country, British Columbia

M. W. Anderson, writing of a trip to the Salmon River country says: The Salmon River country, in northeastern Idaho, is one of these spots where the foot of man has trod so seldom that he is looked upon as a curiosity rather than an enemy by the bears and deers with which the mountains and villages are populated. The country resembles very much southeastern British Columbia, and from the time, however, when we started out in July, aside from a few settlers we encountered on Pistol creek and Salmon river, and another government surveying party, with whom we cooperated for a time, we saw no humans until we were well back toward Boise in September.

Sportsman's Paradise

"The Salmon River country," he says, "is a veritable sportsman's paradise. Whatever your desire, whether it be stalking big game or tracking the crafty cougar, or angling, it is quickly satisfied. There are bull trout that would command a fancy price laid down in eastern markets, beauties 12 to 15 inches long, but either tossed back into the stream or cast aside as worthless by the connoisseur guides and packers who enter this country to escort the occasional tourist or transport supplies to the handful of settlers whose cabins are scattered along the river, miles apart. Close at hand are the Hot Lakes, in which the water always is tepid, and in which one gets a very enjoyable plunge.

Old Man Vallers

"On the way in we made the acquaintance of some choice characters thoroughly representative of the wild and woolly West in its prime. Old Man Vallers was one of the most interesting of the group. To get to Valler's place you board a home-made tramway, consisting of two stout cables to which a rough box is suspended high in the air by pulleys, and haul yourself across the river. Save for the tramway, Valler is as effectually cut off from the outside world as though it never existed, but he is happy, and would not change stations with a king, even in peace times. He lives here with a companion, has about 100 head of cattle, and is independent so far as this world's goods is concerned. 'Dutch John,' 'Old Man Fox,' who wears buckskin breeches and hasn't had a haircut in two generations, and who tramps over a 60-mile area that he knows by heart, and 'Buck' Culver, who has a pack string and comes out as far as Macke, the county seat, a couple of times a year to get supplies for himself and the rest, are others who cling to the wilds.

"The Salmon River country is not the roughest part of the Rockies, perhaps. But if possesses sufficient natural beauty so that whatever it may lack in this respect is not missed. The rugged grandeur of the ranges over which we picked our way; the magnificent panoramas unfolded from the crests where we pitched our camps; the snow fed mountain streams that gurgled along and tempted us to fish in their crystal waters or lulled us to sleep with their roar at the end of a hard day's labor, made our trip one constant round of delight in which the dull routine was forgotten in contemplation of the new wonders that unfolded themselves on every side."

"ENGLAND AND INDIA WATCH"—TOWNSHEND

Thrilling Message From General to His Men at Kut When Hopes Were Not Yet Gone

The following order from General Townshend has come to light and will show what spirit inspired the defenders in the war's greatest siege: "I am confidently expecting to be relieved in the first half of the month of February. Our duty stands out plain and simple. It is our duty to our Empire, to our beloved King and country to stand here and hold up the Turkish advance, as we are doing now, and with the help of all, heart and soul with me together, we will make this defense to be remembered in history as a glorious one. All in England and India are watching us now, and are proud of the splendid courage and devotion you have shown, and I tell you: Let all remember the glorious defence of Plevna, for that is what is in my mind.

"I am absolutely calm and confident as to the result. The Turk, though good behind a trench, is of little value in the attack. They have tried it once, and their losses in one night in their attempt at the fort alone were 2,000. I have done my duty. You know the result, and whether I was right or not your names will go down to history as the heroes of Ctesiphon, for heroes you have proved yourselves in that battle.

"From the Heart"

"I perhaps by right should not have told you of the above, but I feel I owe it to you all to speak straight and openly and to take you into my confidence, for, God knows, I felt our heavy losses and the suffering of my poor, brave wounded, and shall remember it as long as I live, and I may truly say no general I know of has been more loyally obeyed and served than I have been while in command of the 6th Division.

"These words are long, I am afraid, but I speak straight from the heart, and you will see that I have thrown all officialdom overboard. We will succeed, mark my word. But save your ammunition as if it were gold (Signed) Charles Townshend, Major-General commanding 6th Division, January 26, 1916."

MOTORING AT PACIFIC

Where Tourists with Trailer or Tent May Be Happy

The splendid roads of British Columbia are a boon to the autoist, says a Vancouver writer. Vancouver Island is a tourist's paradise. Here are found modern roads beyond compare, in a veritable wonderland of scenic beauties and primitive surroundings. The southern part of the island is a highly improved section, while the northern extremities are almost wholly unknown and contain numberless wild animals and a wealth of natural resources. Good roads penetrate far into the interior.

The highways throughout the Boundary country are famous, while the Cariboo road, with its wealth of historic lore and numerous connecting links, is the scenic highway par excellence. Then there are the many short trips to Vancouver, trips requiring but a half day for their enjoyment and which afford an excellent opportunity for getting out into the open.

As much of our best hunting and fishing is nowadays reached by car, in places inaccessible from the railroad and only to be otherwise reached by back packing or taking a chance on getting a country rig to get you on the spot, and, since the car gives every hunter and fisherman a wide radius of sport within car distance of his home, the trailer or tent solves the problem [illegible] to get there [illegible] than to [illegible] of the sport instead of having to drive back home through the night.

TO PRODUCE MORE FOOD

In order to encourage the settlement and cultivation of vacant lands in the Western Provinces, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, through its Colonization and Development Department, of which Mr. J. S. Dennis is the head, has undertaken an active campaign to try and induce absentee owners to cultivate their holdings. A circular has been issued to some 8,000 absentee owners, pointing out the profits which can be made by cultivating their lands, and showing how many farmers sold their last crop for more than the original cost of their farms.

The Company offers the advice and assistance of its Colonization and Development Department, free of charge, in supplying reliable information as to how to go about getting the land under cultivation, realizing that every new settler means greater production to meet the food shortage which at present threatens the world and which Canada, with its extensive and fertile unplowed areas, can provide.

ANCIENT RUINED CITY

Located Near Southern End of Lake Titicaca

The Bolivian Government has enacted a law which forbids the carrying off or wilful destruction of that portion of the ruins of the ancient city of Tiahuanacu which vandal hands have left intact. Here once stood a large and populous city, but it has lain in ruins so long that even the legendary lore of the Incas, who traced an unbroken line of kings back to the eleventh century, is dumb concerning the people who built it. It lies not far from the southern end of Lake Titicaca, its ruins covering an area of about a square mile. The ruins themselves include the remnants of temples, palaces and other great structures. They are located thirteen thousand feet above the level of the sea on a vast plateau, where the constant cold prevents the maturing of corn or other grain.

Potatoes, oca, and some other edible roots are grown, but the region sustains only a scanty mountain population. The city once covered a large area. The great structures were built by skilled masons. One stone is thirty-six feet long by seven wide and weighs 170 tons; another is twenty-six feet by sixteen, and six feet thick. Only the monoliths of ancient Egypt equal those found in Tiahuanacu. The movement and placing of such monoliths point to a dense population, to an organized government, and consequently to a large agricultural area with means of transportation from various directions.

Nova Scotia was Pioneer

Shipbuilding on this continent began in Nova Scotia. The first shipyard on the hemisphere was established at Port Royal (Annapolis), in 1606 by Pontgrave, associate of Champlain and De Monts. He built in that year and the year after a barque and shallop.

Tortoise Lives 400 Years

The tortoise is the longest lived of land animals—one died at the London Zoo in 1906 at the age of 350, whilst there are instances of tortoises having attained 400 years.

The whole congregation at a service at Beaconsfield, England, consisted of four clergymen. At two other services the only person present was a woman.

PALACES OF THEBES

"Love in a Cottage" Not Favored by the Egyptians

The palaces of old Thebes, in Egypt, were probably the largest and most wonderful ever erected by the hand of man. One of them was the container of a central hall 80 feet in height, 335 feet in length and 170 feet in breadth, the roof of which was supported by 134 columns 11 feet in diameter and 76 feet in height. The cornices were of the finest marble, inlaid with ivory work and sheathed with beaten gold. From the point of view of artistic beauty, the Parthenon at Athens, Greece, of course, still holds the palm and is likely always to hold it.

Seaweeds Make Good Food

Certain seaweeds are edible, and very delicious, too, when properly cooked. Carrageen moss, one of the most familiar weeds, when boiled down into jelly makes excellent eating. So does dulse, which is a favourite Irish dish, and can be eaten raw, boiled, or it can be roasted by twisting it round red-hot tongs. Laver is another edible seaweed tasting very much like spinach. Samphire and sea holly can be used as food too.

Fisheries Unrivalled

Canada's fisheries have three features in which no other fisheries can equal them. (1) The purity and coolness of our waters, all being north of the 45th parallel, in which the best food and game fishes, the very aristocracy of the fish world, are native. (2) The cold winter conditions provide nature's own refrigeration, and facilitate transportation. (3) Fish are everywhere; fishing can be carried on by those with the least capital, merely a boat, a net and baited hooks. The silvery legions of the sea and finny denizens in lakes and rivers are amongst the most available, reliable and lasting of our natural resources.

SLEPT THROUGH IT ALL.

Dr. Hunt Carries Out Published Program at Opera House.

Dr. Zell Hunt, the hypnotist, came to the Opera House for a three nights' engagement, which concludes this evening, and he is billed to appear in a Toronto theatre tomorrow His performances here have been so popular and well patronized that the management are trying to induce him to remain all week. If they succeed, the announcement will be made at the performance this evening.

Dr. Hunt carried out his program yesterday as announced. Miss Bowen was put to sleep in a cot in the window of the E. B. Clegg & Co. store, and was carried to the Opera House and awakened on the stage. The lower floor and the balcony were crowded with an interested audience that included a number of physicians.

One of the feats of Dr. Hunt last night was to put a young man under his spell and then thrust a large pin completely through his cheek, the subject remaining perfectly unconscious all the time and not realizing that a liberty had been taken with him, even when he came to himself.

WE MUST PREPARE TO MEET THE AFTERMATH OF WAR

Clifford, has been intensified since that time owing to the actions of the barborous Germans in destroying everything in that portion of France and Belgium from which they have been compelled to retire.

Peace Dangers.

Peace will come some day, and with it there will be attendant dangers. Dr. R. J. Campbell has said, "It may be that we shall have a violent reaction in the period immediately following the declaration of peace, just as there was a violent reaction against the Puritan regime after the death of Cromwell and the recall of King Charles the Second. The wildest license was indulged in, then; the nation at large appeared to change its character from grave to gay; certainly it changed its tone. There would have been no harm in laughter and jollity after so much of Puritan seriousness, but a looseness of morals supervened which speedily brought down our national credit and made us play a meaner part in the councils of Europe. Of course this may happen again, but somehow I think not'"

Spirit of Scepticism.

These are eventualities that we must be prepared to meet, and is there not another danger likely to loom up as one of the war's terrible aftermaths, in the form of a spirit of scepticism regarding the spiritual life. Our churches will be put on their defence when brought face to face with the query—why an omnipotent deity should cause such widespread havoc and suffering to rage in the world, all the church's batteries will have to be brought into action to combat so deadly an argument. The experience of history teaches us that every great national catastrophe has been attended by the recrudescence of old magical or barbarous rites, the instinct for which has been covered over but not extinguished in the nature of man. These evils will have to be met by a steady dependence on, and a deepening influence of, our religious belief, and an absolute loyalty to our institutions. My thought here is of that gallant French General who in the early stages of the war had command of the allied forces on the western front, and who recently was the honored guest of the American nation, and also our guest at Montreal for a very short time, General Joffre. At the battle of the Marne his order to the brave soldiers of France was, "Advance; and when you can no longer advance, hold what you have gained; and when you can no longer hold, die on the spot." Mr. Sayer of the Western Canadian Baptists Missions, in speaking at a Baptist convention held at Cleveland recently said of this order:

Determined to Carry On.

"History will tell you in days to come how well they carried that out, and something of the spirit that inspired these men seized our people, and they determined to "Carry on" —"To keep the home fires burning." True it meant sacrifice—more than we dreamed of—but in the face of what was happening about us, why not?

"We saw the womanhood of Canada, with breaking hearts, yet smiling bravely through their tears, "God speed" the boys as trainload after trainload left our Western cities. We saw our boys, in whom we centred all our hopes, going out from college and university, not into their life work, but responding to the call of duty.

"Perhaps I can best tell you of it in the words of a young officer in the Royal Flying Corps, who wrote me a few weeks ago, something like this: 'Yesterday forty gun machines failed to return, probably thirty-five of our fellows (brave lads they were) have crossed the great divide, and there will be the shadow of a great sorrow in their homes tonight. But it will be tempered with a great joy, for those brave boys in their sacrifical death saved the lives of thousands of their fellows and averted the shadow of death from thousands of other homes. If anything should happen me, it is well. The folk will have the joy of knowing that I gave myself to save others. There can be no greater joy in life than this.'

"Over 20,000 of our fellows sleep their long sleep 'somewhere in France.'

"Yes, friends, we are learning the lesson. We begin to know, as perhaps some of you will come to know, something of what sacrifice means."

Hold What We Gain.

We must also hold on to what we have gained. And while we remember the sacrifices that have been made, and while we recall the actions of our enemies as regards Belgium, Serbia, the Lusitania, Miss Cavell and Captain Fryatt, may we also be reminded of the duties of the hour in regard to our religion and the necessity of keeping it inviolate and above reproach. Let us be courageous, taking hold of the duties of the hour, and may our religion be a vital force which will wield an influence that will be felt. In a forceful way we can support our university and schools, we can raise the $20,000.00 asked for McMaster University, for it is most important that men with trained minds should be produced as leaders of men for the very trying years that are bound to come at the conclusion of the war.

My remarks on this subject are now ended, I feel that I have been unable to do it justice. I am exceedingly grateful for your kind attention.

C. E. MOORE, President.

REV. DR. SHIELDS IS HAPPY HE COULD BE CONSCRIPTED

While Our Soldiers Are Fighting and Dying in Flanders, Others at Home Are Trafficking in the Honor of Canada, Asserts Rev. N. S. McKechnie, B.A.

Last evening's session of the Baptist convention, now in session at the Park Street Church, was largely attended by visiting delegates and Peterborough citizens. Like the meeting of Tuesday night, the proceedings were of an interest-retaining character to all, and yet especially applicable to the needs of the Baptist Church in its great Christian work at home and abroad.

The choir again was present in acceptable strength, and enhanced the pleasure of the occasion with its admirable lead in sacred song. Lieut. Marks rendered the solo "Nearer, Still Nearer," in admirable voice, and with commendable feeling and expression.

"When Nothing Happened."

In an interesting address on this subject Rev. W. P Spidell said all are so related that everyone is responsible to and dependent upon each other. Farmers, industries, merchants, capital and labor, each rely the one upon the other for their maintenance and prosperity. Great Britain, the United States, and France, all the allies, depend upon the soldiers on the various battle fronts for their very existance, and future independence, only to be assured by a triumphant conclusion of the great struggle now in its third year. The gallant defenders of those great principles for which we are fighting are dependent upon those at home for munitions and supplies of every nature, and it is our bounden duty to see to it that we discharge our great responsibilities in that connection. We must not place ourselves in that position which will warrant the plantive cry "that nothing has happened" In response to urgent calls from our Canadian divisions for comforts and reinforcements. Continuing, he regretted that while a number of people accept and discharge their responsibilities as Christians with readiness and cheerfulness, a host of others avoid such a course whenever they can. However, the work of the church goes on with some degree of progress, which goes to show that the few are devoting all their energies to its interests, while with the great majority "nothing is happening in their religious lives." For the latter, allied though they may be with the Christian church, it is as though they were non-existent, and they need awakening to a realization of the fundamental truth that the best of life is experienced when "things are happening."

"Preparedness "

During the course of an exceedingly thoughtful and forceful talk on the subject of "Preparedness," Rev. N. S. McKechnie, B.A., B.Th. of Woodstock College, contended that this had been a sinister word in connection with Germany and her preparedness to perpetrate the awful crime on the world of which she has been and is still guilty. But still she has taught us the value of preparedness as applied to preparing our young people, educationally, for the battle of life. This is an era of education and advanced training, he said, in which perhaps the small college offers an advantage of the large ones in the way of closer personal contact between pupils and instructors. Laying stress on the opportunities afforded in Canada's educational institutions for a training of the heart and spirit, he advanced that never was there a tme when wealth was more potent, or travel more luxurious, or the cheap theatre more popular, to the exclusion, with the vast majority, of spiritual influence and attainment. Never were men more prone to seek the winning of wealth in six days and devote the seventh day to pleasure. The nation's drift seems to be away from the spirit with an emphasis on the material. The reverend gentleman

To Advertise City In United States

MANUFACTURERS' COMMITTEE ACCEPT OFFER OF McKIM AGENCY.

The manufacturers' committee of the City Council met last evening to consider the best means of bringing the advantages of the city as a good place for manufacturers to locate in, before the people of the United States and Canada.

There were present Alderman McIntyre (chairman) and Aldermen Dobbin, Smith, Weir, Taylor and Stratton.

A proposition from the McKim Advertising Agency was submitted, showing what they considered the best advertising for the city.

Some of the aldermen were of the opinion that a better class of manufacturers could be reached in other papers.

Ald. Taylor was very strongly in favor of accepting the suggestions of the McKim people. They knew what was best for the city and had always given good results to the companies he represented.

Ald. Stratton thought that McKim's were in the best position to judge what was in the best interests of the city.

A motion was made by Aldermen Taylor and Stratton that the proposition of McKim & Co be accepted and the city clerk have an ad. placed for a year in the Canadian Industrial World, Sytem, and Power.

The idea of placing an illuminated sign of "Welcome" was left over for future consideration. The cost of the sign would be $140 placed in position.

CAPT. BURNHAM SHOULD RESIGN

Captain Burnham announces that in view of the fact that the Government has decided to bring down a measure extending conscription further in the direction of wealth, he has withdrawn his resignation, sent to President Moore of the West Peterborough Liberal-Conservative Association. The meeting of the executive committee, as announced yesterday, will be held, and the matter will then be considered. The sentiment of the members of that body still seems to be in favor of accepting the resignation and calling a convention to nominate another candidate.

The situation is grave as it is peculiar. The fact that Captain Burnham is, or has been, in the military service of the country, invests his recent action with serious import. The matter will be published in every country at war and the announcement made that a returned soldier in Canada was opposed to conscription, for the reasons given by Captain Burnham, are not likely to be cited in Germany or in other countries overseas.

Captain Burnham deserted his party in an emergency. In his action and in his letter to President Moore he implied that the Borden Government was not entitled to public confidence. He is in the same position as the soldier who on the eve of an engagement lays down his arms on the plea that he has no faith in the officer at he head of his unit. He has, too, by his stand, lent color to the claim that is certain to be set up by the Opposition that the Government had no intention of conscripting wealth until they were forced into it to save themselves from defeat.

If Captain Burnham had been satisfied to await development all would have been well and this furore would have been avoided. It can readily be demonstrated that Premier Borden was considering some measure designed for the conscription of wealth before Captain Burnham wrote his now famous letter. The very day that letter was published in The Review the Toronto Star had an account of the visit of a delegation from the Win-the-War Convention, recently held in Quebec, to urge the Premier to conscript all the resources of the country. The Star representative at Ottawa interviewed members of that delegation after the conference, and was assured that the results were entirely satisfactory and that the delegates were assured that the aciton called for would be taken.

Captain Burnham announced that he would neither vote for or against the Conscription Bill, lacking as he did a mandate from his constituents. He had as much warrant for one course as for the other. His constituents will never be able to forget that they were in danger of being unrepresented in one of the gravest issues that ever came before the Canadian Parliament.

Captain Burnham was elected to support the Borden Government. If he finds himself unable to do so, then there is only one course left to him and that is to resign not only his future candidacy but his seat in the House. His recent action has shaken the confidence of the electors in their representative. If he has failed the party once, he is likely to do so again.

Let Captain Burnham stand by the letter he has sent to President Moore, and withdraw as the candidate of the party, an honor that was conferred upon him three years ago but not without opposition, and that opposition was engendered before any such grave issues as the present arose.

If he withdraws as a candidate, another convention will be called to name a successor. There is nothing to prevent Captain Burnham appearing before such a convention as an aspirant for the nomination. That would be one way in which to give the electors a chance to pass on the question and to test Captain Burnham's strength with the people.

When he was re-nominated three years ago, there was an election in prospect. Other questions have arisen since that time in the local field. Another convention would clear the atmosphere, and result in the choice of a candidate who would go into the contest backed by popular approval. Whether that man would be Captain Burnham or some other remains to be seen. The issue is too grave to permit sentimental regard for any individual to control the situation.

GERMANS ARE FORCED BACK FROM FIRST LINE DEFENCE

British Troops Press Enemy Closely and Make Progress During Night---97 Lives Lost in Aerial Raid on London.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, June 14.—Our further advance east of Messines combined with the pressure of our troops south of the front of our attack, has compelled the enemy to abandon important sections of his first line of the defensive system in the area between the river Lys and St. Yves. Our troops have followed the enemy closely and made considerable progress east of the Ploegsteert wood. We also gained ground during the night in the neighborhood of Gaspard. We raided enemy trenches last night north of Bullecourt and south of Hooge and captured a few prisoners in each case.

LONDON, June 14.—The weekly shipping report issued by the Admiralty states that twenty-two British merchantment, of more then 1,600 tons were sunk. Ten merchantmen of less then 1,600 tons were also sunk, together with six fishing vessels.

A summary of the report follows: "Arrivals, 2,767; sailings, 2,822.

"British merchant ships over 1,600 tons sunk by mine or submarine, including one previously, 22; under 1,600 tons, including one previously, 10.

"British merchant ships unsuccessfully attacked, including seven previously, 23.

"British fishing vessels sunk, 6."

This week's figures show a considerable increase in submarine activity as compared with recent weeks. Last Wednesday's statement reported a total of only twenty-three vessels sunk, against the thirty-eight now announced. The aggregate is the largest of any for a month past. Last week only fifteen vessels of more than 1,600 tons were sunk and three of less than that tonnage.

INCOME TAX IS NOW ASSURED

FINANCE MINISTER WHITE WILL MAKE FURTHER LEVY ON WEALTH.

OTTAWA, June 14. It can be stated definitely that more drastic taxation measures are under consideration by Sir Thomas White which will include an income tax.

In addition to this conscription of wealth measure it is pointed out that the government has been conscripting wealth since the imposition of the first business war tax in 1915, but it conscripted wealth to an increased extent by the excess war profits' tax which it imposed in 1916, and still further conscripted wealth in the graduated war profits tax imposed in the budget brought down by the finance minister this session. Under this last measure one-fourth of the profits between 7 per cent. and 15 per cent., one-half of the profits between 15 and 20 per cent., and three-fourths of all profits above 20 per cent. are taken by the state.

As an illustration of the severity of this tax it may be pointed out that a company with a capital of $1,000,000 earning $300,000 during the past year would be obliged to pay $120,000 to the government.

Government Deals With Railways

Caucus of Conservatives Was Held at Ottawa This Morning.

OPINION IS DIVIDED.

As to Whether the Country Should Extend More Aid to Roads.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

After a Conservative caucus this morning Sir Robert Borden announced the chief matter of discussion was the railway problem though he gave no indication of what action will be taken.

It is understood there was a division of opinion as between the nationalization of the Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk and further aid to the roads to meet their obligations maturing in July.

FIFTY PERSONS KILLED IN A EXPLOSION IN ENGLAND.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 14. — Zeppelin L-43 has been destroyed over the North Sea by naval forces, Bonar Law announced today in the Commons. The Admiralty reports that no survivors of the Zeppelin were seen.

Fifty persons were killed and a large number injured by an explosion at Ashton-under-Lyne, Bonar Law announced in the Commons today.

DIED AT SEA

Mr. R. J. Devey Received News Of Death Of Brother

News from England by mail yesterday informed Mr. R J Devey of the death of his youngest brother, William Wallace Devey, of the South African forces. His last letter contained the news that he was leaving South Africa for France via Umtali and Capetown. On May 24th a letter received from the chaplain on board a transport stated that Wallace Devey was dead from an attack of malarial fever and buried at sea on April 12.

The late W. W. Devey had been residing in Rhodesia for about 16 years, was 36 years of age and is survived by his wife and two children.

Capt. Burnham Will Support Bill

(Special to The Review.)

OTTAWA, June 14. — The Evening Citizen will say today: Asked by The Citizen this morning for his views on the new forward developments of governmental policy, Mr. Burnham, M.P. for West Peterborough, who has been trying to bring the necessity of unifying Canadian public opinion prominently before the Cabinet, said that it was splendid and would have a magnificent effect upon the country. No government could stand higher with the people than Sir Robert Borden's Government, but there had been one or two little sore spots that a humble back bencher could see perhaps better than a man in the front seats. "I shall," he added, "of course support the conscription bill and do all I can to make it a success, you may be sure."

The Evening Journal will say editorially today: "The further development of the Government's policy looking to conscription of wealth fully satisfied Mr. Burnham, the member for West Peterborough, who will give his hearty support to the Borden bill. It cannot be denied that the Government put its ear to the ground none too soon to please the majority of the electors."

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, JUNE 14, 1917

CONSCRIPTING WEALTH.

SIR THOMAS WHITE has announced that a bill will be brought down in the House providing for a Federal tax on incomes. This will satisfy those who have from the first insisted on conscription of wealth as well as of manhood. It removes the objection of Captain Burnham to the bill, and he has withdrawn his resignation as the nominee of the Conservative party in West Peterborough.

Sir Thomas White has been condemned by the Liberals already for exacting too great a toll from the profits of commercial enterprises. The Manufacturers' Association, in session at Winnipeg, have protested against the tax and declare that the system has kept new industries out of the country and discouraged investments among Canadians themselves.

Three Canadian concerns paid over $600,000 each in war tax into the public treasury last year. Under the measure as amended last winter it is estimated that the total receipts from this source alone will amount to over fifty million dollars a year. When an income tax is imposed, every known method of conscripting wealth will be in operation just as it is in England, where the plan adopted is held up as a model.

There are some radical spirits in Canada who will not be satisfied even with an income tax. What they insist upon is that the Government seize a percentage of all the money in the country, leaving to each man of means only a fraction of his possessions. Such a policy would be confiscation pure and simple, something to which the spirit of the Constitution is unalterably opposed.

COALITIONS IN THE PAST.

CANADA WAS FACING a crisis in the days that preceded Confederation, but it was a trivial danger when compared to the one confronting the country today. It was Canada's good fortune that prior to 1867 it possessed statesmen of large calibre, men who were willing to make their own ambitions subordinate to the nation's welfare. George Brown and John A. Macdonald were political and personal enemies, men who never addressed or recognized each other in any way except across the floor of the House. These men sunk their differences and worked together for Confederation, travelling together, driving together and speaking from the same platform. Once their common object was achieved they resumed their old positions with regard to each other and remained enemies to the end.

The great reform leader, the late Robert Baldwin, has left an example and an address which should appeal to the Liberals at Ottawa who are now either sulking in their tents or working against the proposal to evolve harmony from discord. In 1854, when anything but coalition seemed impossible, Mr. Baldwin said:

"The government of the country must be carried on. It ought to be carried on with vigor. If that can be done in no other way than by mutual concessions and a coalition of parties, they become necessary, and those who under such circumstances assume the arduous duties of being parties to them, so far from deserving the opprobrium that is too frequently and too successfully heaped upon them, have, in my opinion, the strongest claims upon public sympathy and support."

Coalition was necessary to bring about Confederation and weld five separate provinces into a nation. Coalition, harmonious action between the two parties, is required today to save that nation from disruption.

BY THEIR WORKS YE SHALL KNOW THEM.

THE MEN WHO ARE either openly or covertly working against conscription at Ottawa today can at least claim consistency in their attitude. They are the same men who in 1913 opposed the Borden bill which extended aid to the British navy and which was designed to provide against the very crisis which has arisen and which now confronts the country. Their contention five years ago was as technical as it is today. They based their objection on the question of whether the three proposed dreadnoughts should be built in Canada or in England. Now, the most of them are not openly opposed to conscription, fearing to go that length. What they do attempt is to blind the people by insisting on a condition which really supplies the anti-conscriptionists with their only excuse for opposing the measure.

THE BEST PEOPLE.

THE EXAMINER says Captain Burnham has never represented the Liberals, except technically, and that he has not represented the best elements in the Conservative party.

The Examiner is surely ready to admit that Captain Burnham has faithfully and efficiently represented the soldiers ever since the war broke out, and that the men in khaki are certainly entitled to be classed with the best in the community regardless of party.

THE GAZETTE ON THE SITUATION.

THE MONTREAL GAZETTE is not only close to the Government, but is a recognized authority on politics in Quebec. A special despatch sent to that paper from Ottawa is here reproduced in part as showing the sentiment of the people and the flimsy objection to the Military Service Bill, based on the contention that wealth as well as manhood must be conscripted. The Gazette says:

A report, that is believed has considerable foundation, to the effect that N. W. Rowell, Liberal leader in the Ontario Legislature, is willing to join the Borden Cabinet, is current here. Mr. Rowell has declared for conscription and was the chief speaker at the Liberal conscription meeting in Massey Hall. There are also some prominent Conservatives not at present in public life who will be brought into the Senate and Commons to strengthen the Government. A number of appointments to the Senate are expected next week.

The Liberal press bureau, which is controlled by Liberal conscriptionists, is distributing immense quantities of campaign literature containing vicious attacks on the Government. This literature is being franked by Liberal conscriptionists. The Liberal candidate nominated on Saturday for South Waterloo announced his opposition to conscription. Other signs point to the return of the Liberal conscriptionists to their party and a repetition of the tactics that denied aid to the British Navy will prevent adequate aid to the British and Canadian army. At he first sign of obstruction, the Government may refer the question to the people after certain legislation is enacted to guarantee that the men fighting for Canada will be assured the opportunity to express an opinion on the issue. Two things may cause an election—defeat of the Government on an amendment to the Military Service Act or obstruction by Sir Wilfrid Laurier's following.

Public sentiment on the question of conscription in Ontario and Quebec is being eagerly canvassed by members of Parliament. The swing to conscription in Ontario has gained such an impetus that the sentiment in that Province is certain to be emphatically for compulsory service. In Quebec the reports reaching Ottawa confirm the previous opinion that sentiment among French-Canadians is against conscription to the extent of almost an united people. There has been expressed the opinion by some prominent Quebec citizens that if conscription is made law the French-Canadian people will obey the law. In Ontario an anti-conscriptionist is as unpopular as a conscriptionist is in Quebec. In the West sentiment is solidly behind conscription, while in the Maritime Provinces the division is on similar lines to that in Quebec.

The Military Service Act will be given its second reading on Thursday or Friday and the Liberal amendment calling for the conscription of everything in Canada previous to that of man-power will be forthcoming. They will rely on the phrase "conscription of wealth" to blind the public to the necessity of conscription of man-power for the army.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

WHENEVER IT COMES, the next election will almost certainly be fought on racial lines.

• • • •

THE MOST OF US would be in favor of a clothes dictator, too, if assured that he would break up some of the present combinations.

• • • •

HAS THE GOVERNMENT a mandate from the people to enforce conscription? Yes, from the best people, certainly, as represented by the men in the trenches.

• • • •

THERE ARE thousands of graves of Canadians in France. If the dead could speak, thousands of voices would be heard calling for conscription, without conditions, either.

• • • •

"GIVE ME LIBERTY or give me death" was the motto of a famous champion of human liberty. "Give me life, even at the cost of slavery," is the way the anti-conscriptionist puts it.

• • • •

Does Captain Burnham represent the real feelings of the soldiers who have been across the ocean. We are inclined to think that he does. Conscription of man-power alone may not make such an appeal to the boys in the trenches as the administration evidently counts upon.—Ottawa Citizen.

BUT WHAT THE BOYS in the trenches want first of all is help to win the war. The question of paying the bill will be taken up later.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Sensible Britons.

(Toronto News)

Official Labor in Great Britain opposed conscription. The workingmen repudiated their leaders. They refused to be the tools of socialists, extremists and fanatics.

No More Hereditary Titles.

(Ottawa Journal-Press)

Most Canadian knighthoods are thoroughly well deserved; all of us can afford to tolerate them cheerfully. But in this new country let us try to kep as free as possible from deliberate promotion of class snobbery, one of the most potent agencies of which is inherited caste.

A Very Common Weakness.

(Winnipeg Telegram)

The type of social reformer now in control in Russia, and by no means confined to Russia, aims at the regeneration of the world, no doubt; but he is singularly apt to overlook any concrete effort towards that regeneration when it involves the discharge of a duty laid on himself, instead of the insertion of a right or privilege acquired by himself.

A Political Diagnosis.

(Buffalo Express)

The opposing political forces at Ottawa are still sparring. Neither side yet quite knows what to do on the conscription issue since such strong opposition has developed from some quarters. Doubtless both Sir Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier wish to do what is best for the country, but first they are anxious to make sure that no political advantage is surrendered needlessly

What a Climax!

(Ottawa Journal-Press.)

The concluding paragraph of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's letter is one to which attention should be drawn. It reads:

"At this and previous interviews, I always stated to you that, whenever conscription was adopted, after a consultation of the people, I would certainly urge in every possible way obedience to the law."

From a statesman of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's standing, that is inexcusable. It means that if a new parliament elected to pass conscription, did pass such a measure, Sir Wilfrid would not do something, which if he did do it, he could and should be clapped into jail. It does not mean that in the election of that Parliament Sir Wilfrid would go out and urge the need for conscription or even the seriousness of the situation. Nor does it mean that Sir Wilfrid would refrain from advising Canadians during the election to vote against conscription candidates.

It gives us a picture of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the great Imperial statesman, with his "ear to the ground" like the cheapest carpet-bagging politician. It shows us Sir Wilfrid conjuring up "serious difficulties," the bulk of which he himself could easily dispel, but which he will not. It reveals Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the colors of a petty opportunist, gambling with the country's institutions and liberties, which he has pretended to uphold.

What a climax to a brilliant career!

THOUGHTS ON ST. HELENA FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE KAISER

(An open letter to the Kaiser from one who knows the island, published in The New York Sun.)

You may go to St. Helena soon, I understand, but you are probably too busy fighting for your existence now to find much time for general reading. So I will tell you about St. Helena.

St. Helena is a pretty eight by ten island in the South Atlantic. The nearest land is Ascension Island, 700 miles away, and the nearest mainland Africa, 1,200 miles east. The best way to reach St. Helena is by boat. A battleship could drop you there and call back once a month to see if you were all right.

The cliffs of St. Helena rise to the height of 1,000 feet, and the view from the top must be entrancing to a man who yearns as passionately for a free ocean as you do. You could stand up there and look at a free ocean for miles in any direction. As far as your eye could reach you would never see a submarine blowing up a passenger ship. The seas around St. Helena are probably the freest in the known world, and I hope you may be spared to enjoy the sight of them.

One of the nicest things about St. Helena is that it lies 4,477 miles away from England. While visiting the island you would not need to worry all the time for fear of being attacked by the soft, cowardly, rabbit-hearted English. You would not need to sleep in your spurs, with a gun under your pillow and your sword hanging on the foot of the bed, because England and Belgium would be too far off to jump on you without warning as they did so treacherously in 1914. After you had been at St. Helena a few years perhaps you would feel so safe that you could venture out in the yard without your weapons. There's no place like an island for a militarist with nerves.

PLEASE PASS THE WHALE

According to that forward looking chronicler of human activities, Frederic J. Haskin, the whalers of Washington and Alaska have joined in a movement to popularize whale meat as an article of human diet. The fact is cited that in Japan the whale is highly esteemed as food, and the testimony of many experts is adduced to show that it is both palatable and nourishing, says the Chicago News.

Need more be said? Let the whale packers bring on their whale. The American people will try anything once. And if we like whale meat we shall go on eating it, provided the whale trust does not boost the price too high, a thing it is likely to do, as American are invariably fined for indulgence in anything they like.

Let us have a go at specimen whale. The American housewife will devise some attractive way of cooking and serving it, even if the oven has to be enlarged and one of the children sent downstairs to borrow Mrs. Jones' big baking pan. We understand that a normal whale on the hoof weighs several tons. But doubtless it will be supplied in portions to suit.

If the whale proves good to eat it may become the marine counterpart of the cow, useful in life and death and in all its parts. The whale is a mammal, and one sees no reason why a herd of whales would not relieve the dairy situation once we learned how to milk whales. The rosy cheeked milkmaid would not be attracted by the job, of course, but except in rural dramas the rosy cheeked milkmaid in her print gown no longer exists. She has long since been supplanted by a male person in blue overalls, so that all we need do is to teach this male person to dive—and, of course, teach the whale to "git over" at the word.

The skin of the whale should make excellent leather, and its bones—the ones not used for stays—would work up into attractive furniture or at least acceptable bonemeal. In sum, this whale proposal looks promising in every particular. Pass the whale!

Wit and Wisdom

Too Small For Use.

The Brantford Witness makes itself responsible for the following: A clergyman whose salary had not been paid for several months told the trustees that he must have money as his family were suffering for want of the necessaries of life. "Money," exclaimed one of the trustees noted for his stinginess, "do you preach for money? I thought you preached for the good of souls." The minister replied "So I do; but I can't eat souls, and if I could it would take a thousand such as yours to make a meal."

"Do It Now."

Samuel Grindstone was a hustler of the modern school. He believed in the gospel of speeding up. Over every desk in his office he placed a large printed notice reading: "Do it now!"

But a week later, with tired fingers and an exhausted air, he tore the mall down.

"Hallo!" said a friend, dashing in on the ceremony of destruction, "What's up! Doesn't hustling pay? Going back to the old leisurely methods?"

"Yes, I am," snorted Grindstone. "Hustling doesn't pay. I gave sixpence each for those notices, thinking they'd spur my staff on to hard work."

"Well?"

"Wall, the net result is that they've all acted on the motto. The chief cashier has bolted with the contents of the safe, my typist has eloped with my youngest son, four juniors came in yesterday to ask for a raise and the office boy has found a better job and gone off to it."

That Settles It.

Billy was about to be married, and his friends—married friends — were giving him good advice, the burden of which was "Forget it!"

But Billy was not to be dissuaded. "Oh, I don't know!" he replied. "Marriage is all right if you take it in the right way. Now all this talk about matrimonial quarrels, arguments, and so on is all nonsense. Surely you can accept one another's point of view! And, anyway, there's always an answer to every argument."

"Oh, is there?" growled the old married man. "I tell you, my boy, there's one argument in married life that you'll never be able to answer."

"Really! And what's that?"

"Why, when your wife says: 'If the Browns can afford it, we can!' You try to find an answer to that!"

MASON'S MELODIES

An auto is the one best bet, if you're entirely out of debt, if you have money tucked away, providing for the rainy day. But if you're mortgaging your home, that you in pomp and state may roam, and if in roaming thus you burn your rubles, fast as you can earn, your auto is a Jonah cart, and some day it will break your heart. An auto is a precious boon, the smoothest thing beneath the moon, if you, as down the street you hie, can look the grocer in the eye and say within your secret soul, "I havn't put him in the hole." An auto is the thing for you, if, when the butcher looms in view, you know you are not owing coin for liverwurst and tenderloin. An auto is a blessed thing: all kinds of comfort it will bring, if you're not dodging the galoots who sell you clothes and lids and boots, if you can say in ringing tones, "I owe no plunks or bucks or bones, and I've a package of long green to blow for oil and gasoline." If you can't put up such a talk don't own a car—you'd better walk.

Committee Favor Technical School

Industrial and Labor Branch Votes in Favor of the Proposition.

The Industrial and Labor Committee of the Greater Peterborough Association held a most successful meeting last night in the City Clerk's office. The chairman, Mr. Breyfogle, brought in a very satisfactory report as to the progress of the housing problem. The question of a technical school for Peterborough was taken up and the following resolution was moved by Mr. W. H. Denham and seconded by Mr. J. Begley and adopted.

"That the question of a technical school for Peterborough, for the future development of the young men and women is of vital importance to every citizen of the city, and it is the consensus of opinion of the committee that every effort should be made to secure a technical school for Peterborough."

A copy of the above along with a letter tendering the Committee's assistance and co-operation was forwarded to Mr. Vincent Eastwood, chairman of the Board of Education.

Mr. J. J. Hartley also spoke very strongly in support of the movemnt to secure a technical school as it would prove to be a determining factor in the lives of the children of Peterborough.

WHEN THE WAR IS OVER.

(By an Irishman.)

When the war is over, laddie,
Just take a tip from me,
There'll be no German submarines
A-diving through the sea.
For the fatherland of Kaiser Bill,
The guy we're going to lick,
Will have a brand new kaiser,
And the same will be a Mick.
We'll change the song "Die Wacht am Rhein"
Into an Irish reel,
For the police force in Berlin
Will be Micks from County Clare,
When we put an Irish kaiser
In the palace over there.

POOR BLOOD AND WEAK NERVES

(By F. Raymond Ward, M. D.)

Lack of strength is about the first symptoms of violation of the laws of health. There come nervousness, unsteady hands and limbs, skin eruptions, dizziness, sleeplessness, heart palpitation, and with the feeling that the life blood is being sapped comes complete prostration. In this condition the sufferer is indifferent to all things—and looks upon life with a gloomy, melancholic view.

It is given as a statistical fact that seven out of every ten people in the United States are suffering from nerve exhaustion, and of this number less than half realize it. They know that they have gloomy thoughts, a depression of mind, an impaired memory, dizziness and headache, wakeful nights and spells of extreme exhaustion, but they attribute it to any other cause but the right one. They feel languid, irritable and restless, the why and wherefore of which they cannot explain. They are suffering from nerve exhaustion, a condition which is undoubtedly the means of causing more misery and crushing more hopes than any other trouble that flesh is heir to.

Nervous exhaustion will not cure itself. The sufferer who thinks that nature alone will bring about a restoration of health is simply deluded by a false hope. He will realize that (if the power of realizing is left him), when he becomes a hopeless victim to one of the many diseases which follow in its path.

Those suffering from nerve exhaustion or loss of energy as a result of overwork, mental worry or violation of nature's laws are quickly restored to sound health by Dr. Ward's special treatments. Dr. Ward's office is located at 79 Niagara Square, Buffalo, N. Y., which is right opposite the McKinley Monument. His office hours are Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays 9 A. M. to 9 P. M., and Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays 9 A. M. to 6 P. M. Sundays 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. Consultation and examination is always without charge.

Music in the Home

THE GATHERING AND MANAGEMENT OF CROWDS THROUGH MUSIC.

A band of music is the easiest of all agencies, not merely for bringing a crowd together, but for holding and for kindling the emotion that provides it at once with a rudimentary structure and a common emotion. Men marching behind a band in rhythmic time soon begin to crystalize into an integral group. They feel as one and move as one so long as the music holds them. Hence the efficiency of a band as military recruiting agency and a stimulus to the regiment when formed. "A band," says Mr. Kipling, "revives memories and quickens associations; it opens and unites the hearts of men more surely than any other appeal. A wise and sympathetic bandmaster can lift a battalion out of depression, cheer its sickness, and steady, and recall it to itself in times of almost unendurable strain."

In like manner music is appreciated by evangelists. Religious revivalists have always realized the value of music as an aid to their propaganda. Years ago Moody and Sankey made music an important part of their spectacular assemblies. And today there is no more impressive example of the ability of music to control crowds as well as to gather them, than the music employed by Billy Sunday, the world-famous revivalist, in his new 30,000-seating capacity tabernacle in New York City. Here the art of crowd management by means of music has been developed to its highest potency.

RECITAL TO-NIGHT

The piano and vocal pupils of the popular and talented instructress, Miss Jeanette Killmaster, will give a recital in the Conservatory of Music Hall this evening. All interested may secure cards for admission on application at the Conservatory.

DEATH OF A WESTERN CONDUCTOR.

In the sudden death of Mr. George Taggart, the music lovers of Vancouver have had a serious loss. He came from Glasgow some seven years ago, where he had been interested in choral work for a long period. For a time he was in charge of the music at the Grandview Presbyterian Church and later at the First Congregational. He had just accepted a similar appointment in Westminster Presbyterian. He was the organizer of the Western Triple Choir which has given a number of most successful concerts and he also directed the Scottish Philarmonic Society.

Though the groom leads the bride to the alter his leadership usually ends there.

POOR MONTREAL WANTS A CONCERT HALL.

How much the people of Toronto owe to the possession of that regal gift, Massey Music Hall, may best be understood by reading the remarks of Dr. Fred Pelletier concerning the lack of concert facilities in Montreal. Mr. Pelletier writing in Le Devoir says: "We have never had in Montreal but two concert halls worthy of the name, Windsor Hall and Queen's Hall, where now the Goodwin store stands. Both have disappeared. Only the latter had an organ. There was also Karn Hall where an organ was to be found, but the place was too small. Now we have only the Monument National which is a theatre, and the Arena, which is a skating rink. And while Montreal is thus poverty-stricken, Toronto has its Massey Hall with a great organ (not too great) and accommodation for from six to eight thousand people. (The accommodation may seem that large to one in Montreal, but in reality there are seats for 3,500). With us organists can play only in a church, and we know how the respect due to the house of God at the same time chills the inspiration of the best artist. Concerts with great choral masses are always heard better in a hall than in a theatre encumbered with scenery. It is then indubitable that the greatest need of the hour in Montreal is a concert hall of the style of Massey Hall in Toronto or Aeolian Hall in New York. But probably it will be a great number of years before we have one." Dr. Pelletier may be a pessimist, but he knows what he wants.

APPRECIATED ASSISTANCE

The part taken in the program at St. Paul's Church Japanese Fete on Mr. W. A. Logan's grounds last evening won unqualified appreciation from all present. These days no event of a public nature is complete without appropriate music. This also applies to the modern home.

RETURN ENGAGEMENT OF MISS ISOLDE MENGES

Miss Menges, the world's famous violinist, will give a second recital in the Conservatory of Music Hall on Wednesday evening next when the attendance should be as large as her exceptional genius merits. No lover of music can really afford to miss this opportunity of hearing the violin played as, perhaps, it never will be manipulated again in Peterboro, unless Miss Menges favors us with a third engagement in the future. Her wonderfully antique instruments are capable of great versatility and beauty of tone, of which Miss Menges takes the fullest measure of advantage. Keep the date of this coming musical event in mind, and attend a violin recital that will be more than "worth while."

PIANO TECHNIQUE

Attained Only By Frequent Concert Attendance or by Music of the Player Piano

It is well known most worthy piano music beyond the technical capacity of the average piano owner. Is it not a fact admited by all publishers that they cannot admit a difficult accompaniment as the embellishment of a new song, especially if it is intended to appeal to the young person? Technical competency is not a thing to be acquired overnight, and if it were there are too many music lovers who hate to sit up past eleven o'clock. For this reason the usual programme of a great pianist consists of music as unfamiliar as it is beautiful. Only by a sustained course of concert-going can one attain to a reasonably good knowledge of the master works of the instrument.

Unless—and mark well the proviso—unless one has a piano-player. Mechanical? That used to be a just criticism. It is so no longer. By means of the "self-played" rolls the tempo marks and the development of the mechanism a Player in these days is remarkably efficient. It is nothing less than a complete and perfect technique awaiting anyone who cares to use it. Perhaps the merchants who are engaged in selling players are too modest to say all that is in their hearts. Perhaps they have some other reasons. Perhaps they are afraid that their reputation for veracity might be impeached, if not in words, in suspicious glances, and meaningful silences. With all humility the writer urges them to "buck up," to tell the people what they have in their warerooms, for it canot be denied that a collection of holes and a supply of compressed air can give us access to some of the greatest music ever penned, familiarise us with the programmes of the virtuoso and give power and breadth to our faculties of appreciation. One cannot but believe that the player is a bigger thing than even the most valuable salesman imagines.

Push may be better than a pull, but a lead is always better than a drive.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" is the only medicine in the world that is made from the juices of fresh ripe fruits. Thus, it is manifestly unfair to say, "I won't take Fruit-a-tives because I have tried other remedies and they did me no good". On the other hand, the fact that "Fruit-a-tives" is entirely different from any other preparation in the world, is just why you should give it a fair trial, in any trouble of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys or Skin. "Fruit-a-tives", is composed of the active principle of fruit and the greatest nerve tonic ever discovered. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. Are people waking up to the growing need of more music in the education of our young people? In the high school of a suburb of Los Angeles there is said to be a pipe organ having 1,100 pipes as part of the auditorium equipment.

Does music draw the masses? In a Los Angeles departmental store we are told an immense pipe organ has recently ben installed. It is equipped to provide music for two floors.

EDOUARD DE RESKZE.

The death of Edouard De Reszke, the giant Polish bass singer, recalls a story of his start in the musical profession. When Edouard, as a lad of 17, returned from the Agricultural College for his Easter vacation he was met at the station by his brother Jean who was so amazed at his deep bass voice that he spirited him away from the rest of the family and leading him to a piano kept him under lock and key for two days, practising and singing duets with him. At the end of the time he led the boy to his mother saying: "Edouard is never going back to school, but he is going on the operatic stage with me."

In the summer of 1876 Edouard found himself in Paris. Verdi was there preparing Aida for its first Parisian production. He was unable to find a man big enough to sing the role of the King. A bystander mentioned Edouard De Reszke and next day brought him to the theatre. Verdi asked him to sing and was delighted. Immediately he engaged him for the first performance, then only eight days away. The boy demurred, until Verdi guaranteed to prepare him. On the opening night, despite his nervousness, Edouard made a tremendous success and from that performance his career was easy. He was with the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York in 1903 and during other seasons, and once appeared in Toronto with Madame Nordica's Concert Company and the Duss Band.

NEW BRANCH BOOMING

The J. M. Greene Music Co.'s new branch at Belleville is meeting with gratifying appreciation on the part of music lovers in the city where a large portion of its community are firm believers in the need of music in the home, and govern themselves accordingly. Business in this branch house of desirable instruments is exceeding the company's most sanguine expectations.

The possession of a really good phonograph, by whatever name, is becoming as popular and necessary in its province as the possession of a piano or automobile.—Westchester Musical News.

NO CREDIT GIVEN THE MAN WHO BUILT THE C.P.R. FOOTBRIDGE

Ald. McIntyre Finds in His Attempt to Have Structure Called After Ex-Ald Edgar.

The new city bridges were given names by the Board of Works at their meeting last night, and the names are as follows:—

The new overhead bridge to be called "The Ashburnham Bridge."

The bridge across the river from London Street to be called "The Hazlitt Street Bridge."

The new foot bridge across the river and attached to the C.P.R. Bridge to be known as "The C.P.R. Foot Bridge."

The discussion on this was brought about by the receipt of a letter form Miss Peck asking that the name Ashburnham be not forgotten when the bridges were named. The suggestion had been made that the C.P.R. foot bridge be called after ex-Ald Edgar, who was chairman of the Railway Committee last year.

After the vote had been taken on the matter, Ald. McIntyre, who had been absent during the discussion entered, and he felt that the council were not giving any credit to Mr. Edgar for the work he had done to bring the footbridge into a reality. He thought that it was a shabby trick on the part of the city not to recognize his efforts by naming the bridge after ex-Ald Edgar.

Some of the aldermen were of the opinion that the bridges should be named so that their location would be best defined.

Ald. McIntyre moved that the footbridge be named the Edgar Foot Bridge and Ald. Stratton seconded the motion

The vote resulted in the name remaining "The C.P.R. Foot Bridge."

PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS PRAISED BY GRAND JURY

State in Report to Judge Huycke That All Are in Excellent Shape and Well Managed ---Hospitals Especially a Credit to City.

The Grand Jury finished the work that had been laid out for their attention this morning and made their presentment to the court and were then discharged. After a visit to County Treasurer Elliott they departed for their homes.

The Presentment.

To His Honor Judge Huycke:—We the Grand Jury for the County sessions of the County of Peterborough called for June, 1917, beg leave to submit to your Honor the following:

We appreciate your words of welcome and following your directions have endeavored to fulfil the duties that devolved upon us.

We also would extend to the Mayor and City Council our recognition of the accommodation supplied to hold courts as a result of the fire at the Court House. We also recommend and feel assured that the County Council will provide in reconstruction a building suitable and consistent with the requirements for the conduct of affairs.

We unanimously concur with your Honor in encouraging a more united Canada in the prosecution of the great war that is now raging and earnestly trust that all energies and resources possible will be brought into requisition to accomplish the desired end.

We have endeavored to comply with your suggestion inasmuch as all haste consistent with some measure of proper attention to duties has been exercised and the Jury liberated as quickly as possible.

We visited the County House of Refuge and found some 40 inmates all happy and upon enquiry elicited from them expressions of delight with the new superintendent and matron. Since the report made by the last Grand Jury earlier in the season or during the present month the attention of the Board of Management has been drawn to unsanitary conditions as a result of plumbing and sewage disposal being out of order and the plumbers are now at work remedying the same as well as the inadequate supply of water due to the system being out of order and no doubt in a few days the same conditions will prevail as when reported on by former Grand Juries.

We found at the Nicholls Hospital conditions similar to those reported by the former Grand Jury and can only repeat such report.

At the St. Joseph's Hospital our visit was an opportunity to witness provisions for such institutions in every way modern, the sytsem of X-Ray as well as other appliances having been installed regardless of expense; in fact the hospitals of the city are a credit to all concerned.

We also visited the gaol which we found not in any way damaged by the fire, although the officials have to contend with many inconveniences due to such fire. There are only six inmates, three female and three males, and no better services could be desired than those rendered by the gaoler and other officials who are entrusted with the conduct of the gaol.

We again thank you for your kind and encouraging reference to the Jury and trust that you may long be spared to occupy the exalted posi of County Judge of which you are so worthy.

JOHN YOUNG, Foreman.

Peterborough, June 14, 1917.

Judge Huycke in discharging the Grand Jurors warmly congratulated them for the expediency shown in performing their duties. He added to their remarks in reference to the hospitals of the city and was pleased at the report received regarding the other public institutions. After thanking them for their kindly reference to himself Judge Huycke allowed them to go.

The Peterboro Utilities Commission were given permission to erect certain poles in the north-west part of the city.

Pavements to be Repaired

City Engineer Parsons reported that the ruts in the pavement would be repaired at an early date by the Standard Paving Co., and the expense charged to the Utilities Commission and the Hydro Electric Power Commission. The request of the Henry Hope Co. for a sidewalk on Monaghan Road from the C.P.R. track to their factory was received as the order has already been issued.

City Ready

The Hydro Electric Commission will be notified that the city and the Township of North Monaghan are ready to proceed with the work of grading Monaghan Road.

The request of A. Fabian for a sewer connection on Gilchrist Street was referred to the Board of Health for action.

Messrs. Peck, Kerr and McElderry were granted permission to build a concrete step in front of their offices on Water Street providing the work is done to the satisfaction of the city Engineer and the usual indemnity agreement made.

Olive Street

The city engineer will be asked to ascertain the cost of opening Olive Avenue to Rink Street and also to find out if the residents will give land to widen the street. At present it is only about 25 feet wide at the widest part and the city cannot take over any street less than the regulation width without the consent of the Railway and Municipal Board.

Harry Morgan of East City, was allowed to build a six inch sewer to his houses on Robinson Street as outlined in his letter.

A number of accounts for damage done to sewers by the roots of trees on the streets were ordered paid. The city engineer will notify all the plumbers that in future the city will not be responsible for the payment unless a permit has first been obtained at the engineer's office.

Will Buy Pile Driver

The board decided to buy a pile driver hammer for use in laying the steel siding when constructing sewers. The cost of the machine is $683.00.

The complaint of Mrs. Halpin regarding damage to her property on Hunter Street by blasting the ice at the creek on Hunter Street was reported remedied by the city engineer, except so far as the sidewalk is concerned, and that will be repaired in due course.

"OH, CECIL" COMING.

Musical Comedy at The Grand on Monday Night.

On Monday next the successful musical comedy "Oh, Cecil," will be presented at the Grand Opera House. Among the stars in this production Peterborough theatregoers will remember Mr. Vern Duchayne, who starred in the "Peg O' My Heart" company a few months ago, and will be glad to hear that he has a great role in this clever musical comedy. All the latest musical successes will be heard, and some clever dances are also introduced by the principals, and also by the pony ballet of ten clever girls. The principal roles are in the capable hands of Frank Gilham, Billy Pritchard and Lulu de Treves, who did good work when here with "In Walked Jimmy." The costumes are excellent, and the scenic production is far in advance of that usually associated with a road attraction. An excellent evening's entertainment is promised. Nothing vulgar—all high-class performers.

The seat sale will open Friday, and phone orders will only be reserved up to 6 o'clock on Monday. The show has had a very good season and will close at His Majesty's, Montreal, in three weeks' time.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

The reports from all the outside markets show that very much lower prices are prevailing for almost every commodity that is raised on the farm or in the garden.

Butter is very much lower owing to the set price at which cheese is sold, while eggs are lower in spite of the fact that the packers are reported to be filling up their storage rooms with as many cases as they can get in.

The hog market is still $15.00 with a market that is weak.

The Peterboro Cheese Board will hold their regular sale on Wednesday next.

There will be a good many farmers in the city this week and next owing to the sittings of the County Court this week and the County Council next.

METAL MARKETS

There is apparently no limit to prices of pig-iron as all indications point to further advances. A price of $50 for Bessemer iron has been established at Pittsburg, and the market consequently is in an excited condition. Quotations of domestic pig-iron are still temporarily withdrawn, due principally to the unsettled coke situation. Coke is very high in price and supplies are not coming forward from the ovens in sufficient quantities to fill requirements. The outlook as regards coke is not at all favorable, and is causing considerable anxiety. The steel market continues strong with prices very firm. Prices of a number of steel products have recently advanced in the United States, which will doubtless be reflected in Canada shortly. The requirements for steel for war purposes are increasingly heavy and consequently steel for general purposes is becoming more difficult to obtain. The outlook for the private consumer is thus becoming more serious. Coal continues high in price and a serious situation is anticipated unless a determined effort is made to increase the supply. Prices of galvanized sheets have advanced again, but black sheets are unchanged in the meantime. There is a shortage of black sheets, as the American Government is taking over a large percentage of the output of the mills, leaving a comparatively small tonnage available for the pri-

CAMPING IN WEST WITH AUTOMOBILES

How to Spend the Night in Woods of the Coast Province—Trailer Increases Accessibility

And now have come the days of the automobile camper, writes a Westener. The fact that any well-built car can penetrate into all good fishing and camping country in British Columbia, with the exception of the big game localities, has led to the development of the automobile as a means on transportation to good hunting and fishing grounds. As many of the best of the latter are located where there is no inn, and so far away that a return home leaves but little time for sport, some sort of camping adjunct to the automobile has been very desirable.

Tents vs. Trailers

It was soon realized that the car itself made an excellent framework to secure at least one wall of the tent to, and so especial designs were made to fit an automobile frame, with a jointed pole carried in the car along with the other duffle, and this tent, called the automobile tent, was put on the market.

It became at once very popular with automobilists, and is still so. As the car cannot get far in from the road, and good level tent sites, near spring water and yet near an accessible lumber road, are hard to find, the automobile camping idea developed still further in the automobile trailer, in which the entire camp—tent, cots, kitchen and ice box—is carried on a two-wheeled trailer so as to be immediately available as a comportable forest home.

Take the Home Along

When in the course of a trip if one strikes a bit of stream or a good hunting upland contiguous to the road, one of the things one does not want to do is to pass it up and go farther, to possibly fare worse, and finally end up in some roadhouse emphatically of the kind where comforts are rural and the grub old stuff brought up from the city a year before. Here is where the trailer shines. Like the hunter with his pack on his back, your home is right with you; camp is where you are and you do not have to pass on with a sigh to get up at unheard-of hours to make a trip before dawn in the car to be on your grounds by daylight.

Disposal of Ashes

During the winter months the disposal of ashes from stoves and furnaces demands attention. Though many fires are caused by the disposition of hot ashes against frame buildings, wooden fences, etc., the practice is still continued. Too much care cannot be given to the disposal of ashes. Either metal containers should be used or the ashes should be placed at a safe distance from anything combustible.

"Calf" Week

The terms "calf week," "cow week," and "bull week" are applied in many of England's great industrial centres to the three weeks before the Christmas holiday week. In "calf week" the men work time and a third, in "cow week," time and two-thirds, and in "bull week" double time, in order to make up for loss of output caused by the Christmas holidays.

McGRAW FINED FOR FIGHTING

PAYS $500 FOR AN ASSAULT ON UMPIRE BYRON.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Not in many years has the National League handed down as severe a sentence as that announced yesterday by President John K. Tener against Manager John J. McGraw of the Giants for striking Umpire Bill Byron after a game in Cincinnati a week ago. The Giants' leader is suspended for sixteen days, dating from June 8, and is fined $500. He will not be able to join his club on the field again until June 25.

The trouble arose in Cincinnati after a game from which McGraw had been ejected for disputing the umpire's rulings. After the game McGraw maintains that Byron remarked that McGraw had been run out of Baltimore some years ago. McGraw resented this remark by hitting Byron in the face and knocking him down. President Tener received reports of both McGraw and Byron before making his decision and then imposed the severe penalty on the Giants' leader. There is no appeal from Tener's ruling. President Tener said the penalty would have been more severe had he not found some "extenuating circumstances."

OLDEN TIMES ON THE DIAMOND

Bert Cunningham, one of the foxiest and craftiest of the old-time pitchers, now a resident of Cincinnati, kept a scrapbok as he wandered along the vale of time, and the yellowed clippings, some of them more than thirty years old, tell us many quaint things about the game as it was played in our daddies' day. Some of the information which can be derived from Mr. Cunningham's scrapbook still has a faint and hazy place in the memories of modern fans; still more of it will seem as new and curious as tho invented and adjusted to the game today, instead of forgotten long ago. Some excerpts from the aged book:

Only two extra men were allowed to sit on the bench of each team, instead of an army, as is the rule today. We find an instance where the umpire discovered five extra men roosting on the New York beach, and at once had three of them removed by the constabulary, after the Giants' manager had given the umpire the merry ha-ha.

The batter, in most of the journals of the day, was referred to as "the striker," and he often "struck into left field," instead of the modern "singled to left."

Altho not yet given credit in the box scores, the sacrifice was a recognized feature of the game, and we find continual mention of men advancing on the next batsmen's sacrifice.

Passed balls ran from one to six per game; few catchers escaped one a day, due, no doubt, to the small glove then in use, which was, indeed, a thin defence against the terrific speed from a shorter distance than is now the law.

Nobody thought of starting a big league game before 4.15, and 4.30 was the time in many cities.

Instead of batting always and invariably ninth, the pitcher usually hit fifth or sixth. Shortstops must have been, as a rule light batters, for about half the box scores have shortstops batting ninth.

Fewer flies went to right field than nowadays, for which reason right field was considered a pretty safe place to stick the extra pitcher or catcher, so that he might go in when the regular hurler was staggering or the regular catcher couldn't stop the fast ones.

Billy Sunday, when playing with the champion Chicago team, appears in most of the scores as batting ninth, for all his speed.

How would he dainty, fastidious pitchers of today like to be up against this sort of a proposition: "President Hewitt has released Pitcher Barr for shirking his work. Barr refused to pitch Friday's game, saying that he pitched Thursday and expected to pitch again Saturday."

Home teams always took first bat, and there was great comment when, "contrary to the usual custom, the Washingtons sent their opponents to the bat first."

EVANS AND SWIFT WIN.

Defeat Clark and Sawyer at Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 14. — Two thousand persons composed a gallery which followed the final 18 of a 36-hole patriotic exhibition golf match here over the links of the Blue Hills Country Club, in which Charlie ("Chick") Evans, present open and amateur national champion, and Alden Swift, of Chicago, were defeated on the final round one up by Tom Clark, local professional, and Ned Sawyer, also of Chicago. As Evans and Swift had won the former round by a score of 4 up, the match ended 3 up in their favor.

The champion did not play up to his form of Monday, when he broke the course record of 72 by coming in two strikes the better of par, 70. Evans' score on Monday was 73.

Swift was high man with 86, Clark had a 7", and Sawyer an 81.

Who Am I?

A New Zealand cousin in Europe with the forces vouches for the truth of the following story:

Dick Seddon was of Lancashire origin and when he died the Lancastrian society in New Zealand sent a wreath with the following inscription: "I have gone whoam." The journalist who reported the funeral evidently did not come from Lancashire, and consequently was somewhat puzzled by the wording, and after thinking hard, concluded that some one had blundered. His report read:

"The Lancastrian society sent a beautiful wreath bering the inscription: 'I have gone. Who am I?'"

Many a great achievement of humanity was evolved from a crank's theory.

B—stands for Bases—as everyone knows,
It's the place where the runners hang on with their toes,
And then scoot away as if shot from a gun;
And the man who can circle them brings home a run.

Take note, everybody: Frankie Callahan is going to take his place one of these days among the ring stars. He's looking around for new worlds to conquer, after handing out a severe drubbing to Johnny Harvey in New York the other day. If he can do to a few more young men what he did to Johnny, his place is established. Harvey was outclassed every way, his only redeeming feature being the gameness with which he "always came back for more" punishment.

Willie Mitchell, the Tiger southpaw, is certainly making himself popular with the Detroit fans. Not so, however, with the followers of other teams. Willie's work is getting better all the time, and seems to have been given an extra spurt after he recently pitched his second shut-out game of the season, the Yankees being the sufferers.

The Phillies are waiting impatiently for their next series with the Giants. If there is any team that the members from the City of Brotherly Love do not regard with any particular affection, it is John McGraw's band. The latter didn't act a bit nice during the recent series at New York, and just because they insisted upon winning the only two games played, the Phillies left with a grouch.

Freddie Welsh is not likely to get his wish of "just one more chance" with Bennie Leonard. The defeated lightweight champion thinks he can still get the better of his conqueror and promises to quit the ring if he can get another whack at Benny. As Shakespeare might have said, we are afraid that Freddie "lags superfluous" in the championship class.

Grouchy Gus Says: "Every time a friend gives you a rain-check, you can make up your mind that there's going to be a rush of business and the boss won't let you off."

These were brave words spoken by Captain Tom Flanagan, the well-known Canadian sportsman, who insists that, war or no war, sports must be continued. Captain Flanagan has let it be known that he has little use for the highly paid fighters who will not do some real fighting where they are needed. He insists that the fighting qualities of the British and Canadian armies have been brought out in the ring, on the track, on the diamond and in other field sports. For that reason he insists that all athletics must be kept up at all costs.

The roped arena is a place

They dance and hit and feint and swing—

He began his fighting career in 1909, but it was not until 1912 that he gained for himself more than a local reputation. In that year he knocked out Monty Dale and several other boxers, defeated Ray Temple and Harry Thomas, won on a foul from Leach Cross, beat Jack Britton, and made an excellent showing in ten-round bouts with Packey McFarland, Freddie Welsh and Knockout Brown.

here went on to declare that while thousands of our brave brethren have fought and are fighting in defence of democracy and Christian liberty in France and Flanders, others at home are trafficing on the honor of Canada to their own gain. Party leaders split hairs in times of emergency and scandals in every part of Canada have besmirched the good name of our fair land. The absence of the spirit and the need of Christ is at the root of all this.

Continuing the speaker asked that young men be trained to carry a spirit of fairness and of Christ into all their undertakins, even including sport. The best sportsman is he who has learned something else than how to play the game; he has learned the high ideals embodied in the best Christian training for the service of his Master and his country. The church is the source of all good in any community, and no greater calamity could happen to a community than that the light of the church should go out of it. Democracy is a good thing, but ignorant democracy destroys and creates turmoil as in the case of Russia. With peace we shall have a new democracy which will, however, be taught with danger, and the church must be looked to to lead the nation intelligently. in a reconstruction of national life which will make for better conditions than those existing before the war. He pleaded for the training of young men in the light of an intelligent democracy, and solicited generous financial support of educational institutions to that end.

In conclusion, the reverend gentleman referred in glowing terms to the heroism of Canadians at the front, many of whom had won medals for distinguished service, and none had played a more gallant part in the war than Rev. Capt. W. A. Cameron and Rev. John McNeill, both graduates of McMaster University.

"The Prodigal Son."

Dr. T. T. Shields of Toronto was the distinguished visitor of the evening. He has an engaging presence and his style of delivery is conversational. of the heart-to-heart talk character, with occasional flashes of appealing rhetoric which irresistibly leave with his audience the impression he wishes to convey. His cheerful presentation of every-day arguments, coupled with entertaining reminiscences applicable to his subject, is both refreshing and convincing

The reverend doctor based his discourse on the oldest and best-known subject in the Bible—The Prodigal Son. In delivering this parable he asserted that, as in all similar instances, our Lord was speaking through His disciples to the generations to come, and He was a master artist in such work. Too many people, however, stop short, in reading the story, at the general rejoicings on the return of the prodigal; they do not care for the acquaintance of the elder son, the discontented young man who begrudged the killing of the fatted calf in honor of his brother's return And in thus stopping short they lose a great portion of the lesson Christ intended to convey, "It is true,' the speaker said. "the elder son was not very attractive; neither is the conscription bill to many. In reading that measure I was interested to know if I were included in its provisions, and I was quite happy to learn that I am young enough to be included."

In the parable under consideration Dr. Shields found three great principles applicable to church life — sonship without brotherhood, service without fellowship, and heirship without happiness. In regard to the first of these principles, some, like the elder brother, are orthodox, but essentially selfish, considering themselves rather than others. The prodigal's brother never had any thought for the empty chair at his father's table, and today there are many empty seats in our churches, enough to spare for absent sinners, but with too few to care why they are not occupied. Such apathy on the part of too many church members causes them to fall in recognising the principle of sonship with brotherhood.

Again, service without fellowship is too prevalent amongst so-called Christians. The elder son had always been dutiful, had attended to his father's business, but somehow he was not in fellowship with his father and did not understand him. If we could understand our Heavenly Father, how much different our service in the church would be. These days the blood and passion of Christ is too much lacking in the church and its teachings. Sunday school publications also need the closest scrutiny, for they are packed full of the rankest heresy, teaching that children can be educated into the Kingdom of Heaven. The blood and cross of Christ should dominate all our life, church and otherwise.

In conclusion, the reverend divine contended that many professed Christians, like the discontented brother in the parable, have heirship without happiness, and do not enjoy the abundance with which their father's house is filled. God, like the prodigal's father, needs to come out to them. Our churches are filled with people who take no pleasure in their religion. They have never learned the secret of tapping the springs of affection in God's house and do not enjoy their religion because they endeavor to eat their spiritual meal alone.

WOULD DESTROY CONFEDERATION

BRITISH MAKE ADVANCE ALONG 7 MILE FRONT

Push Germans Back One Thousand Yards and Hold Front Trenches.

150 PRISONERS ARE TAKEN

Many Germans Killed and Captured in a Raid to the North of Lens.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, June 15.—Our troops attacked yesterday evening south and east of Messines and astride the Ypres Comines Canal. The enemy's resistance was quickly overcome and the whole of our objectives were gained in both localities. We captured more than 150 prisoners, one howitzer and seven machine guns.

As a result of these operations and the constant pressure maintained by our troops since June 7 we now occupy the German front trenches from the River Lys to the River Warnave and have advanced our line from five hundred to one thousand yards on the whole front from River Warnave to Klein Seillebeke, a distance of about seven miles.

We made a successful raid last night north of Lens. Many Germans were killed in hand to hand fighting and a few prisoners were taken by us.

Red Sea Fort Taken.

Fort Saliff, on the east shore of the Red Sea, has been captured by British warships, it was officially announced this evening. The announcement says:

"The commander-in-chief in the East Indies reports that Tuesday morning His Majesty's ships under his command, captured the fort at Saliff, after a resistance of three hours.

"The fort is situated on the eastern shore of the Red Sea in the Kamaran anchorage, 180 miles north of Perim, between Loheiya and Hodeida.

"Ninety-four prisoners, three machine guns and two mountain guns and military stores, camels and the harbor plant were captured.

"One Britisher was killed."

Fort Saliff is on Kamaran Bay, in Yemen Province, southwestern Arabia. Large rock salt works are located there.

The captured fort lies about 175 miles north of the Gulf of Aden. A force of Turks to the north of Aden has been long in the way of the British in attempts they have made to advance from that city. The purpose of the seizure of Fort Saliff may be in facilitation of a movement to work in behind this force and capture or disperse it.

SINN FEINERS TO CONTEST FOR REDMOND'S SEAT

Select a Nominee to Succeed the Irish Patriot Killed in Action.

UNDER LIFE SENTENCE.

Government Preparing to Pardon the Irish Who Took Part in Revolt.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, June 12.—The Sinn Feiners of East Clare will contest the seat vacated by the death of William Peamond, killed in action. They have chosen Edward De Valera, professor in Dublin University, now under sentence of penal servitude for life for participation in the Sinn Fein revolts.

May Be Pardoned.

The British Government is considering the granting of amnesty to the Irish prisoners arrested at the time of the rebellion last year. Chancellor Bonar Law made this announcement in the house of commons, saying that the government's decision would be made known immediately.

TRENT CANAL TO BE OPEN TO LAKE ONTARIO NEXT YEAR

Minister Cochrane Tells Deputation That Grand Trunk Has Signed Agreement to Build Bridge at Campbellford This Year or Forfeit Grant.

(Special to The Review.)

OTTAWA, June 15. — The various deputations from the Trent Valley municipalities directly interested in the opening of the canal had an interview with Cabinet Ministers and the chief engineer this morning. Peterborough was represented by Mayor Duffus, Mr. J. J. Turner, president of the Board of Trade, Mr. T. F. Matthews, representing the transportation committee of the Greater Peterborough Association, and Aldermen McIntyre, Smith and Duncan.

The request of the delegates for the early opening of the canal was presented by the various speakers. Then the benefit of the recent agitation in which this city took a leading part at the behest of Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., was disclosed in the announcement made by Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals, when he rose to reply.

Mr. Cochrane stated that the Grand Trunk Railway Co. had just been required to sign, and had signed, a cast-iron, law-proof agreement to complete such arrangements of their bridge at Campbellford as are required to permit of the opening of the canal to Lake Ontario. The work must be undertaken this year or the company will forfeit the amount which the Government has allowed them for the purpose.

The advantage of this new step is that the Government has pledged itself to see to it that the canal is open for navigation next season. The deputation was satisfied that the Government will immediately complete the canal at the present depth of six feet, and will increase the depth at the first opportunity for resuming work other than that strictly necessary on account of the war.

Capt. Burnham's prompt and decisive action in this matter has saved the situation.

INTERVIEW CONFIRMED.

OTTAWA, June 15. — The following is a copy of a letter confirming an interview and recently published, and signed by Capt. Burnham:

"Dear Mr. Burnham: I duly received yours of the 8th, asking for copies of all correspondence in relation to the necessity and feasibility of removing the G. T. R. bridge at Campbellford. In reply I beg to say that this has been more a subject of negotiation between our own and Grand Trunk engineers than of correspondence, and that the agreement thus arrived at has now been executed. This agreement imposes on the Grand Trunk obligation to complete the work so as to permit of free navigation on the opening of the season of 1918. Should they fail to have the bridge ready, then they forfeit the percentage of work undone so far as our aid is concerned. The work in question is a somewhat serious undertaking, involving a joint expenditure of $250,000, towards which the department contributes $153,000.

"As the present bridge is on a sag, it was objected to as a dangerous railway practice to establish a swing span at that point. The high level bridge avoids the necessity of installing and maintaining a swing span, but necessitates an entire rearrangement of grade and yard facilities as well as a new bridge.

"Yours very truly,

"(Signed.) F. COCHRANE."

LT. COL. WORSNOP MENTIONED BY GENERAL HAIG

IN DESPATCHES, A NEPHEW OF PETERBOROUGH LADIES.

It will be of interest to many people in Peterborough to learn that Lieut.-Col. Worsnop, Canadian Infantry, mentioned in Sir Douglas Haig's despatch of 1st June is the only surviving son of a native of this city, his mother having been Mary Benson, a daughter of the late Lieut.-Col. John R. Benson. His aunts are Mrs. A. M. Brock and Miss Benson, both residents here. "Charlie" Worsnop, as he is known in Vancouver and in fact all through British Columbia, has already won the coveted Distinguished Service Order for his good work at the taking of Regina trench in November last and it was for his conduct at the capture of Vimy Ridge that he is now mentioned in despatches.

His father is Lieut.-Col. C. A. Worsnop of Vancouver, B.C., who is a veteran of the Northwest Rebellion, 1885, when he was a captain in the famous Ninetieth Battalion, Middleton's "Little Black Devils."

British Capture More Than Hundred Thousand Prisoners

LONDON, June 15.—More than 100,000 prisoners been taken by the British during the war, James MacPherson, parliamentary secretary to war office, announced in the Commons today. Up to end of last May 76,067 prisoners were taken on the western front, to which must be added at least eight thousand for the month of June. In Mesopotamia 10,900 prisoners have been taken since July, 1916. In Egypt the number of prisoners since July 1, 1916, is approximately 8739. On western front British armies have captured 434 guns since July 1, 1916. In Mesopotamia 132 guns have been taken since the beginning of the war, exclusive of those lost at Kut El Amara and subsequently recaptured. In Egypt 18 guns have been taken. The territory regained by British troops on the western front since July 1, 1916, amounts to 600 square miles.

JUDGE HUYCKE REBUKES JURY IN OPEN COURT

FOR BRINGING IN FINDING ACQUITTING J. M. PAITON OF THEFT.

There was not a little excitement in the County Court yesterday afternoon when Judge Huycke administered a very severe rebuke to the Petit Jury that had returned a verdict of "Not guilty" against J. M. Paiton who was charged with theft from the Canadian Swift Co.

A previous jury had also found a similar verdict on another charge and in both instances the charge of the court was against the accused. The defendant admitted the loss of the money but had reported the loss to the company and offered to repay the deficiency in weekly payments. This was not satisfactory to them and a charge was laid against Paiton. The defence claimed that there was no deliberate theft but only an unexplainable loss of the money due to carelessness in making collections.

Mr. Joseph Wearing was counsel for the prisoner and the prosecution was looked after by Mr. G. W. Hatton, Crown Attorney.

LOCAL PASTOR TO GIVE ADDRESS AT WESTMINISTER

Canon Davidson Selected for a High Honor in Connection With Service.

IN MEMORY OF HEROES.

And to Celebrate the Fiftieth Birthday of Confederation.

Major J. C. (Canon) Davidson, who is now in London on leave, will be one of the speakers in a special service to be held in Westminster Abbey July 2, unless arrangements now under way fail. It is proposed that a great Canadian service be held in commemoration of fifty years of confederation and a memorial to Canadians fallen on the field of honor. No man could better pay tribute to the heroes than Major Davidson who was with so many of them when the end came.

His Majesty's pleasure is still to be sought on one or two matters connected with the proposed celebration. When this is known it will certainly be found that the event will be arranged as to ensure the greatest dignity and historic significance. In addition to the King and Queen there will be in attendance the Duke of Connaught, members of the cabinet and corps diplomatique.

The rush for tickets has already begun. There will be only nine hundred seats available for ordinary civilians. Canadian troops from the training camps, Canadian nurses and wounded soldiers will be placed in the transepts. The centre aisle or nave will be lined with Canadians for the procession of their Majesties from the west door.

Wolfe's tomb in the abbey is pretty well covered with Canadian colors now deposited there by battalions before proceeding to the war area.

WILL RELEASE ALL PRISONERS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, June 15. — It was announced in the Commons this afternoon that the government had decided to release all prisoners taken during the Irish rebellion of Easter Sunday a year ago.

In making the above announcement, Bonar Law, the government's spokesman in the Commons, said all Irish prisoners would be released without reservation.

ONTARIO HAS SEVEN SINGLE MEN TO EVERY FOUR IN QUEBEC

Under Conscription Bill Latter Province Will Have Advantage as Men Are Married as a Rule Earlier There Than in Ontario.

OTTAWA, June 15.—Government figures from the census of 1911 show that in that year there were in Canada slightly over one million and a half males between 20 and 25— the ages included in Sir Robert Borden's Military Service bill. The Government believes that there have since been additions to the male population which offset the number who have enlisted, so that conditions on the whole today are numerically somewhat similar to 1911, though this will not hold true for some Provinces. This belief, however, is assuredly modified by the fact that the soldiers who have gone overseas—about 360,000 including reservists—were men physically fit, while only a percentage of the additions to population have been in this category. The figures for 1911 included 286,062 men of foreign birth, of whom only about 115,000 had been naturalized. The remainder would, therefore, be unavailable for military service.

Only 100,000 Wanted.

The Government, however, wants only 100,000 men, and hopes to get them from the first three classes mentioned in the bill. These are:

Class 1. (Unmarried), age 20-23.
Class 2. (Unmarried), age 24-28.
Class 3. (Unmarried), age 29-34

In other words, it is hoped that no married men will have to be taken. Classes 4, 5 and 6 are made up of married men of ages corresponding to those in Classes 1, 2 and 3. It is interesting to note what figures for the first three classes (unmarried men, ages 20-34) are available from the census of 1911.

In that year, there were 636,746 single men of that age in Canada. Just as the 1,583,549 were reduced to 1,000,000 by various specific causes so the 636,746 must be reduced to about 400,000. That is, the 1911 figures furnish an expectation of 400,000 men in 1917 plus additions to population and minus exemptions for physical unfitness, financial obligations, necessity for work at home, etc. Can Canada get 100,000 out of the "over-400,000"? That is the question.

The Figures by Provinces.

Here are the figures of 1911 divided Provincially. The first two columns show the total of single and married men between the ages of 20 and 45, while the column to the right enumerates the men in the first three classes of the Borden bill, from whom it is hoped to get the entire draft of 100,000.

QUEBEC EDITOR SAYS THAT CONFEDERATION IS FATAL FOR FRENCH CANADIANS

He Boldly Advocates the Destruction of Confederation---Characterizes French Canadians as Nothing But Valets of Modernized Rapacious Jews.

Editor Joseph Begin has emerged from the shelter of subterfuge and inuendo and through his journal boldly asserted that French-Canadians are but valets to their English brethren, whom he characterizes as nothing better than a race of rapacious Jews. His paper, La Croix, circulates largely amongst the French-Canadian clergy, and its utterances as below are taken by English-speaking residents in Quebec to be an agitation for an insurrection, with a view to the destruction of Confederation.

The despatch in this connection reads as follows:

Montreal, June 15.—The paper La Croix, which circulates almost solely amongst French-Canadian clergy, comes out boldly for the destruction of Confederation. The editor, Mr. Joseph Begin, writes that Confederation has been fatal for fifty years to French-Canadians. "From being pioneers of this beautiful country," the editor says, "we have become valets of a race which pretends to be superior, but which is nothing more than a modernized product of rapacious Jews."

ENEMY ADMITS RETIREMENT

LONDON, June 15.—The British armed merchant cruiser "Avenger" was torpedoed and sunk in the North Sea on Wednesday night. All but one were saved.

MERCY FOR UNFORTUNATE VICTIM OF DRUG HABIT

Judge. Huycke Sends Minnie Burns to Mercer Reformatory for Twenty Months---Was Convicted of Forgery.

Minnie Burns, who was found guilty of forging a name to the mail register of the Norwood Post Office, was this morning sentenced to 20 months in the Mercer Reformatory. On the other two charges to which she pleaded guilty a similar sentence was given and the sentences will run concurrently.

When Crown Attorney Hatton moved for sentence at the opening of the court this morning, Mr. Wearing, on behalf of the prisoner, made a very strong plea for leniency and asked the court to have her sent to some institution which was more of a hospital than a penal institution as he had come to the conclusion that the woman was guilty and it was only to protect her rights that he had entered the plea of "Not Guilty" to the charge on which she was convicted. Mr. Wearing went still further and stated that he was of the opinion that she was not responsible for her actions being what is commonly known as a "Dope fiend" and he had heard on good authority that she had been able to take eight quarter grain morphine tablets at one dose without effect and one tablet was usually more than one person could handle. He asked that Dr. Morgan be heard on the effect that the drug had on the defendant.

Dr. Morgan read an extract from one of the leading authorities on the effect that laudnam had on the system and also stated that it was this drug that the prisoner was most addicted to. He recommended a period of confinement with proper treatment in order that her system could be rid of the drug. It took different periods of treatment for different people.

Judge Huycke then called the defendant and in his characteristic kind manner told her that the court was going to send her to a place where she would get a proper treatment for the unfortunate habit which she had acquired and he had made the term long enough so that a permanent cure would be assured. If a cure was made certain at a shorter period he would give instructions that she be liberated.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, JUNE 15, 1917

THE PROPOSED INCOME TAX.

SIR THOMAS WHITE has not faced right about in deciding to impose a Federal tax on incomes. On May 22 last, in an address in the House, he said that he had given the matter his most careful consideration, and that he had reached the conclusion that it was not desirable at present to impose a tax on incomes. The reason he gave was that if the same scale were adopted as that used in the United States, the total receipts from this source would not exceed eight million dollars a year, and that a large percentage of that would be swallowed up by the cost of collection. He believed further that the levying of an income tax would have a tendency to diminish the contributions to the Red Cross and other patriotic funds. He added, however:

> "We may find it necessary to resort to an income tax, and if we find it necessary, for my part, I will not hesitate to resort to it."

The necessity has arisen, and Sir Thomas White has not hesitated. The details of the proposed income tax have not yet been announced, but if the same scale is adopted as that which is in force in the United States, incomes below $3000 will be exempt. The Federal tax on an income of that amount would be $20, and the municipality besides will continue to exact its toll as at present.

THE MANUFACTURERS.

NO MAN IN CANADA, whether he be in public or private life, need plume himself if he advocates the conscription of wealth. His position is neither original nor peculiar. There are others beyond all question of the same mind. Even the members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, now in annual session at Winnipeg, the men who are popularly supposed to represent the wealth of the country, have endorsed the Conscription Bill now before Parliament, and this action was taken with the knowledge that the conscription of wealth is to follow.

The manufacturers have appealed to the Government to take up the construction of locomotives and freight cars, these to be sold or rented to the railway companies with a view to relieving the transportation congestion. This is of a piece with the policy adopted by the people. In all matters which get beyond private control they are given to appeal to the powers higher up to take action, even though the same difficulties may beset the Government as are encountered by the individual. The householders of Toronto, unable to secure an adequate supply of coal, asked the municipal authorities to take action. The mayor did as requested, and headed a civic delegation to the coal mines in the United States. He now announces that the authorities are unable to secure any better terms than the dealers, and that the consumers will be obliged to depend upon the latter as usual for their supply of fuel. What success Peterborough is likely to meet with in the same line of endeavor has yet to be disclosed.

The railway companies claim that owing to disturbed industrial conditions they are unable to get rolling stock as required to handle the business of the country. Labor is scarce and capital is largely tied up in work directly conected with the war.

The Government is likely to be faced by these same difficulties, and the prospects for relief as suggested by th manufacturers are dim.

WHEN MEN ARE CONSCRIPTED.

THE UNITED STATES Government set a day when all men of military age were required to register, and the number that responded was over ten millions. A call has gone out for volunteers to bring the regular army up to three hundred thousand, the war strength as provided by a recent Act of Congress. Recruits are offering themselves in all the stations in the country, and that without compulsion. Every man who enters the service over there under that call is no more of a conscript i athe accepted meaning of that term than if there was no such thing as a selective draft law in existence.

It is likely that the same condition will prevail in Canada when the Military Service Bill goes into operation. Men will still be given a chance to volunteer. If a citizen is summoned for jury duty or to put in statute labor, he knows the consequences if he ignores the call. Still, the man who goes voluntarily is not in the same class as the one who is dragged to his duty by an officer of the law. There is a distinction between the man who pays his taxes voluntarily and the one who does so after legal proceedings have been taken against him.

When the draft is in operation the Government could call for volunteers from the first class of eligibles, unmarried men between the ages of 20 and 23 years. There is nothing to prevent a voluntary response, and any man who enlisted under such circumstances could not fairly be regarded as a conscript, although it must be admitted that he misses that grade by a narrow margin.

It has been urged as an objection to the bill that no provision has been made for registration. It may transpire, however, that all that is necessary in this regard has already been done. In Peterborough, city and district, the military officers have made a thorough canvass of all the men eligible for military service, and if the call went out for one hundred men of any particular class in this city, it would be an easy matter to locate them. The same thorough enumeration has been made in every military district in the province.

LABOR AND CONSCRIPTION.

SKILLED LABOR is scarce, and the reason is not far to seek. Sixty-five per cent. of Canada's enlisted men were wage-earners when the war broke out. The Typographical Union alone has sent 500 men to the front, and is maintaining their standing in the organization during their absence. The International Typographical Union has just invested $70,000 in American war bonds. Three hundred printers have already enlisted in the United States.

Any man who says that union labor is opposed to the war or to conscription on principle misrepresents the working classes. All they insist upon is the reasonable condition that the wealthy classes be made to carry their just share of the burdens that the war entails.

WHEN THE DRAFT IS IN OPERATION.

But the conscription of the eligible manhood of the nation should not be embarrassed by an attempt to tack onto it the conscription of wealth...The sooner the Government gives the country a measure of conscription of wealth the better, but let us take what we can get first...The conscription of wealth is important, but it is not as pressingly urgent as conscription of men for the sustaining of the Canadian divisions in France.

THE ABOVE is the conclusion reached by the Ottawa Journal, the organ of the Conservative party in Ottawa, in a long editorial dealing with the Conscription Bill now before the House and with the attitude taken the other day by Captain Burnham of Peterborough. It will be noticed that the Journal and the members of the Conservative party in this district, as reflected recently in The Review, are in accord. The text of the editorial, which leads up to the statement quoted, is as follows:

MR. BURNHAM'S ACTION.

"J. H. Burnham, M.P., desires the conscription of both the men and the wealth of Canada for the prosecution of the war. Premier Borden and his Government are prepared to proceed at once to the conscription of men, but because they have not provided for the conscription of wealth also, Mr. Burnham declines to support their measure. He has resigned the candidacy of his constituency for the next election as a supporter of the Government.

"Although standing very strongly on the argument that it is unfair to the masses to conscript their services for warfare without requiring from a very large section of the people a part of that which they have only to give, their wealth, and advancing this argument as the reason for his declining to support the measure of conscription proposed by the Government, we do not imagine that Mr. Burnham is opposed to the adoption of the conscription bill as introduced by the Premier, even though it does not go to the length he would have it go. Rather, we think, is he so confident of the adoption of the measure that he feels safe in taking the course he has taken with a view of bringing to an issue the question of the conscription of wealth also. If this is the purpose of the Peterborough member, his action will probably be of some effect. It is to be hoped it will be, at any rate.

"We agree with Mr. Burnham that it is grossly unfair to require the only thing the great majority have, their service, while taking no toll from those who have no service to be taken, but have, instead, wealth that is needed. But we have a stronger reason for desiring the conscription of wealth. It is that the country requires this wealth to carry on the war and to minimize as far as possible the burden that must be laid upon the future for the cost of the war. It is entirely inequitable that the life of one man should be taken for the country while another man whose life cannot be employed for the country's cause should not be compelled to contribute of his surplus riches. But there would be less concern about this were it not that wealth as well as service is needed. The question of national necessity is greater, we think, than that of sectional equality of treatment. Many of us could endure the thought of some of the people of Canada escaping their share of the war task so long as the task was being properly carried out. We cannot so complacently view an inadequate carrying out of the task due to this condition."

KEEP THIS THOUGHT UPPERMOST.

(Guelph Herald)

The duty of Parliament is clear with regard to endeavoring to remedy any defects that may prevent the conscription measure being easily workable, but very few of these are so far observable. To constructive criticism there can be no objection, but very serious denunciation will follow any attempt to delay the bill or to bring its operations under suspicion.

There is no doubt that if the Premier can assure the country of another measure to conscript the wealth of the nation as well as its manhood for war purposes, a great deal of additional public approval will be the result, but it should always be kept in mind that the first duty to Canadians is to secure reinforcements for overseas and utilize the man power of the nation as best it may be. Let that thought be kept uppermost.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THE TROUBLE with the peace made between the unionists and the antis is that it is inconclusive.

SEEING THAT THE WAR has so far resulted in the retirement of two despots, all this sacrifice has not been entirely in vain.

ONTARIO HAS

Quebec Has Advantage.

The figures for Ontario and Quebec are particularly interesting, though they are now modified, for comparative purposes, by Ontario's much larger participation in the war.

It will be noted, for instance, that in 1911, the single men of military age in Quebec and Ontario were in the ration of about 2 to 3 1-2 while the married men were in the ratio of about 2 to 2 3-4. In other words, Quebec has a tremendous advantage when only unmarried men are taken, as a far greater proportion of those in that Province are married. The actual figures as to how this would work out on the 1911 figures for the first three classes (unmarried) and the second three classes (4, 5, 6, married), are available as follows:

	Ont.	Que.
First three classes	201,400	123,331
Second three classes	148,024	112,310

Ontario's 7 to Quebec's 4.

A glance at these figures shows that if only the first three classes are called out. Ontario is likely to furnish about seven men to Quebec's four, though on the second three (married) classes; Ontario would be called on to furnish only about five men to Quebec's four.

A comparison of men in the two Provinces in 1911 between 20 and 34 (single), or, in other words, those of the first three military classes, is given by origin as follows:

	Ontario	Quebec
Canadian	140,673	170,405
British	36,593	7,573
Foreign	24,134	8,853
Total	201,400	123,831

These figures show that in these classes Quebec had one British to fifteen Canadians, while Ontario had one British to four Canadians. Such statistics to some degree bear out Quebec's contention that Ontario would naturally contribute a larger proportion of men to an expeditionary force.

Need For Reinforcements.

As to the number of men required by Canada for reinforcements, statistics from the front are rather unsatisfactory. Here are some of the figures from recent official returns and statements:

Canada has enlisted	411,000
Canada sent overseas	360,000
Or, excluding reservists	326,000
Casualties to date	100,000
Men in France, about	180,000
Men in trenches, about	88,000

It is impossible to deduce from these figures the number of Canadian troops in England, which are estimated by some authorities at 100,000. About 60 per cent of the casualties are said to be finally restored to the fighting line. Of the men sent overseas, a large number have been rejected in England, or transferred to non-combatant units. Besides the four divisions in the trenches, Canada is required to keep a large number of men in reserve building railways, etc.

Compare Casualties and Enlistments

The way to judge the need of men is to compare casualties with enlistments. From June 30, 1916, to June 5, 1917. Canada enlisted 74,510, of whom many men would finally be rejected or sent to do non-combatant work. Her casualties were 65,600. For April and May of this year, the figures are even more startling, namely:

Casualties	23,930
Enlistments	11,790

Of the enlistments many were in construction units.

Sir Robert Borden says Canada's resources at the front are sufficient for "several months." And enlistment has nearly ceased, while casualties are piling up. That is why conscription is necessary.

Rev. T. H. Mitchell At St. Andrews

FORMER PASTOR WILL DELIVER ANNIVERSARY SERMONS SUNDAY.

Rev. T. H. Mitchell, now pastor of Old St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, will preach anniversary sermons next Sunday in St. Andrew's Church in this city, his former charge. Large crowds are expected morning and evening to hear this popular preacher.

A member of Mr. Mitchell's congregation at St. Andrew's has presented him with an automobile in the use of which he soon became an expert and the car is a valuable asset to him in his pastorial work which is one of the largest congregations in Canada.

The congregation of St. Andrew's will hold a reception in the school room Monday evening to give all the members and adherents a chance to personally meet Rev. and Mrs. W. L. H. Rowand, who have recently settled in the Manse. Mr. Mitchell will probably remain over for the reception to meet his old friends.

Mr. Rowand will preach the sermon tonight at St. Paul's in the preparatory service for the communion next Sunday and will baptize the infant child of Rev. and Mrs. Pogue.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: As a reader of your most excellent paper I beg to say that in my judgment you are making a most serious mistake in the best interests of your paper, also the Conservative party in the way you are handling this matter in reference to our most worthy representative, Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P. There is a feeling among the best men of the Conservative party that a certain element who profess to be loyal are more interested in a desire to advance their own interests than they are to consider the best interests of our country at this most trying time Capt. Burnham's friends are legion, and they will see that he is not side-stepped to please the wishes of his traducers.

DIRECTIONS FOR COOKING FISH

HOW TO BOIL FISH.

The correct way to boil fish is to plunge it into boiling water for a minute or two, then cool down by withdrawing a little of the liquor and adding cold water and cooking slowly. This extracts the minimum of flavor from the fish, and is the surest way of preventing the outside of the fish being overdone while the inside is uncooked. Use as little water as possible and plenty of salt. By the addition of a little vinegar the fish is kept firm and white.

Allow about ten minutes for each pound of fish, and fifteen minutes over if the fish is large. A medium sized fish usually takes from fifteen to twenty minutes to boil. When cooked it should have a creamy appearance and come easily from the bones.

The boiled fish should be well drained and should not be served until the last moment. Any scum that gathers on the surface of the water should be skimmed off before lifting out the fish. An added flavor is got by the addition of shallots, onions or horseradish to the water.

Steaming, especially for small fish and small pieces of fish, is a superior method of cooking to boiling. Boiling, no matter how carefully done, extracts a certain amount of nutriment and flavor.

HOW TO BAKE FISH.

The best fresh-water fish to bake are whitefish, pike, burbot, carp, or any having white flesh. If fish is slimy, like pike, scald with hot water before attempting to clean. Clean, wash and wipe dry the fish. Rub with salt inside and out.

To keep the fish moist as well as to season it, stuff with any good dressing and sew up with soft cotton, leaving knot at one end so that the cotton can easily be removed before serving. Rub the fish all over with soft butter, salt and pepper. Put gashes about two inches apart and place narrow strips of salt pork in them. Dredge with flower and put in hot oven without water, basting with hot water and butter as soon as it begins to brown. Baste every ten minutes. Serve on a hot platter, removing the string and the pieces of pork.

If desired, a drawn butter sauce may be served with the fish, and the fish may be garnished with parsley or watercress.

HOW THEY FRL FISH

There are three ways of preparing fish for frying. First, by dipping it in milk; second, by coating it with prepared batter, and, third, by egging and crumbing. The last is considered the nicest, but is also the most expensive method.

For deep fat frying, the pan used should contain sufficient fat to thoroughly cover the fish. Dripping lard or oil can be used for frying purposes. The fat must be quite hot—in fact, be smoking—before the fish is put in, so as to harden the outside, thus preventing the fat from entering into the fish, which would spoil the flavor and make it indigestible.

Only a small quantity of fish should be fried at a time, and the fat should be allowed to get thoroughly hot before the next lot is put in. As soon as the fish is brown on both sides, drain it on paper or a cloth, so as to absorb all the fat. It should then be served on a folded paper, and placed on a hot dish.

When the frying is ended, allow the fat to cool a little, strain it to remove any loose crumbs or bits of batter, and the fat will be quite fit for future use.

For ordinary family use, a good tablespoonful of dripping or lard in the pan is sufficient. If the fish sticks to the pan, add a little more fat. Brown both sides well, then cover the pan and cook thoroughly with slow heat.

FISH KEDGEREE.

2 tablespoonfuls rice, boiled 20 minutees.

small piece of butter,

1 teaspoonful of corn starch mixed in three tablespoonfuls of milk.

Flake cold cooked fish and add to the above. When all is ready, add a well-beaten egg and stir until thoroughly hot. Serve on toast after seasoning to taste.

Some men would rather sleep an hour longer than to wake up and find themselves famous.

HOW TO PICKLE FISH.

Cut the fish into ordinary sized pieces, sprinkle well with salt and let stand half an hour. For every three pounds of fish put in a granite kettle:

1½ large cupfuls water,

1 large tablespoonful of unground white peppers,

1 teaspoonful of ground mace

a little cayenne pepper,

salt to taste.

Let this simmer a few minutes, then add 1½ cupfuls of white wine vinegar and let come to a boil. Then put in the fish and boil. A few minutes will cook it. Put fish in a tureen, pour liquor over it, cover and keep in a cool place. Serve cold.

SCALLOPED FISH.

Flake any cold fish. Make an ordinary white sauce one tablespoonful each of butter and flour to one cup of milk. In a bake dish place in layers the flaked fish, some bread crumbs and sufficient white sauce to moisten well. Dot with butter on top. Bake about half an hour.

FISH BALLS.

Mix flaked fish and mashed potatoes with one egg, salt and pepper to taste. If not sufficiently moist, add milk. Make into balls and fry in lard or butter.

RED CHROSS CHRONICLES

At the regular monthly executive meeting of the local Red Cross Society held Monday afternoon, June 11, most gratifying reports were given by the convenors of the various committees. In view of the continued severe fighting, with heavy casualties and in answer to an urgent appeal from headquarters, a special effort had been made, not only to avoid a cessation of work during the summer but to assure an increase in the supplies, which are so seriously needed. A magnificent response had been made by all the auxiliaries to this call, for each one had voluntarily pledged itself to increase its work substantially and to concentrate on those articles, which are most urgently asked for. In fact in most of the societies, this special effort had been already instituted with excellent results.

It will no doubt be a source of comfort to most of us, to feel that while our brave boys are fighting, during these commonly-called vacation months, the women at home are likewise doing their bit and doing it gladly to make things a little easier for the men in the trenches and to add to the comfort of the sick and wounded.

Mrs Scott's Generosity.

The convenor of the Supplies' Committee reported that a sufficient supply of yarn and materials to carry on the work for the remainder of the year had been already purchased. This in view of the probable scarcity and even famine in some lines was a matter for congratulations. Mrs. Scott has most generously undertaken to cut out all dessing gowns required, and any auxiliary or individual worker desirous of making these may procure the material now from Mrs. Scott.

The convenor of the sock committee reported for May, a total of 574 pairs of socks, of which 368 pairs were machine-knit and 129 pairs hand-knit. Of these latter 77 pairs were donations from the following auxiliaries and societies: Murray Street, 14 pairs; Lakehurst, 45 pairs and St. Paul's, 18 pairs.

The convenor of the packing committee reported 25 cases as having been shipped during May, containing the following: 40 day shirts, 3 dressing gowns, 15 jackets, 122 pairs pyjamas, 558 pairs socks, 126 pairs C.W.C.A., 540 sheets, 1046 towels, 272 pillow cases.

The following societies and branches had contributed: St. Andrew's P. S., Bereau Bible Class, Buckhorn, Murray Street Baptist Church, St. Paul's Auxiliary, Y.M.C.A. Mothers' Club, Trinity Methodist and St. Peter's P. S.

It is a matter for sincere thankfulness that all shipments up to date had left Montreal and that an official report of the safe arrival of the ships in England had been received.

A Convalescent Home.

In view of the present discussion and agitation over the establishing and equipping of a convalescent hospital in this city, the following extract from a communication received by the local society from headquarters should be of considerable interest: "The executive committee of the Canadian Red Cross has entered into arrangements with the Army Medical Corps and the Military Hospitals Commission. whereby the Society shall assist in the work of caring for sick and wounded soldiers in Canada as well as overseas, such work being within the scope laid down by the Charter.

After correspondence with the Departments and a conference with representatives of the Army Medical Corps and the Commission, it was arranged that the society should invite the commanding officer of Military Hospitals to "indent" (or requisition) on the Red Cros sin Canada, as is done overseas, with the object of rendering the military hospitals in Canada more homelike and efficient by providing extra comforts and equipment not included in the stores issued by the government. In an emergency, the Red Cross might be also required to assist the hospitals by providing further necessaries for a sudden increase in the number of patients for whom ordnance stores are not immediately available, and who might suffer if required to wait for an issue from the Government stores. "Extra" and "emergency" are two words which give a clue to the kind of service for which the military hospitals should look to the Red Cross and which the Red Cross is prepared to supply.

What the Red Cross is Doing.

Many still ask, what is the Canadian Red Cross doing for our boys at the front and does it reach any save those in the hospitals? It is interesting here to note some extracts from a little story told in connection with the 3rd battle of Ypres by Col. E. B. Hardy, D.S.O., who signs himself rightly "One Who Knows." "Picture the battle going on for days, a most terrific rain of shells, nerve-wrecking cannonading and continuous rifle and machine gun fire. Every now and then a brilliant charge by our brave boys and more ground gained. It was not easy, far from it, and many were the casualties with never a groan or a regret. Each man fought on until exhausted. A few miles in the rear was a field ambulance, acting as a rest station for slightly wounded and worn out, exhausted troops. We had room only for 200 but as the battle went on we arranged accommodation in barns, stables and sheds, until more than 600 were in our care.

What did we do for them? and how did the Red Cross help us? As each lorrie drove up, the men tumbled out tired, exhausted and nerve-shaken and then a big bowl of soup or a hot drink of Red Cross cocoa was given each man. Then into the doctor's hands they went, where their wet, mud-covered clothing was removed and any necessary dressings fixed up with Red Cross dressings. Then a good shower bath with Red Cross soap, dried on a Red Cross towel, and into a suit of Red Cross pyjamas and a pair of Red Cross slippers:

Now for a good hot meal, army rations, supplemented by Red Cross jam, Red Cross biscuits, Red Cross fruits, washed down by Red Cross cocoa. Then a Red Cross cigarette and rolled up into a couple of blankets and off to sleep for twenty-four hours or so. That is how we helped to save many a poor fellow from breaking down completely, for the nerve strain was awful and that is how we helped to prevent disease brought on by exposure and exhaustion.

And if you take away the Red Cross comforts, what could we have done for them. Why, you would take away all that which fills in the gap between the necessaries of life, as provided by the Army and the State which one might term "reasonable comfort."

Ladies of Canada, for it is you we think of as the backbone of the Canadian Red Cross, let me assure you that your efforts have brought back the smile of hope to many a poor wounded man in the border line between life and death and just added sufficient weight to turn the scale in the right direction."

MANAGER CAMERON LEADER IN VALIANT FIGHT ON QUACK GRASS

With Five Others he is Raising a Crop of Vegetables in the Suburbs.

Manager Cameron of the Bell Telephone Co. is never satisfied unless engaged in some forward movement, whether it has to do with industrial or civic welfare. Last winter he talked up amateur farming among the staff of the company in the interests of the production campaign, with the result that he, with five others, is now working a plot of land out on McKellar street east of Monaghan road. Any evening six or seven members of the party at least can be seen plying the hoe with all the skill of professionals. Those associated with Mr. Cameron in the venture are W. Welbourne, E. Freeman, A. A. Smith, R. Morrow and S. Long.

The plot of land under cultivation by these amateurs consists of one and one-tenth acres. Every variety of vegetables known to man is being raised, besides an abnormal crop of quack grass, which the men with the hoe are valiantly fighting. It is a stern struggle between the forces of Nature and human power, but intelligence combined with muscular energy is sure to win in the end. The man who leaves but a single blade of quack grass where millions grew before is rendering his country a valuable service.

More Aid to Production.

The employes of the C. G. E. are farming a plot of about twenty acres not far from the agricultural venture of Mr. Cameron and his colleagues. The use of this land has been donated by Mr. C. H. Pennefather of the Union Bank, without any conditions such as the payment of taxes and the surrender of the property at any time in case it is sold. The owners of the various plots are taking an interest in the work, and their potatoes are already making a fine showing.

No, Eleanor, it isn't necessary to act foolish in order to live the simple life.

WROTE LETTER WHILE ON BRINK OF HIS OWN GRAVE

Pte. Ross Campbell's Touching Epistle to His Father Written in the Prospect of Death in Battle.

The late Private Ross Campbell was in the war zone waiting for the order to go into action when, on February 29th last, he wrote the following touching and moving letter to his father, Mr. Peter A. Campbell, of Argyle Street. The young man knew that the chances were against him and the letter, which was to be forwarded in case of his death, was designed to comfort the father in his bereavement. At the Battle of Vimy Ridge the young man met his fate and the letter was sent. It was as follows:—

Dear Father,—I am writing this hoping that it may not be necessary for you to read it, but having seen the terrible destructive power of these implements of modern warfare I am certain that our casualties will be very heavy in the coming drive, by which we hope to defeat the enemy and bring about a permanent peace. If it is my lot to go as thousands of others have done, this letter may be of some comfort to you in your hour of sorrow.

As you know it was my wish to enlist in the first months of the war, but home ties and my duty towards you were hard to break, the duty made more pressing by your ill-health and the ties more tender by the fact of your being a mother as well as a father to me for many years. The country's call was always in my mind, and my conscience gave me no rest as I read the casualty lists which contained the names of many married men who left their wives and families to fight for the freedom of the world; and I am convinced more to-day than ever before that our cause is just, although we have not lived as a people and a nation as we should have done, and I will gladly give my life to protect the women, children and old men of Canada from the treatment that the French refugees met with while held by German soldiers. If the Germans were able to defeat the allied armies, which, thanks to the splendid response to the call of duty in the early months and our present wonderful organization, is hardly possible, Canada's fate would be worse than that of Belgium or France, as their feeling towards us is more bitter. Our safety lies with the allied armies, as no unprepared country could check such a wonderful military organization as Germany. The peace and prosperity the home folks are enjoying is being kept by the allied soldiers in these bloody fields of Europe, and each drop of Canadian blood that spills in France and Belgium makes the debt towards the soldiers' wives and families greater on the part of the Canadians at home. To those of us who have seen men dead and dying, many of them mangled beyond description, there is little glory in war. It's Hell, if not worse, but a worse fate waits those who are enjoyng peace and all its blessings, if they fail to care for any dependents of these brave fellows who are lying out here.

The fact of our working together for years without a harsh word is a great comfort to me now. I have often caused you pain, but you always spoke kindly to me. Others have told me that if I would grow up as good a man as you I would be all right. Your life and what I have learned in Sunday school is a great help to me now, since coming into the army and especially since leaving Canada. Home training never fails to help one after leaving home. Although I have made many mistakes, home thoughts always help to overcome the many temptations which have come my way, and if it is God's will to bring me through, as He has done during the past months, I hope to return a better man. If He wills otherwise, read this passage which I read yesterday (Luke 17-30) and I think it will help you, as it did me.

Please forgive my mistakes and the trouble I have caused you.

Your loving son,
ROSS.

The passage of Scripture to which the young man referred is as follows: "Whosoever shall seek to save his life shall lose it, and whosoever shall lose his life shall preserve it."

Pay Your Debt To Your Defenders

Turn Your Luxuries Into Comforts For Those Who Have Sacrificed Most.

"Self-sacrifice, self-denial and service lie at the basis of the highest personal and national development."
Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance.

Is it nothing to you that men from all round you have sacrificed home and salary, safety and life, to defend your home as well as their own?

Is it nothing to you that their wives and families tremblingly scan each casualty list, and pale at the step of the postman or telegraph messenger?

Can you see others giving their dearest, without feeling that you must do something yourself? Do you wonder what to do?

You can at least save—and lend your savings to the nation. Canada needs every dollar her loyal sons and daughters can spare, to meet the growing expenses of the struggle.

Every dollar you invest in Canadian War Savings Certificates helps the nation to deal generously with those who are defending you.

Certificates in denominations of $25, $50 and $100, repayable in three years, may be purchased at any Bank or Money Order Post Office at $21.50, $43 and $86 respectively. This means over 5% interest—making them a profitable as well as a patriotic investment.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations

The sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, who was at the commencement of the present war, and has since continued to be, a British subject or a subject of an allied or neutral country, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for District. Entry by proxy may be made on certain conditions. Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of land in each of three years.

In certain districts a homesteader may secure an adjoining quarter-section as pre-emption. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate 50 acres extra. May obtain pre-emption patent as soon as homestead patent on certain conditions.

A settler after obtaining homestead patent, if he cannot serve a pre-emption, may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Holders of entries may count time of employment as farm laborers in Canada during 1917, as residence duties under certain conditions.

When Dominion Lands are advertised or posted for entry, returned soldiers who have served overseas and have been honorably discharged, receive one day priority in applying for entry at local Agent's Office (but not Sub-Agency). Discharge papers must be presented to Agent.

Deputy Minister of the Interior.

WHY Does Your Head Ache?

Headaches, sick or other kinds, don't happen to people whose livers are busy and whose bowels are as regular as a clock.

Thousands of folks who used to have headaches say this is the way they removed the cause:

One pill at bedtime, regularly. Larger dose if there's a suspicion of biliousness or constipation.

PTE. TOM WELLER WRITES HOME

Sergt. Reid of the Police Department has received the following letter from Private Tom Weller, a former member of the local police force and now on active duty "Somewhere in France":

Somewhere in France,
May 22, 1917.

"Hello, Jim."

Just a few lines hoping they will find you in the best of health and the wife and family. Give my regards to the Chief and all the boys. I guess you have a few new faces on the Force. I am in the best of of health. I have met a few of the Peterborough boys on my travels. Things are going on about the same. You know Jim our Battalion was broken up when we reached England. Do you get me? This is my address, and don't forget, 862235 B. Company, 123rd Canadian Pioneers Battalion, B.E.F., France.

I threw up the stripes long ago. We had to to get across so I should worry. Well, how is Peterborough looking? Say, I would not mind being on the old beat for a change. what say, The wife is O.K. She is down to Peterborough once in a while. She has told me she has seen mother.

Well, Jim, do you get many drunks now? Not like the old times. We have to be careful about news, so you can guess what it is like. I hope they will soon wind up and get back to civilian life once again. Remember me to all. Tell them I am still alive and kicking. Well, Jim, I think this will do for this time so cheer up, old boy, and think of me once in a while on the old beat. Well, I'll say au revoir. From your old friend, Ex-P.C. T. W.

TOM WELLER.

AN INSURANCE PROBLEM

Conscripted Men Will Have To Pay Increased Premiums

OTTAWA, June 15.—Who should pay the extra premiums called for by insurance companies in cases of policy-holders conscripted for war service is a matter which the government has not yet considered. It seems very doubtful that the government will discriminate between the policy-holder who volunteered and the one who has to be forced.

Nothing was done for the former, and it will require considerable argument before any such a thing is taken regarding the conscript.

Well, Gus Gets is aggain working under the knowing eye of Tom Needham, of the Newark Club, which sold him to the Brooklyns three years ago. The latter recently turned him over to the Cincinnati Reds, who in turn sent him back to the Newarks.

CITY CAN'T GET COAL

Toronto Consumers Must Rely On Private Dealers

Following a private meeting of the Board of Control in Toronto, Mayor Church made the announcement that owing to the coal situation, the City of Toronto could not be responsible for supplies of coal for citizens. He said that Works Commissioner Harris and himself had been authorized to confer with the Federal authorities with a view of having the United States and Canadian Governments co-operate to regulate coal prices and facilitate the movement of coal supplies.

"The city will take every precaution to get a reasonable supply of coal for emergency cases during the winter months," said the Mayor. The visit of Property Commissioner, Ald. Robbins, and myself to the United States, was not a failure. We went over there to make a survey of the situation. We have authorized Mr. Chisholm to get a supply for civic buildings. The citizens should understand that there is no occasion to be panicky over the situation, and it will right itself before long."

MASON'S MELODIES

The farmer gladly toils all day, producing things we need, and in the fall he'll thresh his hay and sell his nutmeg [illegible]. The farmer's hogs are fine as silk and they're acquiring lard; his cows are all producing milk and butter by the yard. The farmer's hens are laying shells with golden yolks inside; the farmer's steers are wearing bells, each with its glossy hide. The farmer asks a decent price for products of the earth; he doesn't think to charge us twice as much as they are worth. If we could to the farmer go for things he has to sell we wouldn't crumple in our woe beneath H. C. of L. But speculators come between the farmer and the crowd, and so we pay the good long green and groan and swear aloud. I like to see the farmer get high prices when he can; he earns his coin in toil and sweat, he is an honest man. But 'twixt the farmer and the push the gambler often stands, a robber reaching for the cush with both his greedy hands. And though the land with plenty teems there's famine all around; by gamblers and their foolish schemes our weary souls are ground.

WALT MASON.

A fine epi[illegible] won't boost a man through the golden gates.

London newspapers say that General Smuts, the celebrated Boer leader, has been invited to join the War Cabinet.

Some marriages are failures because the contracting parties quit dishing out polite falsehoods after the ceremony.

It is easy for the millionaire to believe that contentment is better than wealth, for he finds it harder to acquire.

OBITUARY

MRS. F. J. SAWERS.

Deep sorrow was felt in Peterborough at the news received this morning of the death in Cobourg of Bertha Harding Smythe, beloved wife of Rev. F. J. Sawers, rector of St. Peter's Church, Cobourg. The earnest sympathy of the city and community will go out to Rev. Mr. Sawers and the family and friends in this city in the loss that has come to them. Mrs. Sawers was, previous to her marriage, a resident of Montreal, a daughter of Mr. Charles Smythe of that city, where she met Mr. Sawers, when he was curate to Rev. H. Symonds of Christ Church Cathedral. After her marriage she resided some time in Lakefield, later removing to the rectory, St. Luke's, Ashburnham. During her three years' residence here, though as an invalid, her life was retired, she attracted a very large circle of friends who will learn with keen sorrow of her passing away. After her removal to Cobourg Mrs. Sawer's condition of health did not improve and the end came on Thursday. The funeral service will take place in Cobourg at 2 p.m. on Saturday, June 16th.

Antis Assault Wounded Soldiers

(Canadian Press Drespatch.)

MONTREAL, June 16. — Rioting by those opposed to conscription was resumed in this locality last night, when a crowd of five hundred men from Cote St. Paul, a suburb of Montreal, entered Verdun, a nearby municipality, and paraded the streets. Wounded soldiers were assaulted. One man was arrested for flourishing a revolver, and fined $25 in the police court this morning. A number of windows on the main street of the town were smashed.

NO SPARRING IN A CRISIS

((Belleville Intelligencer.)

Capt. Burnham, member of parliament for West Peterborough has resigned his prospective renomination for the House of Commons; but that does not satisfy the people of Peterborough. If Capt. Burnham cannot give a whole hearted support to Sir Robert Borden's win-the-war proposals the people of Peterborough want Capt. Burnham to step down and out now and his place will be filled by a non-partizan all-Canadian who will not cavil at government measures not going far enough or going too far, but will be content to do one thing at a time and do it well.

Capt. Burnham believes in conscription, but apparently is disgruntled because his idea of a conscription bill complicated with sequestration of wealth, property and materials is not adopted.

The Peterborough Review states that a demand will be made upon Capt. Burnham by his constituents to resign his seat at once if he finds himself out of accord with the government, and it is proposed to hold a public meeting in Peterborough under the auspices of the Patriotic League to deal with the situation. Representatives of both the meeting with the object of parties will be asked to take part in forming just such a coalition in Peterborough as Premier Borden attempted to create at Ottawa and choose a parliamentary candidate who will know no politics or party and have no platform except "win the war."

Peterborough citizens are to be congratulated upon their patriotic stand and the timely notice served upon their representative in Parliament that no wobbling will be tolerated in this hour of the nation's danger.

BILL TO COME UP ON MONDAY

OTTAWA, June 16.—Sir Robert Borden expressed in the Commons his intention of proceeding with the Military Service bill on Monday. It is expected that Sr Wilfrid Laurier will open the discussion and state the position of the Liberal party on this issue. The Opposition have prepared many amendments to be moved on the second reading of the bill, but the crucial test will come on the proposal to decide the question by referendum. Sir Wilfrid and those in his party supporting this olicy are urging the conscriptionist Liberals to support the referendum proposal, at the same time giving them liberty to vote for conscription on the main motion.

LARGE ESTATE LEFT TO FAMILY OF LUMBERMAN

FORMER PETERBORO LADY ONE OF THE LEGATEES OF HER FATHER.

PEMBROKE, June 16.—In surrogate court here before His Honor Judge McNamara, probate was granted a few days ago of the will of the late Alexander Barnet, the well-known Renfrew lumberman, which disposes of an estate valued at $1,084,693.47, divided $1,010,018.47 in personal property, and $74,675 in real estate. The Royal Trust Co., as executors of the will, were the applicants for probate, Mr. E. J. Stewart, of Rrenfrew, appearing for the company. Mrs. Barnett and the deceased's two sons and four daughters, are the beneficiaries under the will, while the sum of $1,000 is bequeathed to St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Renfrew, to be used as the session may decide, and there are bequests of $1,000 and $500 to old employes and servants, including one of $500 to Mr. E. Voudette, of Pembroke, who has for many years been in Mr. Barnett's employ as bush-ranger. A grandson is also provided for. The Barnet home in Renfrew goes to Mrs. Barnet, with all its contents, to be devised by her to one of their children upon her death, while the other town real estate goes to Messrs. J. G. and T. F. Barnet, as well as the stock in the Barnet Mfg. Co., Ltd., and other property. All the members of the family share liberally in the estate. Among the late Mr. Barnet's holdings were $250,000 worth of 3 1-2 per cent. Ontario government bonds.

Daylight Saving to Come at Last

SIR GEORGE FOSTER SAYS CHANGE WILL BE MADE THIS SUMMER.

OTTAWA, June 16.—Canada is to have "daylight saving." Sir George Foster at yesterday's Parliamentary sitting introduced a Government bill "to provide for the time in Canada being in advance of the solar mean time during the summer months." He explained that it meant turning the into effest upon proclamation by the clocks on one hour, and would come Government.

Mr. A. K. Maclean asked whether it was proposed to make the bill effective during the present summer. Sir George replied in the affirmative, and intimated that the revision to solar mean time would come again with the end of September. He promised to explain the bill fully on its second reading.

Enemy Rely On Subs to Win the War

German Papers Furnished with Material to Serve Out to Their Readers.

UNITED STATES IS NEGLIGIBLE QUANTITY

Sub. and Aerial Warfare Are to Be Continued as a Final Hope.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

COPENHAGEN, June 16.—The German press were told yesterday at the weekly press conference in Berlin that no considerable number of American troops can arrive in Europe till next year and that transportation difficulties make them a negligible quantity in any event; that the Russian offensive is highly improbable but that fresh French and British offensives may be expected but without any new offensive methods.

They were told Germany's victory is certain owing to the relentless working of the submarines. Heavy estimates of French and British losses were furnished the newspapermen for the encouragement of their readers. They were told that the reason for the aerial raids on England is to keep British forces and guns in England and that the submarine warfare accomplishes similar purpose.

FOUGHT FOR TWO HOURS WITH SUB

AMERICAN ARMED MERCHANTMAN PUT UP A BRAVE DEFENCE.

WASHINGTON, June 16. — The most thrilling fight between a German submarine and an American armed merchantman yet reported to the Government at Washington was described in a cablegram received by Secretary Lansing from an unnamed point in Europe. The message briefly described a two-hour battle between the American tanker Moremi and the U-boat, and told how the submarine had to fire some 200 shots before it was able to force the crew and guard on the American tanker to abandon their vessel to the mercy of the waves. So splendid was the fight that those on board the Moremi put up against the U-boat that the German submarine captain congratulated the American captain. Four lives were lost in the battle; 43 of the crew and the steamer's armed guard were saved; six of them, wounded, are now in a European hospital. The Moremi was not abandoned until after it was ablaze, and the sea was on fire with ignited oil when the crew abandoned the vessel in their lifeboats. They were rescued by a passing steamer.

The Moremi was owned by the Standard Oil Co., and sailed from New York May 12, for Leghorn, Italy. She was a steamship of 4,045 tons gros, and was built in Bremerhaven, Germany, in 1913.

SEVERAL SUSPICIOUS CASES OF DOGS ARE TO BE INVESTIGATED.

Yesterday several cases of dogs acting in a peculiar manner were reported to the police, and steps were taken at once to have the animals enclosed in a proper place until a thorough examination of them could be made. Owners of dogs should see that their pets are carefully isolated from stray dogs, as several clear cases of rabies have been reported in this and the surrounding district.

HUN SOLDIERS ARE SHOT BY OWN OFFICERS IF THEY LAG

Volunteer While Chance Remains

(Special to The Review.)

OTTAWA, June 16.—The Ottawa Journal (Conservative) today makes a strong appeal to native Canadians to come forward in greater numbers, presumably before conscription compels them. It says the most recent official returns laid on the table of Parliament show that of 294,000 soldiers gone overseas from Canada, 14,100 were French-speaking, 155,000 were Britsh born, and only 125,000 are Canadian born. The Journal ends a very suggestive article, "The majority of our soldiers are simply a return to the British Isles of a pretty recent loan of man-power.'

COST OF LIVING STILL RISING

FAMILY BUDGET SOARED FROM $10.77 TO $11.82 DURING MAY.

OTTAWA, June 16.—The Labor Bureau reports a further increase in the cost of living during May. Grain and flour showed the greatest increases, but meats and materials were higher in many lines. The usual seasonal decreases in the prices of dairy products were very slight. In retail prices of foods the cost of a weekly family budget rose from $10.77 to $11.82. In May, 1916, the same budget cost $8.37 and in 1916 $7.84. In wholesale prices the index figures stood for May at 240, compared with 228.7 for April and 183.3 for May, 1916.

PETITION FILED BY OBJECTORS

MEN WHOSE RELIGIOUS TEACHINGS ARE OPPOSED TO BLOODSHED.

OTTAWA, June 16. — The first petition from conscientious objectors to military service, against conscription has been forwarded to W. M German, member for Welland, and is signed by a number of constituents. The signers, sixteen in number, live at Fonthill, Welland County, Ontario. In their petition they state their objections to "the principles and service of war, as indirect opposition to the principles and teachings of Jesus Christ." They believe their convictions are held by many throughout the country, but recognize that others just as sincerely hold the opposite view.

They assert that they are not prejudiced against the earnest efforts of the government in the present world struggle, but regret that such a condition exists.

They call attention to the fact that the government, in the military service measure, have recognized such conscientious objectors and ask that they and those of the like faith may be looked upon by the government and their fellowmen as loyal citizens of the country.

The report of the committee will be ready for the County Council when they assemble for their summer session on Tuesday next.

MR. SANDFORD EVANS TO BE FOOD CONTROLLER

OTTAWA, June 16. — W. Sandford Evans, chairman of the Georgian Bay Canal Commission, has been requested to accept the position of food controller for Canada during the war.

MUCH LIQUOR IS BEING SHIPPED

RECORDS SHOW ONTARIO LACKS AIRTIGHT PROHIBITION.

In accordance with the Ontario Temperance Act as amended at the last session, every railway, express company and other common carriers are required to keep at each agency within the province where goods are consigned to, an accurate record of each consignment of liquor received and every consignment of liquor made, so that the Ontario License Board may keep track of sales. The result has been amazing, and the list of shipments of liquor from outside to the Province of Ontario is formidable.

"It is quite beyond anything we anticipated," remarked a member of the board.

Men Driven to Death by Machine Guns Stationed in Rear.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

PARIS, June 16. — The Matin's correspondent in Flanders says German secret orders just captured reveal that behind each attacking section in Prince Rupprecht's army marches an officer whose duty it is to shoot laggards, and he is supported by two machine guns. The wounds of many of the German dead and the statements of prisoners prove that these guns are kept busy urging forward waves of German troops into British fire.

Fourteen German divisions participated in the last five days' fighting between Wytschaete and Warneton. Nine were decimated and the other five were hit hard. Finally four divisions were sent to the rear to rest and were replaced by troops hastened from the Russian front.

GERMANY OFFERS RUSSIA PEACE TERMS AGAIN.

STOCKHOLM, June 16. The Social Demokraten says that Germany has made an offer of peace to Russia through a member of the Swiss Federal Council.

Thos. Blott of Dunnville, has received a card from his son, William, who is a prisoner in Germany. He had been officially reported killed at Vimy Ridge.

SIR JOHN WILLISON QUITS AS EDITOR OF TORONTO NEWS

Distinguished Career of One of the Ablest Journalists Canada Has Ever Produced---Fought on Both Sides of Politics.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

TORONTO, June 16.—Sir John Willson authorises the statement that he is resigning today from the Toronto News of which he has been editor-in-chief and managing director for the past fourteen years. Sir John declined to make any further statement.

Sketch of His Career.

Sir John Willison is a native of Middlesex County and began his newspaper life on the London Advertiser. When John Cameron was taken from the management of that paper and put in charge of the Toronto Globe in 1883 he took Mr. Willison to the new field with him and the latter was for some years city editor of that paper. Eventually he succeeded his former chief and trainer as managing editor of The Globe. It must be said on his behalf that he put new life into The Globe and was the first man to adorn it in the habilaments of a modern newspaper. During his regime the Liberal party never had a more devout supporter or Sir Wilfrid Laurier an admirer quite so lavish with adulatory tributes to his greatness as a statesman.

In 1903 Mr. Willison was induced to give up his position on The Globe to take charge of the Toronto News, by the offer of a salary which was princely in those days and he accepted the offer. He was succeeded in the editorial management of The Globe by Rev. J. A. Macdonald who held the position until the autumn of 1915 and who is still on the staff as associate editor.

On assuming the management of The News Mr. Willison, who was knighted four years ago, rushed to the other political extreme and made the paper one of the most bitter partisan sheets in the Dominion. His administration has been distinguished by an intense devotion to all things imperial and he has made racal and religious differences something of a hobby. Imperial Federation has been one of his dreams, and there are those who charged him with zeal so strong he would make this country if he had his way the tail of the Imperial kite.

Sir John Willison's enemies have for years rejoiced that he wrote a book, the memoirs of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, published in the days when Sir John was still connected with The Globe and viewing politics and politicians from a different angle. Every time the News published a criticism of the Liberal chieftain it was nearly always possible to offset it, at least spoil its force by a quotation from the book that bore Sir John's name as author on the title page.

The policy of The News may or may not have been popular with the rank and file of the party. At all events Sir John Willison has met the fate of so many other newspaper men famous in former days but who have been induced to undertake an all but impossible journalistic task. All the people of Canada are not as one with the round table council in Toronto that regards as paramount any interest but that of their native land.

Sir John Willison has for a number of years been the Canadian representative of the London Times. Whether he had always fairly reproduced public opinion in this country is simply another moot question that has arisen in the course of his distinguished career as a journalist.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY JUNE 16, 1917

TRIAL BY JURY.

TRIAL BY JURY has received another jolt, and "twelve good men and true" have, by their verdict in a case before the local court the other day, added another to the already long list of arguments that are used from time to time against the system. The jury in question acquitted a defendant in spite of the fact that Judge Huycke's address to them, in which he carefully reviewed the evidence and explained every point of law involved, seemed to warrant a different finding. The Judge reproved the jurors in open court, and another alleged miscarriage of Canadian justice is added to the record.

It has always been maintained that the jury system is a useless appendage to the administration of justice if the members of the panel are not permitted to place their own interpretation on the evidence submitted to them, aside altogether from what the judge in his charge may say to them. On the other hand, judges might as well be dispensed with if their expert opinion and important ruling are to have no weight with the men who know nothing of the intricacies of jurisprudence, but have only their native talents to guide them.

But trial by jury is a fixture. The people will stand fast for the blessed privilege that was conferred upon them by the great Charter of British liberty. They will have the trial by jury even if it does occasionally result in something that resembles nothing so much as a ghastly joke.

CANADA FROM A DISTANCE.

IT IS ONLY the Liberal press and politicians that minimize the part that Canada has taken in the war. This country's military reputation is above par among the critics abroad, men and women writers of note whose opinions are not clouded by political bias. Eleanor Franklin Egan, one of the leading authorities on economic topics in America, has in the latest issue of the Saturday Evening Post one of the best statements yet made on the part played by Canada since that fateful day in August three years ago, when Parliament was called together in extra session and the members voted unanimously that this country should take an active part in the war to the limit of all national resources.

"Canada's entrance into the war,' adds Miss Egan, "was simultaneous with England's declaration, and was entirely on Canada's own initiative.

"As to what Canada has done: One must just glance at the record in order to appreciate the present situation, wherein the country is called upon to make further and further efforts and much unheroic-seeming sacrifice; and wherein each citizen must at last subordinate personal interests of every kind to the demand that he submit unresistingly to any provision or plan that may be made for the general benefit or to any step that may be considered necessary to the successful prosecution of the war.

"The Canadian sees disquieting visions of compulsion, but the less said about that the easier it will be to bear if it has to come. Our acceptance of conscription without a murmur, and on the ground that it is the only plan consistent with real democracy, created mixed emotions in Canada. It put fear and trembling into the hearts of the slackers and made all argument for voluntary enlistment sound distressingly out of date. On the other hand, it gave fresh hope to large numbers of Canadians who believe in universal service, who have been preaching conscription from the beginning, and who would follow our example if they could. Yet the voluntary system has had success in Canada. That is why agitation against it makes so little headway.

"Canada has enlisted, equipped, trained and sent overseas more than three hundred and fifty thousand volunteers in about two years; and to equal that, according to our population as compared with hers, we should have to raise, equip, train and transport an army of more than five millions in the same length of time. Canada's contribution in men exceeds by two hundred thousand England's first estimate of the force she would probably be called upon to send into any European conflict; it is twice as large—exclusive of British troops in India and native Indian regiments—as the original British Army authorized by the Army Act; and exceeds by several thousands the total strength of normal British forces, wherever located, including Indian troops and every other kind.

"Incidentally Canada is spending for war purposes something like seventy million dollars a year more than the whole British War Office, with the Indian Military Establishment included, was costing before the war; while her own Department of Militia and Defence, which ordinarily requires an appropriation of a modest ten million dollars a year, is now absorbing wealth at the average rate of more than three hundred and fifty million dollars a year, or nearly one million dollars a day."

Miss Egan then takes up the cudgels on behalf of the Canadian farmer by referring to the "Patriotism and Production' campaign that was launched by the Government in 1915. She says that it became evident pretty soon that the farmer was not particularly pleased with all this attention. He did not mind the War Book, because that was merely a private communication from the Agricultural Department, full of valuable and dignified information. But he did mind being advertised at and talked at and made a special mark for patriotic appeal; and, first thing you knew, sharp retorts began to shoot back into government headquarters:

"What d'ye mean farmers, wake up? Who's asleep? And what makes you think farmers are less patriotic than other people? If most of our sons hadn't already enlisted and gone off to the war we'd have had a better chance to take advantage of the present opportunity. But, so long as prices keep movin' up, I guess we'll manage some way to do our share without any boldface-typed, eloquent and expensive urgin'!"

This was one form of protest—and it was literally true about the enlistment of the young farmers; a most unfortunate circumstance—but there were many others, and some of them would hardly bear repetition. It was just that the Canadian farmer, who is, without doubt, in a majority of cases the finest type of Canadian citizen, did not like to have his patriotism appealed to in that way.

In 1916 the word "Patriotism" was dropped from the cover of Agricultural War Book and the title Production and Thrift was substituted. That could hardly hurt anybody's feelings.

Of course, a tremendous advance in prices accounts for a large percentage of this; but there was a great increase in production also. The export of farm products was fifty-three per cent. of the total, and the professional analyst will tell you that, for this fifty-three per cent, at least, the producer himself received the long end of the advance in price, and that, therefore, it represents solid development for the country.

Miss Egan takes the stand that Canada cannot hope to regulate the price of food except by co-operation with the United States, and even then the prospect of material reduction is slight, so long as the prices are controlled by the war situation in Europe.

THE RAID ON LONDON.

GERMAN AIRPLANES sailed over the city of London and in broad daylight dropped bombs on the inhabitants, killing women and innocent children and causing the death of the aged from shock. It was not warfare, but butchery. Canada is safe from such barbarous raids only because no airship has yet been designed to cross the ocean. The Atlantic is all that protects the cities of this country from just such assaults.

The Empire is threatened by submarine and airplane. In the meantime the struggle on land continues, and the sooner the foe is crushed in Flanders the sooner will the aerial and submarine warfare be over.

Reinforcements are needed at the front. The voluntary system has broken down in Canada, and conscription must be enforced. The present is no time for long speeches in Parliament, for the tactics of the politician intent on gaining party advantage, or for quibbling over the terms of a measure that is Canada's final hope. What the Empire needs is prompt action; what the people of Canada expect of their representatives is deeds, not a tornado of words.

SHEER PARTY TACTICS.

(Toronto Star.

HON. GEORGE P. GRAHAM has given notice of the following motion which he will move in the House on the second reading of the Military Service Bill:

> "That in the opinion of this House, it is desirable that steps should be taken forthwith by the Government to provide that accumulated wealth should contribute immediately and effectively to the cost of the war; and that all agricultural, industrial, transportation and natural resources of Canada should be organized forthwith so as to ensure the greatest possible assistance to the Empire in the war, and to reduce the cost of living to the Canadian people."

This motion strikes us as one that would be all right in its right place. As a motion supplementary to Sir Robert Bordens Military Service Bill it is a good motion, and the principles and purposes of it ought to be embodied in the war policy of the country at this time.

But this motion is not in any way an alternative policy to that of the Military Service Bill. The need of the day is to raise an army, and there remains but one way in which to raise it, and that is by means of selective drafts as proposed in the measure put forward by Sir Robert Borden.

The ostensible purpose of Hon. George P. Graham's resolution is to improve the Military Service Bill—to improve its moral case and better its footing before the country. That being so, and insofar as it serves that purpose, it must be regarded as a useful resolution, the principles of which, we hope, the Premier will accept and adopt in his own measure or in concurrent legislation. But it should be moved on the third reading of the Conscription Bill. To move it as an amendment to the second reading is sheer party tactics.

An amendment moved on the second reading of a bill is well understood in parliamentary practice as a motion against the principle of the bill. Attempts to improve a measure are made in committee and on the third reading.

LABOR AND CONSCRIPTION

Resolutons and communications to the Executive Council of the Trades and Labor Congresse of Canada in all parts of the Dominion, bearing directly on this important question were turned over to the conference recently held at Ottawa. Following a seven hours' careful discussion, in which nearly every delegate took part, every phase of the subject being thoroughly considered, the following conclusions were arrived at:—

"Believing that the workers of Canada are looking for a lead on the attitude that should be assumed by them toward the proposed scheme of conscription we recommend that the following conclusions be sent broadcast throughout Canada:

"On December 27th, 1916, Premier Borden informed the Executive of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, that if conscription should prove the only effective method to preserve the existence of the State and of the instithtions and liberties which we enjoy, I should not hesitate to act accordingly.

"We are positively of the opinion that this situation has not arrived.

"The necessities for the effective conduct of the war are: Food, munitions, shipping, and military man man power, and Canada is geographically well situated to supply the first three essentials, and can do so much to assist in winning the war by developing her production in these esentials to her fullest extent.

"We are strongly of the opinion that this is the best service that Canada, with her small population, can render.

"We declare ourselves as most emphatically opposed to the proposed conscription measure, and we urge the workers of Canada, to oppose by every means in their power the enactment of such legislation."

In adopting the above only five of the entire delegation voted in opposition, three of whom qualified their opposition by declaring that along with conscription of man power must come conscription of wealth.

Wit and Wisdom

Discharged the Nurse.

Her husband had just come home and had his first meeting with the new nurse, who was remarkably pretty.

"She is sensible, and scientific, too," urged the fond mother, "and says she will allow no one to kiss baby while she is near."

"No one would want to," replied the husband, "while she is near."

And the nurse was discharged.

A Manly Man.

"What is your definition, Miss Mabel, of a manly man?" he asked.

Miss Mabel looked at him coldly. The clock struck 11. She hid a yawn behind her hand, and said: "My definition of a manly man, Mr. Skinner, is a chap who doesn't stay on and on and on just because he knows the girl isn't strong enough to throw him out."

Make No Bets.

"Young gentlemen, do not get into the habit of betting," said a professor to his class. "No kind of bet is excusable; in fact, every bet is a sin as well as a mark of vulgarity. Have nothing to do, young gentlemen, with a bet of any kind."

"That, I suppose, puts a finisher on our old friend the alphabet!" exclaimed one of the students.

The professor smiled blandly upon the young man and gave him fifty extra lines of Greek.

When Friendship Ceased.

"Ah, darling!" he cried, as he dashed toward the queen of his heart, "I haven't had one dance with you this evening. Do let me have the next, or let us sit it out and talk."

"Oh, George, don't be selfish! My program's full. But there are several nice girls who haven't had a partner. Here, I'll introduce you to Tiggy Monteith. She's awfully pretty and very intelligent."

"Rot!" he exclaimed. "I don't want any pretty, intelligent girls. I want you!"

And that was the end of that friendship.

Why He Wept.

At a golden wedding recently an entertainment was given to the surrounding tenantry of the aged couple. At the close of the proceedings the host rose and relieved his feelings in an eloquent speech.

"Look at that, now Pat," whispered an old Irishwoman nudging her husband's elbow. "Did ye see the poor ould masther wid the tears in the eyes of him?"

"Shure, an' why wouldn't he be croyin'?" was her husband's retort, "an' he married to the same women fur fifty years?"

Willing to Settle.

In an Ohio town there was a grocerymen who kept the most emaciated looking horses in the whole state. One day the delivery boy drove one of the nags a bit too hard and, finding a soft spot in the lower end of the township, the horse lay down and peacefully died. Large commotion, of course, on the part of the owner.

"I'm awfully sorry, Mr. Brown," said the agitated boy. "I didn't go to do it."

"You are sorry, are you?" yelped the agitated Mr. Brown. "Well, is that going to pay for the loss of the horse."

"No, sir," answered the boy. "I will pay for the horse, all right. You can take him out of my next week's wages."

One Way to Propose.

"I do not love you," he said. "I do not wish to hold your hand nor embrace you nor kiss you. I do not want to talk to you about tennis, nor golf, nor suffrage, nor servants, nor where you were last summer, nor clothes. I do not want to discuss literature nor music nor art with you. I do not wish to quarrel with you."

"What is your object," she inquired anxiously, "in telling me this?"

"Nothing very serious," he said. "But, considering the situation, don't you think it would be a good idea for us to get married?"

And Bill Six Foot Two.

Seth Woodbury was a tight-fisted, hard-hearted old farmer. His brother, William dying, the neighbors said from lack of proper treatment. Seth hitched up and drove into town to have a notice about his death inserted in the weekly newspaper.

"There ain't no charges, be there?" he asked, anxiously.

"Oh, yes, indeed,' answered the advertisement manager. "Our price is five shillings an inch."

"Cracky," muttered the old man, "an' Bill six foot two."

RAILWAY CALLS FOR POLICE AID

TROUBLE RAISED BY C.P.R. STRIKERS AT PORT McNICHOL.

PORT McNICHOLL, June 16. — About 150 of the foreigners among the freight handlers here went on strike on Wednesday. The other night, while the men who had remained at work were on their way home from the docks, under escort, the strikers attempted to mob them. The constables thereupon let off a few shots with the purpose of intimidating the strikers, and the latter immediately dispersed. So far as is known no one was hurt in the affray. The strikers are all being paid off to-day and everything is quiet.

It was reported in some quarters that military aid had been requisitioned by the C.P.R. The authorities at Camp Borden, however, knew nothing of this rumor. Lieut.-Col. H. C. Osborne, A.A.G. stated definitely that no application for help had been received at Camp Borden.

Charles Hudson, assistant general superintendent of the C.P.R., said that it was news to him. "I have not heard a word about it," he said.

There are 700 men employed by the C.P.R. at Port McNicholl, including 300 Chinese and 150 Bulgarians and Austrians. Not satisfied with 27 cents an hour, the Bulgarians and Austrians went on strike for higher wages on Wednesday. The demands were rejected by the company, and the men organized a street parade. According to Reeve J. S. Waddell, one shot was fired.

Inspector Boyd, of the Provincial Police, has been despatched to the scene, and the Dominion Police have also been asked for help.

MASON'S MELODIES

Oh, Kaiser Bill, with hands so red, you cannot shift your load of blame; you were not driven, forced or led—you broke your way into the game. There would have been no war, Red Bill, no other monarchs sought a fray, but Junkers burnned with lust to kill, and drank a flagon to "The Day." Had you but said, "Let war talk cease," no legions would have marched to die, and we would see the dove of peace where now the battle pennons fly. As horror mounts on horror's head, and famine makes our people thin, you wish your hands were not so red, and whine that yours is not the sin. But all the weary world is bored when you endeavor to explain that you were loth to take the sword, and strove for peace, and strove in vain. You built your war machine to kill, you long to see your neighbors wrecked; admit the truth, oh, Bloody Bill, and gain some fragments of respect.

The Party-First Politicians

(Brockville Times)

The men who are playing politics at Ottawa while the war lasts will have a heavy score to reckon for when the Canadian soldiers return home from the front. And let the politicians at home make no mistake in imagining that the men at the front are not fully and correctly informed as to what is going on in Canada. They know who is trying to help and who is trying to obstruct. They know who are slackers. And woe be unto the party-first politicians and the slackers when the soldiers return.

HOW TO PLAY WITH THE BRASSY

By CHICK EVANS.

There is a great deal of argument among players as to the importance of brassy play. The idea is, of course, that since the issue of rubber-cored balls gives so much greater distance than was possible in the days when gutta balls were used, the green can be reached on the second shot with iron. There is considerable truth in this argument as applied to the first class players, but I believe that the great majority of golfers can not consistently get the necessary distance to make the green in two without the aid of the brassy. Therefore, I personally feel that no golfer can afford to neglect a brassy play. Every club in a golfer's bag has a reason for being there, and brassy play can not be ignored by a player who aspires to fine golf. Moreover, there is a lot of satisfaction in a good brassy shot. It is one of the real pleasures of the game.

The principal difference between the brassy and the driver lies in the pitch or loft of the face. The face of a driver is almost perpendicular, while the face of a brassy slants backward. This gives the brassy a tendency to lift the ball much more than can be done with a driver. In fact, the pitch or loft in the face gives to a brassy lofting power just as a tee provides the same quality in play with the driver.

The stance for the brassy is the same as that used in driving, as explained in a previous article. A brassy requires a little stiffer handle and a brass plate or sole, as it is used for rougher work than the driver.

The swing and grip of the club is the same as in driver play, but one must be sure of his grip with a brassy, especially where the club head is certain to come in contact with the ground on a bad lie.

A player must give a lot of attention as to how to hit the ball. If the ball has a fairly good lie the play can be made easily and rhythmically without any attempt to dig under the ball. You can trust the loft in the face of the brassy to pick the ball up properly if the stroke is played rightly.

The most frequent error in brassy play that I have observed is the tendency of the player to try to get under the ball, and the usual result of such playing is only to tear up the turf. If the ball is badly cupped, don't yield to your first impulse to use the iron. Think the situation over. And if a brassy shot is really required by the situation play it no matter how tempting the iron may be. Make it a maxim always to use the proper club.

The discipline of the diamond is becoming almost as strict as army discipline, and the player who can adjust himself to the situation gracefully gets along best. Take the case of Spencer, the Tigers' catcher, as an example. This young man is showing up mighty well since he came back to the major leagues after spending several years with the minors. When he played in the big league last he couldn't obey and consequently was let out. It took him some time to learn his lesson, but now he has made up his mind that it pays to obey. Furthermore, he has given old John Barleycorn, that arch foe of all players, the boot and has slammed the door on him for good. Spencer is a mighty good player. He is a lively worker, despite his short, thick-set form, and the Tigers ought to get a lot of good out of him.

If there is a star in the heavens that signifies anything in connection with baseball, that star must be at its brightest on June 14. Not alone is this the birthday of the great national pastime, but some of the best known players were born on this day. First on the list is Roger Bresnahan, former manager of the St. Louis Nationals, who was born on this day in the year 1880, at Tralee, Ireland. Archer and Needham, former catchers for the Cubs, were also born in the land of the Shamrock. It was on June 14, 1885, that the Western League was disbanded. It was this date, 1893, that one of the freakiest games on record was played between the New York Nationals and Chicago. In that game the New Yorkers scored ten runs in the fourth inning, which was only one of the crazy phases of the game, George Davis being credited with a home run and a triple in this single inning.

BASEBALL

Baseball will celebrate its 70th anniversary. Several cities have claimed the honor of having been the birthplace of baseball. Boston says that the game called "New England" was the forerunner of the game as it is known to-day. Philadelphia says no; that "town ball" is the parent of baseball. The latter game, it is said was played by an organized club at Olympics, as far back as 1833. The early game of "rounders" was a more ancient phase of the same game. The real home of base ball, however, when all is said and done, is Hoboken. It was there that seventy years ago yesterday, the first bona-fide baseball game between clubs was played. The contenders were the Knickerbockers and the New York Citys, and the game was played on the Elysian Fields, near Jersey City. That was on June 14, 1846. The Elysian Fields are now the site of Hoboken. The Knickerbockers organized in New York in September, 1845. They were the first to formulate playing rules. The New Yorks organised a little later, and adopted the same code. Both of these clubs played several games with scrub teams, picked up from among the spectators, before they faced each other on that June day in 1846. Under the rules that obtained at that time, the first team to make 21 runs was the victor. The game lasted four innings, the Knickerbockers winning, but history does not record the score of their opponents. The Knickerbockers found their first real rivals in the Gothams, organized in 1850, and the Greenpoint Eckfords and the Morrisania Unions, organized in 1855. The Olympics of Philadelphia early adopted the New York game, and the Athletics. Keystones and Quaker Citys later fought for supremacy, while in Boston the Olympics were organized in 1854, and a little later the Elm Trees disputed honors with the pioneers.

But, heavens! Just think of it! Twenty-one runs in four innings!

PUGILISTIC ANNALS

1885.—John L. Sullivan defeated Jack Burke in five rounds at Chicago. For this little sesion in the Windy City, which proved to be nothing more than a little amusement for the Boston Strong Boy, Sullivan received $4300. After John L. became champion by defeating Paddy Ryan in 1882, the whole world was scoured for a man who might stand a chance against John L., and Burke was only one of many whose rosy hopes were smashed by John's big fist. He disposed of one after another with great ease with the exception of Charley Mitchell, of England. He got $12,000 for this bout with Tug Wilson; $10,000 for the fight with Mitchell in Madison Square Garden in New York, when the Britisher knocked him down; $13,000 for showing up the widely advertised Herbert Slade; $10,000 for defeating John Laflin in three rounds at the Garden. And so on.

1908.—Tomy Burns knocked out Bill Squires in eight rounds in Paris.

1913. — Jimmy Clabby defeated Eddie McGoorty in twelve rounds in Butte.

1913.—Mike Gibbons knocked out Young Ahearn in four rounds in New York.

1907—Jimmy Barry knocked out Fred Bradley in eight rounds at Philadelphia.

1907—Billy Papke knocked out Foster Walker in two rounds at Detroit.

1909—Digger Stanley defeated Art Mitchell in six rounds at London.

1910—Billy Papke knocked out Al Goodale in two rounds at Kansas City.

1910—Monte Atell defeated Young Britt in fifteen rounds at Baltimore.

1911—Jimmy Walsh defeated Fred Lansdowne in seven rounds at Toronto.

1911—Dick Hyland and Battling Hurley fought a ten-round no-decision bout at Albany, N.Y.

HOW TO PLAY WITH THE BRASSY

By CHICK EVANS.

There is a great deal of argument among players as to the importance of brassy play. The idea is, of course, that since the issue of rubber-cored balls gives so much greater distance than was possible in the days when gutta balls were used, the green can be reached on the second shot with iron. There is considerable truth in this argument as applied to the first class players, but I believe that the great majority of golfers can not consistently get the necessary distance to make the green in two without the aid of the brassy. Therefore, I personally feel that no golfer can afford to neglect a brassy play. Every club in a golfer's bag has a reason for being there, and brassy play can not be ignored by a player who aspires to fine golf. Moreover, there is a lot of satisfaction in a good brassy shot. It is one of the real pleasures of the game.

The principal difference between the brassy and the driver lies in the pitch or loft of the face. The face of a driver is almost perpendicular, while the face of a brassy slants backward. This gives the brassy a tendency to lift the ball much more than can be done with a driver. In fact, the pitch or loft in the face gives to a brassy lofting power just as a tee provides the same quality in play with the driver.

The stance for the brassy is the same as that used in driving, as explained in a previous article. A brassy requires a little stiffer handle and a brass plate or sole, as it is used for rougher work than the driver.

The swing and grip of the club is the same as in driver play, but one must be sure of his grip with a brassy, especially where the club head is certain to come in contact with the ground on a bad lie.

A player must give a lot of attention as to how to hit the ball. If the ball has a fairly good lie the play can be made easily and rhythmically without any attempt to dig under the ball. You can trust the loft in the face of the brassy to pick the ball up properly if the stroke is played rightly.

The most frequent error in brassy play that I have observed is the tendency of the player to try to get under the ball, and the usual result of such playing is only to tear up the turf. If the ball is badly cupped, don't yield to your first impulse to use the iron. Think the situation over. And if a brassy shot is really required by the situation play it no matter how tempting the iron may be. Make it a maxim always to use the proper club.

Since Kitty Bransfield, now a National League umpire, held the first base job for the Pittsburg team, there have been twenty other players who have tried their hand at the job and failed. Bunny seems to be making good, too. He has been a near major league player for several years. He played first base for the Salt Lake club, of the Pacific Coast League in 1916, and in 135 games had a batting average of 314. He has had a whack at big league playing before this, but somehow or other did not come up to expectations. Barney Dreyfuss, however, believes that Brief has "arrived," and will make good with the Pirates. The price for Brief's release is $6000.

The discipline of the diamond is becoming almost as strict as army discipline, and the player who can adjust himself to the situation gracefully gets along best. Take the case of Spencer, the Tigers' catcher, as an example. This young man is showing up mighty well since he came back to the major leagues after spending several years with the minors. When he played in the big league last he couldn't obey and consequently was let out. It took him some time to learn his lesson, but now he has made up his mind that it pays to obey. Furthermore, he has given old John Barleycorn, that arch foe of all players, the boot and has slammed the door on him for good. Spencer is a mighty good player. He is a lively worker, despite his short, thick-set form, and the Tigers ought to get a lot of good out of him.

If there is a star in the heavens that signifies anything in connection with baseball, that star must be at its brightest on June 14. Not alone is this the birthday of the great national pastime, but some of the best known players were born on this day. First on the list is Roger Bresnahan, former manager of the St. Louis Nationals, who was born on this day in the year 1880, at Tralee, Ireland. Archer and Needham, former catchers for the Cubs, were also born in the land of the Shamrock. It was on June 14, 1885, that the Western League was disbanded. It was this date, 1893, that one of the freakiest games on record was played between the New York Nationals and Chicago. In that game the New Yorkers scored ten runs in the fourth inning, which was only one of the crazy phases of the game, George Davis being credited with a home run and a triple in this single inning.

BASEBALL

Baseball will celebrate its 70th anniversary. Several cities have claimed the honor of having been the birthplace of baseball. Boston says that the game called "New England" was the forerunner of the game as it is known to-day. Philadelphia says no; that "town ball" is the parent of baseball. The latter game, it is said was played by an organized club at Olympics, as far back as 1833. The early game of "rounders" was a more ancient phase of the same game. The real home of base ball, however, when all is said and done, is Hoboken. It was there that seventy years ago yesterday, the first bona-fide baseball game between clubs was played. The contenders were the Knickerbockers and the New York Citys, and the game was played on the Elysian Fields, near Jersey City. That was on June 14, 1846. The Elysian Fields are now the site of Hoboken. The Knickerbockers organized in New York in September, 1845. They were the first to formulate playing rules. The New Yorks organised a little later, and adopted the same code. Both of these clubs played several games with scrub teams, picked up from among the spectators, before they faced each other on that June day in 1846. Under the rules that obtained at that time, the first team to make 21 runs was the victor. The game lasted four innings, the Knickerbockers winning, but history does not record the score of their opponents. The Knickerbockers found their first real rivals in the Gothams, organized in 1850, and the Greenpoint Eckfords and the Morrisania Unions, organized in 1855. The Olympics of Philadelphia early adopted the New York game, and the Athletics. Keystones and Quaker Citys later fought for supremacy, while in Boston the Olympics were organised in 1854, and a little later the Elm Trees disputed honors with the pioneers.

But, heavens! Just think of it! Twenty-one runs in four innings!

FARMERS HOLD ANNUAL PICNIC AT MANN HOMESTEAD IN SMITH

Ideal Place for Outing of West Peterborough Board of Agriculture, Addresses on Topics of Interest to Farmers and Lectures on Stock Judging.

No more ideal spot for the purpose could have been selected in the country for the holding of the annual meeting of the West Peterborough Board of Agriculture yesterday than the Mann Farm on the shores of Lake Chemong in Smith township. The location is all that could be desired and the farm itself is one of the best in every department to be found in the province. The outbuildings are up to date, well arranged and kept in perfect condition and the residence is modern in its equipment.

The farm has been in possession of the Mann family from the year 1820 when it was deeded by the Crown to James Mann, the great great-grandfather of G. W. Mann, the present owner. The head of the family came originally from the County of Yorkshire in England in 1812 and settled in the United States, moving to Canada eight years later and taking up two hundred acres of wild land on the shore of Lake Chemong. The first residence on the property was a log shanty. There is a long step from that domicile to the present commodious residence but the improvement noted in this particular is noticeable in every well tilled field on the premises.

The Speakers.

The meeting or picnic yesterday was held on the spacious lawn which is beautified by stately spruce and maple trees tastefully arranged. Mr. G. W. Mann, the host, welcomed his guests in a well worded address which made everyone feel at home and then, with President J. A. McGregor, in the chair, the oratorical part of the program commenced. Rev. Father McGuire of St. Martin's Church, Ennismore, was the first speaker and delivered an admirable address in which expert knowledge of agriculture, patriotism and good fellowship predominated. Father McGuire has warrant for talking with authority on agricultural topics as he was for a number of years president of the cheese factory at Downeyville. He spoke of the bright days to come when the war is over. He congratulated Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., on his presence at the picnic and said that what the farmers of Canada require is more men like Mr. Gillespie to represent them in Parliament.

While Father McGuire believes all should do their duty in this crisis he cannot see how any more young men can be spared from the farms that are already short handed. He regretted that the lure of the paved streets, the electric lights, and the theatres, picture shows and other city attractions are drawing so many young people from the land. The speaker paid an eloquent tribute to Ontario as the best province in the Dominion in spite of the fact that the West has drained it of so many young men.

Balance on Right Side.

Secretary A. B. Mann, who represents the fifth generation of the famous family, then submitted his annual report which showed a balance of $9.88 to the credit of the organization. The accounts which had been approved by Auditors John Riddell and J. Buchnam, showed that at the beginning of the year there had been a balance on hand of $12.85. The membership fees amounted to $23.33 which represents an active membership of nearly one hundred. The grants received were $25 each from the Legislature and the municipality, making the total receipts $86.18.

The expenditures were $21.80 for entertainments, $30.30 for officers' salaries, $2 for postage, $24.20 for printing, a total outlay of $76.30. It will be noted that the organization is neither exhorbitant in its charges or extravagant in its expenditures and that a careful management is the rule.

The Cost of Living.

Mr. Gillespie complimented Father McGuire for his former administration of the affairs of the Downeyville cheese factory in which position he had frequent business transactions with the present member of the Legislature. He then spoke of the object of the Board of Agriculture which he said was really an advisory adjunct to the Department of Agriculture at Toronto. Mr. Gillespie commended the shift by which Premier Hearst was made head of the Department that deals with matters of interest to the farmer. He believes that the Premier will do all in his power to give the men on the land a chance. If the Board of Agriculture throughout the province ask anything in reason of the Department they are almost certain to get it. The appointment of Prof. Creelman as commissioner of agriculture Mr. Gillespie also regards as a wise move.

The war has shown the people all over the world how much they owe the farmer and to what extent they depend on them. Their prices of farm produce may be high but the farmer is not even yet getting for what he raises anything like what it costs or what it is really worth even in the time of peace.

Rev. G. A. Gull, pastor of the Gilmore Memorial Church, made a graceful address in which he extolled life on the farm, where the best in the world was possible, especially if the farmer cooperated with his Creator. Brief speeches were made by Mr. G. A. Brethen, the noted dairyman of Norwood and by Mr. J. P. Sackville, who was for three years assistant district representative in West Peterborough and who is now on the staff of the Agricultural College, Guelph.

The Stock Judging.

Three splendid specimens of Holstein cows, the property of Mr. Frank Mann, were then driven out into the yard and Mr. Brethen, than whom there is no higher authority, lectured for nearly an hour on the points of dairy stock, giving explicit instruction in regard to selecting desirable addition to dairy herds. Four fat cattle, the property of the hosts, were then driven into the open and Mr. Sackville held forth for over half an hour on the best type of animal to select when the object is to convert them into beef. The present demand is for beef cattle that can be made ready for market under two years of age and in order to do this the greatest care must be exercised in their selection and only the best stock must be kept if the owner is to come out on the safe side.

Officers elected.

The executive committee the members of which are appointed by the various societies, by the municipality and the Legislature, held a session for the election of officers. Mr. J. A. McGregor, who has been the painstaking president for the past three years, retired at his own request, and Mr. Clayton Telford of Ennismore was elected to succeed him. Mr. Gordon Mann was elected vice-president, and Mr. Allan B. Mann was re-elected secretary-treasurer, a compliment richly deserved, for the organization never had a more earnes or tireless worker. Messrs. Garbutt and Joseph Mann were appointed auditors.

Supper on the Lawn.

There were over two hundred in attendance, and all were entertained to supper, a long table that accommodated fifty at a time being spread on the lawn. Every dainty that the farmers' wives and daughters ever produced from their stock of culinary art was in evidence, and the supply was far from exhausted when all had been served.

There were a number of visitors from the city. Mr. Gillespie took out a party of friends and newspaper men in a six-passenger Studebaker car that was on its first trial. The new auto acquitted itself admirably, making the run both ways in record time and climbing the steep hills without an extra throb.

New York bankers express the hope that the Liberty loan, which closed at noon today, will be oversubscribed.

Bridge With No Water Under

One of the most curious and ancient bridges in Europe is that at Croyland, in Lincolnshire, Eng., which is supposed to date from the ninth century. No road now passes over and no water under it. It consists of three pointed arches, which meet in the centre, and the ascent is so steep that only foot-passengers can go over it.

Statue on Ancient Bridge

Upon an ancient bridge at Croyland, England, is a seated figure in stone of a robed Saxon king. The structure dates from the ninth century.

A British aviator in the hospital, after having been the target for many a gunner, remarked: "I'll never shoot at another bird. I know now how they feel."

Sir George E. Foster said: "You are drawing the blood of a future generation in Canada when you misuse the forest resources of the country."

CANADA FOR FISHERIES

Unrivalled Rivers and Lakes Make a Great Industry

Prof. Prince, Director of Fisheries for the Dominion Government, addressing the Toronto Empire Club on the "Waste and Conservation of Canadian Fisheries," referred to the magnificent lakes and rivers in Canada—the colossal St. Lawrence, giant Mackenzie, 2,500 miles long, the Saskatchewan, including the Bow (1,200 miles), the Nelson 1,600 miles, the Peace and Churchill, each 1,000 miles, the Fraser 695 miles, the Ottawa 685 miles and 50 other noble rivers—the Restigouche, the St. John, the Miramichi, Saguenay, the Natashquan, for scenery and salmon angling without rivals unless they be the lovely historic rivers of Scotland. Nearly 200,000 square miles of Canada is covered by fresh water. The annual value of Canada's fisheries is officially placed at $35,000,000, but the actual value much exceeds this, because enormous quantities of fish caught and used by Indians, Eskimos, mining and hunting camps, trappers, prospectors, lonely settlers, remote trading posts, etc., are not officially accounted for. Over 100,000 persons are engaged in fishing, curing and handling fish; nearly 2,000 larger fishing vessels and 38,535 smaller craft, 11,697 being gasoline motor boats.

TO ENCOURAGE SETTLEMENT

Farms to be Selected For Occupation by Canadian Veterans

The Canadian Pacific Railway contemplates settling on railroad lands men who have served in Canadian units in the British forces on land or sea, who are married, physically fit, and experienced as farmers. This will be done under two different arrangements. Under one a limited number of farms in selected colonies will be improved by the company with house, barn, fence, water supply, and the breaking of 40 acres. Livestock, implements and seed grain will be provided where necessary. On each colony there will be a central control farm operated by the company. The colonists will be tenants for three years, not making any payment of rent during that period, after which an amount equal to 6 per cent. on the cost of permanent improvements will be charged for each year that has passed since the colonist went into occupation. Under the other plan farms will be selected by the colonists and improved by them, assisted by the company, who will advance material and implements. The land will be sold to them on a 20 year basis, the first payment not being due till the end of the second year.—A. A. Stoughton, University of Manitoba.

GRAZING IN WOODLOTS

Animals Have Many Bad Effects Upon Tree Growth

The most important step to take in the care of the woodlot is to protect the trees of the future. Unless the young trees, which go to make up the undergrowth of the woodlot are protected there can be no trees to replace the mature ones as they are removed. Without trees there can, of course, be no woodlot. Grazing animals are one of the greatest hindrances to the proper development of the small trees. It is almost as impractical to pasture cattle on the same piece of ground as one is attempting to grow trees as to pasture them on a piece of ground on which one was attempting to grow oats. Not only do the cattle destroy a large number of the small trees by eating the top off, but they trample them down and the sun and wind have an opportunity to act on the soil and dry it out or bake it, thereby causing the tops of the larger trees to die back. On open patches within the woodlot or where the borders are thin, young growth should be encouraged as much as possible.

PUNCTURES NO BOGEY

Riders of Bicycles Should Use Precautions and Not Worry

A bicyclist writes: I have heard it said over and over again that the greatest of all wheeling troubles is the fear of punctures, but I am bound to confess that I am unable to fall in with the general opinion. It is true that tire troubles are very largely a matter of luck, but at least some of the possibility of worries can be eliminated by the use of good tires, and by fairly regular attention to them, such as patching fractured places on the inside of the cover, and stopping the small cuts in the rubber tread. By giving an occasional hour to this activity, one becomes adept at tire manipulation, and then the scare of a puncture altogether disappears, and simply becomes an incident of delay in one's journeyings. Punctures are like most other bogies, the nearer you get to them the less potent they become.

Giant English Apple

A remarkable apple was shown at the Royal Horticultural Society's Hall, Vincent Square, Westminster. A small apple tree taken from the ground and placed in an ordinary flower pot bore one apple only, but that apple was 16 inches in circumference and 5½ inches in depth.

Teachers of agriculture tell us that if we are to maintain fertility of our soils and make a permanent success of agriculture we must raise more livestock. This may mean more labor, the grinding of feed, shredding of corn fodder and putting up silage.

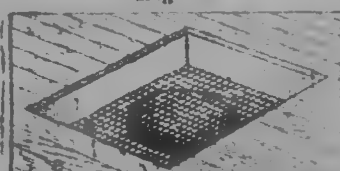
IN BUCCANEER BAY

Story of a Beautiful Beach in Western Canada

The romance associated with Buccaneer Bay, near Vancouver, has generally been credited as in some way connected with one of the old-time pirates, but in reality, though there is romance, it is considerably more modern and walks hand in hand with fact. A Mr. Merry owned a celebrated horse named "Buccaneer," a contemporary of "Thormanby," which won the Derby in 1860. Captain Richards of H.M. surveying vessel "Plumper," named Thormanby Islands, presumably having won money over the race, and also named one of the most beautiful bays after "Buccaneer," with other neighboring places in memory of the course. For example, British Columbia has Epsom Point, Oaks Point and Tattenham Ledge.

However, little need Buccaneer Bay borrow a real or fictitious romance, for the natural beauties of this secluded portion of Elysium made it one of the most popular spots for those who, in summer time, like the life of the lotus eater. The sun gleams on most perfect beaches, the shade offers when his majesty "King Sol" becomes too powerful—bluff and rock provide an exhilarating change of scene, and the hundreds of happy and healthy summer visitors come to their favorite haunt each year with greater joy.

Catch-All Screen Inside Hot-Air Register



In order to recover small articles dropped through the floor register grating of a hot-air heating system without the necessity of removing a section of the pipe, mesh gratings like that shown were fitted into place. Number six gauge wire mesh was used in pieces just large enough to fit into the metal box below the register. Access to the screen may be had by removing the grating.—Popular Mechanics.

Auto Which Cost $30,000

There was once shown at an Automobile Show a car which actually cost $30,000 to make. This was known as the "gold car," a seven-passenger machine, finished in brilliant gold and white. The chassis and all metal parts were thickly plated with twenty-four carat gold, about 400 ounces being used in the process.

SCULLING WAS ONCE WORLD'S BIG SPORT

Boatbuilders and Oarsmen were Master Craftsmen—Praise for the King of them All

Canada was once very prominent in the single sculling game and mainly through one man, Edward Hanlan. Of him James G. Rice, the great rowing coach once said: I am anxious to have myself on record as holding that no man has yet equalled the achievements of "Edward Hanlan of the Island" in the game of rowing. I never knew a finer oarsman, I never met a straighter man. He met his opponents without fear or favor. He rowed under all conditions and in many countries. In the days when the sport produced the greatest men in its annals he fought his way to the top and held the crown for four years. In short—he was the best ever. In all the time that he was rowing, between 1874 and 1884, he took part in over 350 races. It would be a hard task to tell of his victories, but it is a very easy one to tell of his defeats, for they were so few and far between. After being fouled by Elliott at Barrie in 1879 he rowed a dead heat with old [illegible] of Saratoga, and on his refusal to row over again the race was technically awarded to Jim. In 1880 he lost out in a regatta at Washington when he got a stitch in his side. His next defeat was the beginning of his [illegible] fall, in 1884, when he made the trip to Australia and was beaten by Beach. The climate was too much for him there, and he never again reached the heights he held previously, though he did row in competition as late as 1896.

"Straightest and Greatest"

Those were great days for the rowing game. Fortunes were [illegible] on the races, and, though many [illegible] and countercharges of unfairness were hurled around, Ned Hanlan [illegible] through his entire career without a smirch on his character. At the time of his death The London Times [illegible] editorially that he was the straightest and greatest oarsman that ever sat in a shell. He was the idol of Canada, for he was the first Canadian to really bring the world's supremacy in any one line to the Dominion. [illegible] now [illegible] personally that he was offered [illegible]000 to quit in a race for the world championship. It was all he could [illegible] to keep from knocking down the man who made the attempt to bribe him.

The Great Professionals

It is well to remember that Hanlan fought his way to the front at the time when professional rowing was at its zenith. It was when such men as Wallace Ross, Jim Riley, Fred Plaisted, Charlie Courtney, Jake Gaudaur, Erastus Rogers, Pat Luther, Hosmer, Teemer, Trickett, Laycock, Lee, and other such scullers were in the field that the young Canadian flashed to the front and held his position for years. In those days scullers and boatbuilders knew things that have been long since forgotten or neglected. The boys used to test their shells with split-second watches to see which boats were the fastest under given conditions. They weighed them and balanced them and rigged them and watched them more carefully than most mothers do their [illegible]. A fraction of a second meant thousands of dollars to them, and they [illegible] have it.

You Have Asked Us:

What has it cost Peterborough to erect and equip its big, Young Men's Christian Association Building?.

and---Has the expenditure been justified by results?.

And We Answer:

Building and Lot - - - - - - - - - - - - Nothing!

Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls, of esteemed memory, gave both Building and Lot, whose value is now Estimated to be $41,000, and on which there is no mortgage.

and as regards results, we'll answer that part of your question in several advertisements, to follow, in a way which, we trust will be quite satisfactory to you.

But in the meantime, you, as a Peterborough Man, will appreciate our city's advantage, (Which is an advantage every citizen shares) by knowing what "Y" lots and buildings have cost in other Canadian Cities more or less in the Peterborough Class.

AND THEY ALL WENT FISHING

Wonderful Exhibition of Hypnotism And Mind-Reading.

A large amused and wonder-stricken audience attended Dr. Zell Hunt's marvellous manifestation of mind-reading and hypnotism in the Grand Opera House last night. He sent his subjects fishing all over the stage and in the orchestra for the fish that would not bite, and their antics created side-splitting merriment. He also had four young men and two ladies indulging in a merry dance with chairs for partners, under the impression that they were having the time of their lives. Dr. Hunt's exhibition of mind reading was a revelation to sceptics, while his humorous lecture on modern conditions was interspersed with irrefutable truths, which left his audience with considerable moral food for digestion. This is Dr. Hunt's last night here under his present engagement.

FORTUNES IN CANADA

Unexplored Wilde Hide Minerals, Oil, Lakes and Farms

The earlier pioneers searched the Canadian wilderness for fur bearing animals; to-day men penetrate it to look for minerals and oil. "If we superpose these unexplored areas on the geological map of Canada," says Mr. Camsell, of the Dominion Geological Survey, "we shall find that the greater part of them lie in what is colored as pre-Cambrian, or in geological formations similar to those in which, under certain conditions, the rich deposits of copper, nickel, iron, silver and gold of Northern Ontario occur." But there must still be productive agricultural land in the Peace River and Athabaska River regions marked as unexplored. In the basin of the Mackenzie River "is believed to be one of the largest areas of possible oil-bearing country yet unexplored on the face of the earth."

Indians have reported lakes in Yukon sixty and seventy miles long that no white man has ever seen; the Mackenzie Mountains even the Indians know nothing about; and it will be many years before the mystery of Northern Canada is lifted for the cartographer. Fortunes await the daring prospector; for the hunter there is an abundance of game and fish, and innumerable virgin peaks invite the mountain climber.

BIG MUSICAL HITS

At The Opera House On Monday Night Next

On Monday night next the Grand Opera House, Peterboro, will have a big attraction when James Dallas and his capable company of stars will present "Oh! Cecil."

"Oh! Cecil" is the biggest musical comedy success in London this season. Supported by a big company of clever and versatile comedians and comediennes, will be seen that big favorite with Peterboro audiences Mr. Vern Dushayne, late star in the "Peg O' My Heart" company. Mr. Dushayne as "Cecil" has a wonderful part, and he has the audience in a roar all the time he is on the stage. Playing opposite to him will be found Miss Lula de Treves, who last appeared here in "In Walked Jimmy," and her songs and dances are always acceptable. Frank Gilham and Billy Pritchard also have good comedy roles, whilst Miss Jeanette Watson sings acceptably. Of the chorus and ballet only words of praise are heard. The Dallas Pony Ballet are too well known to need further introduction. All the latest New York musical hits are introduced and the scenic effects are far above the average. A first class evening's entertainment is assured.

A big patronage is assured for this attraction, and seats can be reserved at the theatre.

REFUSED TO BE RAJAH'S HEIR

CANADIAN HERO WHOM FATE DESIGNED FOR DEATH IN BATTLE.

Mr. J. A. Aylmer has a letter in today's issue of the Toronto Mail and Empire, with reference to an article recently publishen in that paper, in which he says:

To the Editor of The Mail and Empire:

Sir,—On Monday you had an article on "The Romance of the Rajah of Sarawak." There was a further romance of the Brooke family which you may not have been aware of that centres in Canada. I knew the Brooke family intimately, so speak from first-hand knowledge.

The first Rajah was a bachelor. He had a brother and sister. The sister married a Mr. Johnston, an Englishman. The brother was an officer in the English army. He married a Portuguese lady and had two sons. At his death the family came to Canada and settled in the Eastern Townships, Quebec. The eldest son, Wm. Brooke, studied law and practised in Richmond Quebec. He was the favorite nephew of the first Rajah and they were in close correspondence with each other during life. When the first Rajah was established in power at Sarawak, he asked his nephew, Wm. Brooke, to go out and join him in Borneo offering to make him his heir and successor. William Brooke's wife would not consent to his leaving Cana'a, so he declined. The Rajah then made the same offer to his sister's son, Charles Johnston, on condition that he change his name to Brooke, which he did, joining his uncle in Borneo. He became the second Rajah and is the man who died lately.

Wm. Brooke, of Richmond, Que., left two sons, Charles and George, both lawyers. Charles, the eldest, was County Crown-Attorney at Hull, Que., for a number of years, dying there about four years ago, and leaving a family. His son enlisted in the first Canadian Expeditionary Force and was killed in France last year. If his grandfather had accepted the first Rajah's offer, this lad might now have been Rajah of Borneo, instead of a dead hero in France.

Musical Comedy at the Grand on Monday Night.

On Monday next the successful musical comedy "Oh, Cecil," will be presented at the Grand Opera House. Among the stars in this production Peterborough theatregoers will remember Mr. Vern Duchayne, who starred in the "Peg O' My Heart" company a few months ago, and will be glad to hear that he has a great role in this clever musical comedy. All the latest musical successes will be heard, and some clever dances are also introduced by the principals and also by the pony ballet of ten clever girls. The principal roles are in the capable hands of Frank Gilham, Billy Pritchard and Lulu de Treves, who did good work when here with "In Walked Jimmy." The costumes are excellent, and the scenic production is far in advance of that usually associated with a road attraction. An excellent evening's entertainment is promised. Nothing vulgar—all high-class performers.

Seats now on sale, and phone orders will only be reserved up to 6 o'clock on Monday. The show has had a very good season and will close at His Majesty's, Montreal, in three weeks time.

If you are suffering from dyspepsia, indigestion or sour stomach you should try a mixture of Sanol Pepsin and Iridin.

Farmers' sons in the Ottawa Valley under 26 years of age will be interested to know that the Central Canada Exhibition, this year are putting on a judging competition open to farmers' sons who are not graduates of an agricultural college or school. Nine prizes, ranging from $15.00 for first prize to $7.00 for ninth prize, are offered in each of the following: for judging heavy horses, beef cattle, dairy cattle, sheep and swine. Contestants may not enter in more than two of the five classes.

In co-operation with the Ontario department of agriculture there will also be a junior farmers' inter-county bacon hog contest open to farmers' sons under 26 years of age for best pair of bacon hogs bred and cared for by contestant. The counties of Eastern Ontario are arranged in groups according to schedule. There will be five prizes offered in each group, ranging from $30 for first prize to $10 for fifth prize. In addition there will be a sweepstake competition open to the winners of each group.

Supervision of the feeding and caring for the hogs will be under the various county district representatives of the Ontario deportment of agriculture.

The production of foodstuffs is as important as the supplying of munitions in this world's war, and the Ontario department of agriculture is to be commended for its assistance to the Central Canada Exhibition.

GET BIRTHS REGISTERED.

Change Made in Marriage License by Department.

Considerable difficulty has been experienced by the department at the Parliament Buildings regarding the registration of births in Ontario. But a new scheme has been developed by which the department hopes to get all the births registered.

Some years ago the department attached a detachable certificate for the use of the clergyman to forward to the clerk to register the marriage. This slip was found to be rather large, and it was divided so that one part could be sent to the department and the other part handed to the contracting parties instead of the usual clergyman's certificate.

Many people didn't think that it was necessary for them to register the birth of their children, thinking it was the doctor's duty to do so. The department therefore had printed on the back of the certificate a copy of section 20 of the Vital Statistics Act, which says:

"Where a child is borne, notice shall be given to the divisional registrar of the division in which it was born by

"(a) The father, if living.

"(b) In case of his inability, or if he is dead, by the mother, if living, or

"(c) In case of the inability of both parents, or neither being alive, by the person acting in place of the parents."

Cheers for Venizelos

Premier Ribot, addressing the Chamber of deputies to-day concerning the abdication of King Constantine, said conditions in Greece had become intolerable; that the attitude of Constantine had nullified the the constitution of Greece and amply justified the protecting powers to intervene in such manner as to secure the indispensable unity of the country.

Great applause greeted the mention of the name of M. Venizelos.

POINTS TO CONSIDER WHEN PURCHASING A RAILWAY TICKET

A Canadian Pacific Railway ticket does not represent merely a means of transportation between given points. It, in addition, provides the traveller with every comfort and convenience developed by modern railway science. "Safety First," with up-to-date equipment unexcelled dining service, palatial sleeping cars—in a word, everything that a railway can provide for the comfortable transportation of its passengers, including courtesy.

SHEET MUSIC.

Its Invention Was the Work of Old-Time Monks.

Surrounded as we are by such vast quantities of sheet music and music books, which everyone can afford at their low cost, we perhaps forget the great boon that came to humanity with the invention and perfecting of music printing. No one event has meant so much to the musical development of the people of all countries as the discovery of a way to print music. Even when the process began to be used, the early editions were small and costly but fro mits introduction the great works were enabled to circulate in authentic form and were therefore studied as never before. Before this discovery was made the making of musical manuscripts was a common occupation in the monasteries and such institutions. Every priest and choir had to be supplied with the church music, which represented a great deal of laborious and exacting work.

First, music printing was tried far back as 1476 in Rome and Venice from the engraved wooden block. When movable type came in ordinary printing, the difficulty in using it for music was to make the notes and staffs with the one impression. As the process involved printing the staffs in red and the notes in black. Credit for the first work in a one-impression process is given Pierre Hautin. It was in 1525. Better type was devised and other improvements introduced. Later the music was duplicated from engraved plates, first of copper, then the more modern plan of punching the notes in a soft-metal plate.

Now music is printed so easily and cheaply that perhaps like some other things, if it were more difficult to secure and the cost higher, we would appreciate its worth all the more.

NEW PASTOR FOR GEORGE STREET CHURCH

Rev. Amos J. Thomas, M.A., B.D., who will assume the duties of pastor of George Street Methodist Church, succeeding Rev. R. G. Peever, at the beginning of the conference year. Mr. Thomas is regarded as one of the leading preachers in the Methodist Church in Canada. He is a graduate of Victoria University, entered the ministry in 1899 and during that time has been associated with the London conference. He is at present pastor of the Dundas Street Methodist Church in London, the third charge he has held in that city. The church in which he has labored for the past four years and which he now leaves to come to Peterborough is an excellent charge one which from the standpoint of property, membership, Christian service and influence stands among the strongest of Canadian Methodism.

Mr. Peever goes to the First Methodist Church in London. Both cities are fortunate in the exchange.

DOING ITS BIT.

Y.M.C.A. Serving Soldiers and Boys Makes Valuable National Contribution

In a series of well prepared advertisements the local Y.M.C.A. is seeking to graphically present some phases of its work which it seems desirable that the public should understand.

Today attention is called to the fact that while other Ontario towns have been required to provide thousands of dollars for sites and building equipment, Peterborough, through the far-sighted generosity of Mrs. Charlotte Nichols has been saved this expense.

In view of this fact and the more important fact that this association is renderng and has rendered valuable servce to the boys and young men of the community, our citizens should see that it has financial support adequate to its present and future necessities.

The place the Y.M.C.A. is taking in serving our solder boys, both at home and overseas a sufficient commendation of its importance to the nation and empire and full warrant for any appeals it may make to the public for moral and financial support. The Peterborough Association has not been behind in doing its "bit" in this particular as every man in khaki has been granted special privileges and has been given every opportunity possible by its equipment to make himself fit for serving King and Country.

CHEESE GRADED BY COMMISSION THE NEW RULES

THAT WILL GOVERN THE PURCHASE IN CANADA THIS SEASON.

The rules governing the prices of cheese as laid down by the Government Cheese Commiss on are:—

All surplus cheese is forwarded to the British Admiralty. That is the local consumption of the product amounts to about 25 per cent. of the amount made, the other 75 per cent. being turned over to the British Admiralty. Cheese thus sold are to be tested on the ship at Montreal, which means no more inspection at the factories.

The Imperial Government fixes the price at 21 3-4c for the summer's make. The average price last year was found to be 19 cents, and with an increase of 23.4 cents, it will be found that the dairymen of Canada will realize an increase of $3,200,000. The commissioners are J. A. Ruddick, Ottawa, James Alexander, Montreal, and W. McGowan, of London, England.

The following rules will govern the purchase of cheese by the cheese commission, which is subject to alterations from time to time:

There shall be three grades of cheese; unsuitable grades will be classed as culls. No cheese will be accepted under ten days old leaving the factory. Cheese badly boxed will be graded lower and cheese must be coopered to the satisfaction of the commission and boxes clamped with iron hooping. Each dealer will use a distinct mark for each grade of cheese shipped by him as may be directed by the commission. Dealers shall be responsible for the weights and qualities of their respective shipments regardless of the inspection in Montreal, in the same manner as they would be if cheese were sold C.I.F. London rules.

Lingering Weakness Following Disease

Banished by the Wonderful Tonic Powers of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

How often victims of disease such as la grippe, fevers, or contagious troubles are left weak, ailing and despondent after the disease itself has disappeared. They do not pick up strength as they ought; remain listless, tired and discouraged. The reason for this is that the blood has been impoverished by the ravage of the disease through which the victim has passed. Strength will not return until the blood has been enriched. The blood can be purified and enriched by no other medicine as quickly and as surely as by Dr. Williams Pink Pills—to enrich the blood and strengthen the nerves is the whole mission of these pills. Thousands have found them beneficial in bringing strength and energy after disease had left them weak and run down. Miss Hannah Hamilton, Everett, Ont., says:—"After an attack of la grippe I was so run down and anaemic that I could scarcely walk. I had no color, no appetite, and constant headaches. The medicine I was taking was doing me no good and I had almost lost hope of getting better. I was asked to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and it was not long until I could feel that they were helping me, and after taking them for a couple of months I was completely cured. I now never fail to recommend these pills to anyone needing a blood builder."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail postpaid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PITY THE POOR COAL DEALERS

THOSE AT LONDON ASSERT THEY ARE OPERATING AT A LOSS.

TORONTO, June 16. — "Yet two thousand labor unions of the city of London stormed the city hall to obtain relief."

This climax of ingratitude was referred to John M. Daly of London, in an address to the retail coal merchants of Ontario, some two hundred of whom are in convention at the King Edward. No city on the continent, he asserted, obtained as liberal supply of coal at as reasonable a price as London, but still the people were ungrateful.

The coal merchants were themselves to blame for conditions which allowed them little profit, he said, because they tamely submitted to the slanderous statements of the press and made no effort to ward off the attacks of the public. In 32 years, he said, half the coal sold in London had been sold at a loss. He himself had not made more than fifty cents a ton on his coal.

The Jackson, Mich., prison plantation is after the wartime production record, using tractors, plowing at night with headlights.

COAL MEN ARE HOPEFUL.

Think Supply Large Enough if Railways Can Handle.

The coal dealers of the province who wound up their convention in Toronto yesterday, are hopeful of the fuel famine being averted before the period of winter. "We are told by the shippers that the production this year will exceed last year by over one million tons," said A. B. Caspell, secretary of the association. "There is every indication that we will get our supplies for the winter. It is likely that the supply will be coming freely during July and August, but it evidently will be more or less a hand to mouth existence.

"One thing can help the situation tremendously, and that is for the people to refrain from getting panicky about the situation. There is no chance of supplies for stocking up, but with a little patience the people will get their coal for the winter."

If the railways can handle the traffic the coal men say they will come through all right.

Oxford County Council considers that the Government Commission, in enacting that cheese be graded at Montreal, has been unjust, and that the examination and grading should be done at the point of manufacture.

MARKET PRICES

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

The market this morning was a very good one and there was a large supply as well as a good demand for all the offerings.

Butter was about a cent to two cents a pound lower and eggs were off from two to three cents.

The fowl was not of the best quality and while the prices were high the birds offered did not appeal to the buyers that could afford to purchase. The hog market is 50c lower for next week and are now quoted at $14.50 for local delivery.

The Peterborough Cheese Board will meet next Wednesday morning. Some of the Eastern factories have been getting 21 1-16 for their cheese.

LARGE POTATO CROP IN THIS PROVINCE

Sir William Hearst, Premier and Minister of Agriculture, has issued a statement regarding the potato crop of the province. From all reports received the crop promises to be larger than last year, when the crop was not up to the average.

The large potato-growers are putting in an even better quality of seed potatoes this year. Different counties are reporting increase from 10 to 25 per cent., and there should be a considerable surplus this year from local needs. The department of agriculture has helped to distribute seed potatoes during the past week, and many purchasers have been able to get in touch with sources of supply through the department.

CHEESE JUMPED.

MANITOBA'S PLAN

Government Ground to be Converted Into Homesteads

With a view to establishing an ideal community settlement along the Greater Winnipeg water district line, the provincial government co-operated with the G.W.W.D. Commission and acquired from the Dominion Government three and one-half townships in the Birch River district, 72 miles east of Winnipeg. This land will be placed at the disposal of intended settlers, and allotted to them as 40-acre farms. Homestead conditions will apply, but only married men will be given the opportunity of taking up one of these small farms. Very great encouragement will be extended to the men locating on these farms by the provincial government. All preliminary improvements will be made, a school house erected, while the City of Winnipeg purchased the wood from the land in clearing it. J. S. Woodsworth, director of social research bureau for the three prairie provinces, applied his theories of improving social conditions.

The scheme is in the nature of an experiment of one of the popular solutions advanced to meet the problem of handling returned soldiers, and, if carried out on a broader scale, with the returned soldiers as the settlers. The district which will be colonized is fertile, and the settlers will be encouraged to go in for small fruit farming, poultry and hog raising. E. W. Kopecki has been appointed land settlement agent, and will also act as business agent in marketing the produce for the settlers.

CANADA'S MINES SUPREME

Leads in Many Lines—Mines Help Railways Surprisingly

Mr. Arthur A. Cole, President of the Canadian Mining Institute, addressing the Empire Club of Toronto to show the importance of the mining industry in Northern Ontario, gave the figures of freight carried by the Temiskaming Northern Ontario Railway during five years, showing that 47% was contributed by mines and 13½ by agriculture. Taking the whole of Canada, the railways carried in 1913 the products of mines, 38% of the total freight, of agriculture, 16% of the total, while manufactures were 14.8%. In the United States, during two normal years, the products of mines formed 53% of the total, or nearly six times as much as the freight from agriculture which was 9% of the total.

Canada's total mineral production amounted annually to $150,000,000, of which Ontario province produced nearly half. Canada's coal resources are the greatest in the world; our asbestos deposits in Quebec supply most of the asbestos of commerce; the great nickel deposits in the world are at Sudbury, Ontario. That Province had also the largest body of high-grade talc on the continent, at Madoc; also the largest body of high-grade feldspar on the continent, near Verona; the greatest mica mine on the continent at Sydenham; the greatest graphite mine at Calabogie; and a molybdenite discovery near Ottawa may outstrip all rivals.

"He Has Gone West"

There has long been a popular slang phrase for a man who was going out for an evening of pleasure in the West End of London. When he wished to tell us that he was planning a jolly supper party and an evening at a music hall he summed it up by saying he was "going West." The men at the front who tell of the death of a comrade say, "He has gone West."

Rolling ground should be chosen for the location of the movable hog house as sufficient drainage is most important for the health of the pigs.

RAIN COULD KILL US

Atmosphere Saves Our Lives from Nature's Bombardment

A scientific man writes: The fiercest bombardment conceivable would not be nearly so destructive to human life as an ordinary shower if it were not for the protective covering of our atmosphere. We live, move, and have our being at the bottom of an air room forty miles or more deep. Therefore, we are safe, not only from falling raindrops, but from meteorites and other wandering bodies from outer spaces. But, supposing that it were possible for human beings to exist in an atmosphere that rose only to a few feet above their heads, and that storm clouds could form in the region outside such a low-grade atmosphere, then every raindrop would prove as fatal to earthly creatures as if it were a steel bullet fired from a dynamite gun.

WESTERN WOMEN ADVOCATE REFORM

Changes Suggested Looking to Improvement in Existing Status of Women

Mrs. A. V. Thomas, of Winnipeg, addressing the Women's Auxiliary of the Grain Growers said that the trend of modern life was more and more for women to be wage-earners and have their own property. She was anxious they should think of some form of franchise, say a free franchise like the provincial, which would enable women on the farms to vote in municipal and school elections. At present farm women, except in the rare instances where they owned farms of their own, had not that privilege.

Mrs. Jas. Barrett, of Bagot, said she found that very few women have any money of their own to use as they wish. The reason so many women have no money is hard times, or carelessness and poor management, and women have gone on leaving everything in the hands of their husbands, but now things have changed. Woman is learning to take her rightful place in the world, and she should learn to co-operate with her husband in business as well as in work.

Mrs. Joseph Bennett, of Pine Creek, urged on parents the necessity of making the home pleasant, of giving children some possessions of their own, and allowing them the full financial returns. She said that conveniences in the home help to keep the girls on the farm, and some financial recognition of their work in the way of wages. Too often the value of the girl's work is overlooked. Also, some girls are not fitted for the country, and no effort should be made to keep them. To keep boys on the farm they must be allowed to go to picnics. They should be given some stock of their own. They should be encouraged by working co-operatively with their father, and in this trying time no effort should be considered too great to make the home attractive.

Mrs. McGee pointed out the importance of understanding food values. She advised having domestic science training in the rural schools. She acknowledged the value of system in work, but warned housekeepers not to be a slave to system. A happy home is more important than a home dusted every day. There should be labor saving devices.

BUTTER-MAKING

You know, there are people that seem to be natural-born buttermakers. Given almost any kind of a poor cow, provided with little in the way of convenience in saving milk, yet the butter they produce will be sweet, firm and possess the keeping qualities. "Gilt-edged butter," the market calls it. Again there are women, no difference if provided with cows of rich milk, cool cellars or spring houses and all appliances needed for making good butter, and not a pound of butter can they make fit to eat. It is a case of stupidity and laziness, a lack of love for the work. They are of the kind that will not listen to you if you insist that knowing how to make sweet, solid, keepable butter is fully as much a work of art as painting a good picture, and times over more necessary in the economy of living than the embroidering or crocheting of an elaborate table cover. Many a white, clatty, quickly spoiled dish of butter have I tried to partake of from off tablecloth and doilies finely hemstitched and embroidered. The mistress had time for this, but not for learning how to make good butter. A poor butter maker, if she only knew it, is invariably given little credit by her neighbors for the works of art she does so laboriously accomplish. They feel that she has failed in the first prime need in art, care and industry of the right sort. A poor, careless butter maker usually proves, when you come to see her home making closely, a poor homekeeper all around.—Ida M. Shepler.

Hatch Eggs On Their Feet

"The emperor penguin of the Antarctic, which has not even a nest, lays a single egg, that must not touch cold ice and is hatched out on the parent's feet," writes a scientist. "The mother," he continues, "has a bare patch of skin on the under side, ringed with long feathers to surround the egg and later the chick; this affords both the

DRESSING THE PART

"You've been beaned badly, but not fatally, I hope," said the tall golfer as he led his agitated fellow player in the direction of the golf shelter. "If you were not so absorbed in gazing into the lustrous eyes of that girl you were playing with you might have heard the warning and had a chance to duck the pill. But the damage is done now and if you will sit on that rocker a moment I shall call that gentleman over there who appears to be a physician from his bearing."

"He's no physician," spoke up the injured golfer. "That's Bill O'Day, the auto racer."

"Why, he looks like a doctor with twenty-seven degrees hanging over his desk. I'll call that college boy and send him for a doctor."

"That isn't a college boy," said the injured golfer, "that's Dean Homer Spoggs, a professor fourteen times over. Don't let him hear you calling him a college boy."

"Now that does beat all!" exclaimed the tall golfer. "One can't tell who's who at all any more. Here I mistake a motor maniac for a physician and then a staid geologist for a green college freshman."

"I don't blame you a bit. The trades and professions don't seem to dress the part any more. And it's a bad thing for all concerned, too. In the old days one could pick a doctor out in a crowd of 10,000. If anything happened you could spot your doc in no time.

"The doctor was a distinct type of citizen. He dressed in conservative manner and wore whiskers of a certain cut used in no other profession. You could always tell him from a banker, for the latter always wore side whiskers.

"You're decidedly right," said the tall golfer. "The old way was the better. I believe a doctor should look like one. If I am indisposed and go to a physician I want him to look at me over his glasses in a dignified way and stroke his beard meditatively while he ponders the great question whether I need paregoric or ipecac. If the doctor looks more like a leading man in the movies than the old style M. D' type, I can't place much faith in his medicine."

"Every word you speak is true," said the injured golfer. "I am going home and apply a cold flatiron to this lump on my brow"

"Better not, old man! Can't tell, y' know. Complications might set in. I'll call over that physician who looks as if he's going to mow the lawn."

"Go to it!" said the injured golfer.

Prevent Loss of Time--- Sales --- Profit

Time is valuable in a store. The less time it takes to complete a sale the more sales you can make.

The National Case Register store system saves time by recording amount of sale, kind of sale—cash—charge, or C.O.D., clerk's initial, and by issuing an unchangeable printed receipt—all operations at once—in three seconds.

The clerk's time is saved. He will be able to attend to more customers. Your customer's time is saved. She will appreciate the service. She will be inclined to make more purchases.

Because time is saved the salesmen will be able to make more sales. Because the National Cash Register makes a complete record of every transaction, no credit sales will be lost through bills being mislaid or through misunderstandings with customers.

A National Cash Register system will protect your profits. All money received or paid out is automatically recorded by the register. Leaks are prevented. The National Cash Register encourages the honesty of your clerks.

There are many ways in which the National Cash Register system will save your time, sales and profits. Have us explain. When shall we call? Write us today.

Only Youthful Princess Blocks German Ambition In the Country of Dikes

ONLY two lives, those of the reigning Queen and her seven-year-old daughter, Princess Juliana, bar the way in the natural order of things to the accession to the throne of the Netherlands by a German prince. It is true that, so far as health and age are concerned, those lives may be described as "first class," but the potential slenderness of the thread was illustrated not long ago in the Hague woods, where the royal automobile carrying Queen Wilhelmina and the little Princess was the victim of a collision that might under less fortunate circumstances have cost the lives of both.

This question of the succession gave Dutchmen some concern before the war, and much more now. Several well known public men have drawn public attention to the matter in the last few days, and what looks like a strong agitation, enjoying widespread sympathy, has been started for a revision of the Constitution declaring null and void all potential rights of succession of foreign princes, leaving the choice of a new sovereign, in such an unhoped-for and unexpected circumstance as the failure of all direct heirs to the throne, entirely to the States General or Parliament of the country. For every Dutchman, practically without exception, whatever be his sympathies in the present war, would regard the accession of a German prince as a calamity.

PRINCESS JULIANA

In the House of Orange, Holland is blessed with a dynasty bound to Holland, and Holland alone by such strong ties that no one at home or abroad would dream of suggesting that the council chambers of the Crown are accessible to other than purely Dutch interests. But if that house were left without living issue, the next claimants to the throne would be found among the collateral princely houses of Saxe-Weimar and Reuss-Kostritz, followed or accompanied by those of Saxe-Mainingen, Hohenzollern, another branch of Reuss-Kostritz, both equally foreign to the Netherlands.

Professor J. A. Van Hamel, a distinguished authority on law, declares in the Amsterdammer: "This game of interests with German royal relations on foreign thrones must teach us that small powers should beware if they do not desire to see, in their highest government circles, foreign aims that might be pernicious to them put in place of their national interests. Is the fact sufficiently reckoned with that, according to the present constitutional regulation of the succession to the throne, the successive princes called to the throne after Princess Juliana are all of German families, mostly officers in the German army, naturally all attached heart and soul and bound to the German policy? Monarchical coupling of this country to another, by a prince who could hardly be anything but an imperial prince-envoy, and who might be admonished from abroad to bear himself "like a good German," of whom, moreover, nothing is known here save that he has not the slightest relations with this country, would be a very serious matter for the coming times.

As regards the exact form that the proposed constitutional revision should take, Professor D. P. D. Fabius, yet another writer on the subject, argues in favor of simply putting all possible claimants besides Princess Juliana out of court, of binding the country in no way to any house or person outside the offspring of Wilhelmina, and thus in case of the necessity occurring leaving the States General an unquestionably free choice in the matter. On the other hand, Professor H. Louis Israels, a well-known publicist, wants to take a cue from the American Constitution, which itself borrowed so much from Dutch political law, in its prescription that only a born American can be elected head of the State. He would have the rule laid down that only those who were born and had remained Hollanders would by right of inheritance succeed to the throne of the Netherlands.

AUTOINTOXICATION OR SELF-POISONING

The Dangerous Condition Which Produces Many Well Known Diseases.

HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THIS TROUBLE

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" — The Wonderful Fruit Medicine — will Protect You

Autointoxication means self-poisoning, caused by continuous or partial constipation, or insufficient action of the bowels.

Instead of the refuse matter passing daily from the body, it is absorbed by the blood. As a result, the Kidneys and Skin are overworked, in their efforts to rid the blood of this poisoning.

Poisoning of the blood in this way often causes Indigestion, Loss of Appetite and Disturbed Stomach. It may produce Headaches and Sleeplessness. It may irritate the Kidneys and bring on Pain in the Back, Rheumatism, Gout, and Rheumatic Pains. It is the chief cause of Eczema—and keeps the whole system unhealthy by the constant absorption into the blood of this refuse matter.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure Autointoxication or self-poisoning — as "Fruit-a-tives" acts gently on bowels, kidneys and skin, strengthens the bowels and tones up the nervous system.

THE CHAFING DISH

Why Not Polish It Up For Spring Breakfasts Now?

AS CHEAP AS GAS BILLS.

There Are Any Number of Menus That Small Families Enjoy Cooked Right on the Table—Besides, It's More Fun Than a Range.

Why in many homes is the chafing dish relegated to the sideboard as an almost useless ornament, dragged forth only for "company?"

If the chafing dish proves itself a useful and practical means of preparing a meal for guests, why is it not equally good to cook family meals, especially the lighter supper, tea and luncheon? Many a time when the hostess herself has to prepare meals she would save herself labor by using the chafing dish instead of cooking in the kitchen and trotting back and forth with the various foods. Perhaps, too, father would not complain so much that he "doesn't get a chance to talk to mother," because she has to spend so much time preparing a meal, if mother used the chafing dish and talked while she cooked.

The chafing dish is a habit which more women should acquire. Once accustomed to the idea of cooking on the table it becomes just as natural and easy as cooking in a special place like the kitchen. The points in favor of the chafing dish are that it obviates the necessity of the hostess rising, that the food can be served piping hot and that with its blazer and pan it is one of the most sanitary food vessels to use and clean.

Many articles used in family suppers, such as creamed chipped beef, oyster stew, broiled or panned chops, kidneys and many more of the dishes having a creamed sauce, can be prepared fully as well in the chafing dish as over any other kind of fuel. Why not use the chafing dish, blazer instead of the ugly frying pan to cook the hamburg steak balls for tonight's supper? If the salad and dessert are already prepared the balls can be made ready, cooked in the dish at the table and served directly to each plate without even soiling the platter.

A breakfast of creamed codfish can be managed most effectively in the blazer, as can bacon, sausages and other morning dainties. Oysters can be sauted, fried with bacon or made into a stew before our very eyes. The chafing dish burner does not smoke and make an odor, as does the kitchen range, and if used with a percolator or toaster there is no reason why an entire meal cannot be made and served vis-a-vis.

The "expense," some say. But we now have denatured alcohol at a low price, which is practically the same as gas at $1 a thousand. A small ten cent can of alcohol burns a long time—enough certainly for three breakfasts. The chafing dish itself is easier to wash than pots and pans, and it permits a most graceful accomplishment to be added to the hostess' repertoire—that of table cookery.

Polish up the chafing dish, install it on the side table instead of behind closed doors and use it every day in the week. Why allow an expensive piece of equipment to be used once a month? If you have current have connections and plug which will permit your chafing dish to be operated electrically. It will be more fun and easier than getting breakfast all by yourself in the kitchen.

Indian Ornaments.

It was to be supposed that when America grew enthusiastic about the oriental novelties that were introduced from China and Japan some clever person would look up our Indian work and bring it out as a rival.

There are now Indian beads from Arizona used as trimming for hats and gowns, and the Indian embroidery, as well as the beaded work; tassels with queer Indian ornaments strung together, and sweaters made of Navajo blankets are among the things offered and accepted.

Everybody does not know that food in general should not be allowed to cool in tin, copper or iron. It must be placed while hot in agate, china or well glazed earthenware.

Green vegetables should be dropped into boiling water, to which a pinch of bicarbonate of soda has been added. Put in salt when the article is half cooked.

If you have covered a pan in which meat is to be roasted never open it to baste the meat. Keep it covered from start to finish. The idea is that the pans are filled with steam, which penetrates the fibers of the meat. If desired to brown the outside leave the cover off for the first half hour in a quick oven.

The shank bones of mutton, of so little general value, if well soaked, add to the richness of gravies and soup stock.

When boiling haricot beans or dried limas do not put in the salt until they are nearly cooked; otherwise they are apt to split and come out of their skins. They should be brought to the boiling point, the water poured off and fresh boiling water poured over them.

What He Advised.

A young man unhappily married and practically penniless took his tale of woe to a prominent divorce attorney in Chicago and concluded with this: "I'm too poor to pay much for a divorce, but my wife makes my life miserable. After I get home at 6 o'clock in the evening I get no peace until I go to sleep. What would you advise?"

"After considering all the facts in your case," said the lawyer, "I would suggest that you get a job which requires you to work all night."—Exchange.

Gay Birds of the Olden Time.

Extravagance in dress prevailed in the reign of Edward III., who ascended the English throne early in the year 1327.

Men then wore silk hoods, particolored coats with deep sleeves and narrow waists, short hose, long pointed shoes, bushy beards and tails of hair at the back of their heads.

"The ladies," says a poet of that period, "are like peacocks and magpies." They were attired in turbans or lofty miters, with ribbons floating from them like streamers, tunics half of one color and half of another and deeply emblazoned zones or belts from the front of which daggers were suspended.

DOCTORS RESENT PRESENCE OF VICTORIAN ORDER NURSE

Boycaygeon Physicians Refuse to Attend Cases That Are Visited by Her.

The monthly committee meeting of the Victorian Order Nurses was held at the home of the Vice President, Mrs. W. G. Smith, Bobcaygeon, with two members of Advisory Board present and five ladies. The usual business of the Branch was gone through and different reports were read.

Mrs. Whyte then read the report of the Assistant Inspector, Miss Russell from Ottawa which created a lengthy discussion after which the following resolution was passed:

That whereas the report of the Assistant Inspector, dated 23rd last states that one of the Doctors of this village absolutely refuses to attend any cases where the nurse is employed and the only other doctor openly resents having her visit any of his cases, whereas such local prejudice is a detriment to the successful work of the Victorian Nurse in this community, and whereas on this account the Victorian Nurse has resigned her position here. Therefore be it resolved that this branch while believing that a Victorian Nurse is a necessity in the community, in the schools and in the homes of the people believe that for the time being her resignation be permitted to take effect and no successor be asked to be appointed in her place and the matter be reported to the General Board at Ottawa.

TWO SOCIETIES MAKE PROPOSAL TO RAISE RATE

IN ORDER TO PLACE THEMSELVES ON SOUND ACTUARIAL BASIS.

Notice has been received by the Provincial Department of Insurance that the Oddfellows' Relief Association and Canadian Order of Foresters propose to put increased insurance rates into effect to put themselves on a sound actuarial basis.

The new monthly rates upon $1,000 insurance which the Oddfellows will pass upon at their convention in Kingston on July 25 are: 25 years, $1.05; 40 years, $1.71; 45 years, $2.09; 59 years, $4.05; 60 years, $4.30; 61 years, $4.50; 62 years, $4.75; 63 years, $5; 64 years, $5.30; 65 years, $5.65; 66 years and over, $6. The extent of the increase may be observed in comparison of old and new rates. At 25 years $1.80 was paid every two months, as compared with $1.05 a month by the new rate. At 40 years $3.75 was paid every two months, as compared with the new rate of $1.71.

At 45 years $4.19 every two months, as compared with the new rate of $2.09 a month. In the older ages the increase averages about 50 per cent. In addition to rates quoted assessment dues of 20 cents a month are payable.

The Canadian Order of Foresters' new monthly rates to be considered at a meeting in Hamilton next week are: 16 years, 65c; 20 years, 69c; 25 years, 80c; 30 years, 95c; 35 years $1.08; 40 years, $1.27; 45 years, $1.53; 50 years, $1.91; 55 years, $2.45; 60 years, $3.19; 65 years, $4.26; 70 years, $5.80; 75 years, $8. The old rates were: 16 to 25 years, 60c; 25 to 30 years, 65c; 30 to 35 years, 70c; 35 to 40 years, 85c; 40 to 45 years, $1.00. In addition to these rates, lodge dues are payable.

By the Insurance Act, as amended, all fraternal societies must, after Dec. 31 next, make a valuation by actuary of assets and liabilities and a report be sent to every member before July 1 of every third year thereafter.

WAR PROSPERITY

Lessons From The American Civil War

DURING the year 1916 Canadians added more than two hundred millions of dollars to their bank deposits. The per capita average in savings banks was increased during this period from $55 to $92.25. Our export trade, during the year ending September 1, 1916, reached the grand total of one billion and fifty-two millions of dollars. Canada's total trade for the same period showed a gain of about 90% mark that within 10% of doubling the total trade of the previous twelve months.

The estimated value of the agricultural production of Canada's western Provinces, during 1916, reached a total of more than two hundred and thirty one millions of dollars. This great wealth was created by a rural population of only slightly more than three-quarters of a million people.

These figures indicate wonderful prosperity in Canada. They tell a story of prosperity in a nation at war that is almost unbelievable to the outside world. Residents of the United States who come into Canada express amazement at the signs of prosperity to be found on every hand. The crowds to be seen at the theatres and places of amusement and indulgence in practically every large city indicate that our people have plenty of money to spend. The manner in which the war loans have been over-subscribed may be taken as another indication of the flood of war prosperity in Canada to-day.

But what of the period after the war? Will this prosperity live? Will Canada at the close of the war be able to maintain the big balance of trade in her favor which is now being piled up at the rate of half a billion dollars per year? When the demand for munitions cease, will we be able to transfer all these factories to normal trade conditions and still hold this war-time prosperity?

Accepting the possibility that the war will continue for another year or more it is time we were evolving some plan to care for these after the war conditions. But to plan is not enough. We must act. That Canada faces a serious situation in this approaching ante-war period is predicted in the history of the Civil War in the United States, where conditions in the Northern States were quite similar in many respects to those which now prevail in Canada.

From 1862 on to the close of the war, the Northern States showed prosperity on every hand. The raiding parties from the Confederate Army breaking through into Pennsylvania carried back to the half-starved South stories that Northern industries were going ahead as if the nation was running upon a well-organized peace schedule, instead of being engaged in a momentous civil war. The Chicago Tribune near the close of the war said: "Commerce, business, manufactures and labor are going ahead as in a profound peace, save with more impetus and whirling activity than peace ever knew. The New York Economist, however, pointed out that much of the apparent prosperity was fictitious. It declared that the laboring people were suffering because of war conditions because wages had increased only about 12%, while the cost of living had more than doubled. Professor Roland P. Falkner, a recognized statistical authority of that day presented two important conclusions after a careful study of civil war conditions: "During the war period the advance in wages was not commensurate with the advance in prices." The late Nelson W. Aldrich, the great economist of the United States Senate, reviewed the apparent prosperity during and after the Civil War in the following: "Money wages responded with unmistakable slowness to the inflating influence of the civil war. In 1865, when prices stood at 217 as compared with 100 in 1860, wages had only touched [illegible]

We find also that the demand for labor was the greatest in the history of the States up to that period. The extensive [illegible] resulting from the farms and farming districts, and the extraordinary demands of the munition plants brought a shortage of labor everywhere. During the last two years of the Civil War many of the farms in the Central Western States remained [illegible] because it was impossible to secure help. From 1863 to 1866 immigration from Europe to the United States increased at a rapid rate, yet the demand for laborers was so great that Congress saw fit to enact laws to still further increase this immigration.

According to Rhodes' "History of the United States," it was tradition in skilled labor circles that times were hard just before the war and began to be good during the Civil War. According to this authority the wage-earning mechanics bought lots and saved money during the war period, while the clerks, teachers and others on a salary basis suffered.

At the close of the war there was a rapid spread of enthusiasm for a continuation of the so-called prosperity. New enterprises were launched on every hand; speculation was rife. The returning soldier farmers migrated in large parties to fertile valleys tributary to the Mississippi. This broadening of the agricultural situation brought a demand for more rail mileage and something more than 15,000 miles were constructed in the West from 1865 to 1873. This work brought employment to thousands. The first annual report of the Commissioner of Labor, published in 1886, reviews this construction period, as follows:

"The stimulation to all industries resulting from the war, the speculative enterprises undertaken, the extension of credits, and the slackening of production necessarily caused a reaction; but the period was hardly spoken of by business men as one of any particular hardship. People for a while began to be conservative, but the impetus engendered by the war could not be overcome and it was not until the crash of 1873 that the effects of undue excitement in all branches of business and trade were thoroughly realized."

Comparing these Civil War conditions with those prevailing in Canada, we see many danger signals. The most important of these is the necessity for re-organizing production upon a sound and economic basis after our great munition plants have fulfilled their function, and for increasing our agricultural production.

We take pride in the large agricultural production in Canada, yet it is startling the great quantities of farm products we purchase every year from the United States. The imports for 1913 shows that we bought 6,000,000 dozen more eggs than we sold the Americans, and that we consumed a quarter of a million pounds of butter made across the line and sold them practically nothing. We purchased 300,000 pounds more cheese from our neighbors to the south than we sold them, and we paid $100,000 in duty upon $1,000,000 worth of tomatoes grown in the States. We even bought 500,000 bushels of potatoes more than we sold.

Canada ought to produce all this farm produce within her own borders and have a balance for sale in the world markets.

It is estimated that some 200,000 workers are now employed upon munitions, and that 75% of this number will require different employment after the war. We will have some 200,000 soldiers returning to our shores after the war, of which number, it is estimated, we will be called upon to find employment for fully 150,000. In addition, there will be, quite probably, a flood of immigration to add to the labor market.

A practical scheme, for re-organizing our manufacturing production should embrace a plan to induce American manufacturers to build branch plants in Canada. We must make a study of the market possibilities which our manufacturers will have at home and among the entente nations after the war.

These After-the-War problems are worthy of the best efforts of our greatest statesmen and thinkers. Canada has won nationhood through her part in the great war on behalf of the Empire. She holds an opportunity to develop into a world power if she builds her future upon the proper economic foundation. But we must act quickly and intelligently if we are to make the most of these big opportunities.

ISOLDE MENGES

England's Greatest Instrumentalist To Return To Peterboro

The young but great artist, Isolde Menges, who startled a Peterboro audience on Monday evening, June 11th, at the Conservatory of Music in this place by her wonderful genius is to appear here again on Wednesday evening next, June 20th, when she will present the same program she gave in Montreal on June 4th. This was not the original intention, but some musical enthusiasts here have persuaded Miss Menges that she would do well to give just as serious a program in Peterboro as she would give in New York or London. The young violinist is pleased to take this opportunity, as she has been advocating better musical programs for some time. She has been fighting against the managerial tendency to make programs almost entirely devoid of seriousness by cramming in too many small pieces as a concession to those who merely want to hear and not to understand. We want more artists like Miss Menges, who is determined to bring the best in music to wherever she goes. She knows she has a great message for the public, and is determined to try and deliver it.

It is interesting to know that England has at last turned out an instrumentalist who can be classed with the best the world has ever produced. Melba expressed herself at Miss Menges' debut in London in unusual enthusiastic terms, saying that nothing would please her more than to have Miss Menges on tour with her, but Miss Menges' parents had other views. They thought that her work would best develop by continuing her own recitals, and their anticipations have been crowned with unique success. No man, woman or child who has the welfare of education at heart should miss this golden opportunity of hearing England's greatest instrumentalist.

VEGETABLE WAX.

Production of Needed Commodity From Various Plants.

Vegetable wax is already filling an important place in the economic needs of the world, and there are many indications that the production of wax from certain plants will increase as time goes by. It was not long ago that the world supplied certain of its needs with animal oils and development of the vegetable oil industry, as well as the development of the mineral oil industry, has been remarkable. The uses for wax have increased, and a number of wax-producing plants are being employed on a commercial scale. The industry of making high-grade wax from the candelilla plant has made long strides in the last few years, and there are several big factories for the extraction of wax in the candelilla-growing sections of the United States. It has been estimated that there are 1,000,000 acres of land on which candelilla is growing wild and in great profusion in what is known as the upper border region of Texas. It is believed that not only may the candelilla-bearing territory be enlarged, but that the war-producing qualities of the plant may be improved by cultivation. There are also large areas of the wild candelilla lands in Mexico.

The recovery of wax from the bayberry was for centuries a New England household industry, and it has lately become a factory industry, the wax of the plant being generally used in the making of bayberry candles, held in high esteem for use and ornament by New Englanders. A bushel of the berries yields, as a rule, between four and five pounds of wax. Another plant belonging to the same genus is the "sweetgale," which grows abundantly in the bogs and marshes of Scotland. It is a small shrub with leaves somewhat like those of myrtle or willow, having a fragrant odor and bitter taste, and yielding an essential oil by distillation.

The wax of the candelilla plant is used in making candles, phonograph records, wood and leather polishes, floor wax, certain varnishes, linoleum, rubber compounds and celluloid, and it also enters into use in pharmacy and in the making of electrical insulation. The candelilla plant grows on the poorest quality of soil, and before it was found to have a commercial value for the wax contained it was considered a pest.

Though candles are not so generally used as they were before the days of mineral illuminating oils, gas and electricity, they still constitute an important article of manufacture. The candle is an ancient form of lighting. The word comes from the Latin word, "candere," which means to "glow."

Beeswax and tallow were used for lighting purposes by the Romans. Lengths of cotton or flax fiber were dipped in these substances and they usually burned with much smoke and soot and little light. The rushlights of the middle ages, and even of remoter times, were rushes that had been stripped nearly to the dry pith and dipped in wax or tallow. When "candlepower" was adopted as the unit of light measure by the London gas act of 1860 it was taken to mean the amount of light which would be given by a sperm candle, six of which would weigh a pound, and which consumed 120 grains of the candle each hour.

Candles are made and have been made for centuries by four distinct processes called "dipping," "pouring," "drawing," and "molding." Few candles of commerce are now made of pure beeswax or tallow, but usually by combining stearine, a trade name for a mixture of various animal and vegetable fats; paraffin wax, obtained from petroleum; spermacetti, obtained from the sperm whale; beeswax and mineral wax, obtained from ozocerite. Palm oil and cocoanut oil are also extensively used in the candle-making trade.

DECISIVE FACTORS IN VICTORY

Thrift and economy are essential in the prosecution of the war. Wastefulness should be rigidly excluded from daily operations. On the farm, in the factory, in business establishments and in the home all extravagance should be condemned. The implements that are not really needed this year, the machinery that is not essential for another twelve months, the desks and the fittings that are not absolutely necessary, the repairs and the improvements that can be delayed—there should be no expenditures upon these things until true economy demands their purchase. The war is tremendously costly. Every possible cent is needed for victory. Canada has never carried such financial burdens. She cannot continue to carry them so successfully unless you co-operate. It is your duty to the country and to the divisions on the firing line to put every possible dollar into Government War Savings Certificates. Ask your nearest Money Order Post Office or Bank for details.

U.S. TO SWEEP ENEMY FROM AIR

TWO KILLED, SIXTEEN HURT IN RAID BY ZEPPELINS ON ENGLISH COAST YESTERDAY

One Zeppelin Brought Down in Flames After Fierce Fight, Witnessed by Thousands, and Crew Burned to Death---Doctors Arrive too Late to Render Aid.

LONDON, June 18.—Two persons were killed and sixteen injured in an air raid by two Zeppelins over the east and southeast coast of England early Sunday morning. One Zeppelin was brought down in flames, all of her crew perishing.

Thousands Witnessed Fight.

A despatch from an east coast town says that thousands of persons witnessed the destruction of the Zeppelin. The attack by anti-aircraft guns on the dirigible lasted fully half an hour, and people issued from their houses half-dressed to watch the event. When the black object drifting across the sky from the south-east to the north-east was seen to burst in flames the spectators cheered tumultuously. Pedestrians and cyclists dashed off in the direction of unexpectedly long distance few succeeded in locating the Zeppelin, the fallen airship, but owing to the which fell a few miles from the coast. It had been first winged by a land gun, and was then finished by an aeroplane, which the Zeppelin fought to the last with her guns.

The dirigible dropped in a field of corn, far from any habitation, and was completely destroyed. All of the crew were killed and their bodied badly charred. Some of the men appeared to have jumped from the doomed airship. Doctors hurried to the spot, but their services were needless.

Then Came the End.

The British airman who attacked the Zeppelin descended nearby unhurt. According to the story of a spectator who witnessed the affair, searchlights enabled him to follow the movements of the Zeppelin and the attacking airman. The Zeppelin twisted and turned in an attempt to escape or beat the aeroplane off, and the machine gun fire of the dirigible was heard distinctly. Presently another airman came upon the scene, and the Zeppelin continued to zig zag in an endeavor to head out to sea. But the first airman held to his quarry and within a few minutes the end came.

Air Raids Not Confined to Huns Bonar Law Tells House

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 18.—Replying to a series of questions in the House of Commons this afternoon as to whether the British Government had decided upon reprisals for the German air raids on England Bonar Law said the Government intended to take steps not only for damaging the enemy but for preventing raids on England. It was a mistake Mr. Law said, to assume that air raiding was confined to the enemy. The British air force in France had raided German communications and important military objectives behind the lines which were of sufficient importance to justify such enterprises.

HYPNOTIC PERFORMANCE DRAWS PROTEST FROM THE LOCAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN

Object to That Class of Entertainment and the Admission of Young People to Witness Them—Committee Reports Received.

The regular monthly meeting of the local Council of Women was held on June 14th, at 3.30 p.m. The president, Mrs. Neal, in the chair.

After prayer, roll call and minutes of previous meeting, reports of committees were taken up.

Mrs. Mowat, reporting for the playgrounds committee, stated that the net proceeds of the rag and waste paper collections amounted to $114.

The thanks of this committee are gratefully tendered to those who saved waste for this purpose; also to those who kindly assisted in the collection.

The playgrounds committee in its capacity of carnation day committee for the Playgrounds Association reported net proceeds from the sale of carnations on Mothers' day of $235

Several interesting suggestions for the September meeting were discussed and a program outlined.

It was unanimously agreed that that this council go on record as protesting against the admission of children and immature young people to the class of entertainment (hypnotism, etc.) given in the city during the week of June 11 to 16. It was felt that the thinking people of the community would endorse a protest against the recurrence of this type of performance in the city.

A brief resume of the important sessions of the National Council in Winnipeg recently was given by Mrs. Harstone.

The Women Auxiliary to the Speakers' Patriotic League brought forward for discussions a matter of interest to the Great War Veterans' Association.

The sub-executive of the local council was instructed to deal with the matters in conference with the Patriotic Societies of the city.

In future meetings of the society will begin at 3 o'clock.

BRITISH FALL BACK SLIGHTLY BUT STILL HOLD INFANTRY HILL

Germans Followed Heavy Bombardment With Counter Attack This Morning---Artillery Activity Continues in Neighborhood of Ypres.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 18.—Early this morning the enemy delivered a strong local attack under cover of a heavy bombardment upon positions captured by us on the morning of Thursday, east of Monchy Le Preux. After severe fighting our troops were compelled to fall back from certain advanced positions which had been established by us in front of our main new positions which we still hold on Infantry Hill. There was considerable artillery activity on both sides during the night north of the Scarpe river. Hostile artillery activity continues in the neighborhood of Ypres.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT.

PARIS, June 18. — "Intermittent cannonading occurred at various points on the front last night," says today's official statement. Our reconnoitering parties penetrated the enemy lines near Leintrey and southwest of Sennones, bringing back prisoners.

GERMANS STRIP WARSHIPS.

PARIS, June 18. — Artillerymen taken prisoners recently say that many long range guns now being used by the Germans have been taken his guns were from the Kaiser Barbarossa, while many others were from warships. One prisoner said from the same class of vessels. The feeling between the German infantry and artillery is becoming more intense, and there is a general complaint of insufficient guns.

IMMEDIATE OFFENSIVE BY RUSSIANS.

PETROGRAD, June 18. — The Duma in secret session has passed a resolution for an immediate offensive by the Russian troops. The resolution declares a separate peace with Germany or prolonged inactivity on the battlefront to be ignoble treason toward Russia's allies, for which future generations never would pardon the Russia of the present day.

"The Duma therefore considers," the resolution adds, "that the safety of Russia and the maintenance of the liberties which have been obtained lie in close co-operation with Russia's allies."

Russians Report Success.

PETROGRAD, June 18.—In the region of Lysietz southwest of Stanlau our scouts, forcing their way through the enemy's wire penetrated behind his advanced posts, dispersed the occupants. Our aviators bombed several important points behind the enemy's lines.

CAPT. BURNHAM ACTS QUICKLY

(Special to The Review.)

OTTAWA, June 18. — Captain Burnham clipped from Saturday's issue of The Review the despatch from Montreal giving an account of an assault upon wounded soldiers by anti-conscriptionists in that city Friday night, and, laying it before the Department of Justice, demanded an immediate investigation. The request was granted, and the Dominion Police will be asked to report upon the matter immediately.

CAN CARRY BILL ON PARTY VOTE

GOV'T HOPE TO SUCCEED WITHOUT AID FROM OPPOSITION.

OTTAWA, June 18.—Sir Robert Borden moved the second reading of the Military Service Bill in the Commons today, and in doing so replied to criticisms up to the present time levelled against the measure. He will also give some further information as to the necessity for compulsory military service and as to the method and time of its application.

Efforts have been made to secure a solid Liberal vote in the Commons in favor of an amendment calling for a referendum upon the question. Government supporters are now confident, however, that they can defeat any amendment which is offered on the motion for the second reading and carry the bill through the House even without the aid of Liberal conscriptionists. It is asserted, however, that they will gain some Liberal votes on any amendment. For various reasons, 31 constituencies, of which 22 are Conservative seats and nine Liberal seats, will not be represented. This will reduce the Government majority to 33. Even if 12 French-Canadian Conservatives vote in favor of a referendum, however, it will leave a Government majority of nine. On the main motion for the second reading the Government majority will likely be above the normal because Liberal conscriptionists will then cast their votes for the bill.

LIBERALS WILL SOON SHOW HAND

SIR WILFRID EXPECTED TO DECLARE POLICY THIS AFTERNOON.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, June 18.—No intimation as to what took place in Liberal caucus this morning was given out after its close. Exact form of amendment to the Borden Conscription Bill is said to have been left to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who is expected to enunciate his policy in the House this afternoon after Sr Robert Borden has moved the second reading of the bill.

AMERICANS PLAN TO DRIVE GERMANS FROM AIR WITH BIG FLEET OF U.S. AIRPLANES

Aerial Board Ask for Government Grant of Six Hundred Million Dollars---Can Train Aviators and Build Airships Without Interfering With Other War Work.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, June 18.— The American Air Craft Board proposes by next spring to have the Allies ready to literally drive the Germans from the air. President Wilson has been asked to put the Administration's support behind a great project for which an appropriation of six hundred million dollars is asked.

Secretary of War Baker said today: "The War Department is behind these plans with every ounce of energy and enthusiasm at its command. We can train thousands of aviators and build thousands of machines without interfering in the slightest with the plans for building up our army and providing the Allies with food and munitions. To train and equip our armies and send them abroad will take time and in the meantime we can be devoting to this most important service vast quantities of productive machinery and skilled labor.

"According to the best obtainable information there are about seven million men on the western front today. A few additional infantry units would count for little in forming a decision. A few thousand trained aviators, however, may spell the whole difference between victory and defeat."

BRITISH ARE SUPREME IN BATTLES WITH AIRSHIPS

Enemy Lost Ten in Recent Engagement Against One by Their Opponents.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE, June 18.—German air fighters have again resorted to mass formation. British pilots report they are seldom found since the battles of Messines in less than fifteen machines and some times in groups of forty to sixty. None of these formations have succeeded in crossing the Brit- past few days far back over the Ger- ish lines. Some of the battles of the man position have involved seventy to eighty battle planes. After one of these melees ten German machines were counted lying wrecked on the ground, while only two British airships had quit and one of these had returned to its own lines. One young British pilot recently hovered over a German airdrome and smashed one by one four German machines which came up to attack him.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, JUNE 18, 1917

TOO VALUABLE TO LOSE.

(Lindsay Warder)

In the meantime Capt. Burnham would do well to withdraw his resignation and continue to act as the representative for Peterboro in the House of Commons, where he has done so much good in the past, and where he can be counted on to assume his full share of the responsibility in Government affairs in the future. He is too valuable a member to lose in this time of stress and strain.

INCONSISTENT.

THE LIBERAL PARTY was jealous for the integrity of the Bench when Hon. Robert Rogers and Justice Galt had their dispute during a session of the Manitoba commission. They insisted on accepting as final the finding of the Justice with regard to the Cabinet Minister, maintaining that any other course was a reflection upon the honor of a member of the judiciary.

Two other members of the Bench are reviewing that evidence and the finding of Justice Galt with regard to Hon. Robert Rogers. The Liberals now protest and demand open sessions of the new commission, evidently losing sight of the fact that their contention is one of the most serious reflections on the Bench yet recorded.

ONE USE FOR CONSCRIPTED WEALTH.

J. B. DAVIDSON, a prominent attorney of St. Thomas, has made a suggestion with regard to the conscription of wealth which is likely to meet with general approval. He believes that the financial resources of the country should be commandeered if for no other purpose than to increase the wages of the soldiers.

The men in Canada's fighting force are the best-paid soldiers in the allied fighting army, and yet their compensation is inadequate. The purchasing power of the dollar has shrunk since the scale was fixed, and the allowance made the dependents of the soldiers by the Patriotic Fund has really diminished for the same reason. Wages in private life have increased since the war broke out, but the pay of the men under arms and the allowances to their families, including that from the Government, remain at the original figure.

There has not yet been any difficulty encountered in raising money in Canada for war purposes. The Government should go a step further and conscript wealth in order to secure a fund for raising the pay of the soldiers, besides increasing the allowances to their wives and children. The Patriotic Fund has never yet in Ontario failed to raise the amount asked for by voluntary contribution, but this burden is no more evenly distributed then is that of national defence under the volunteer system. The man who has most at stake in the country should be requird to contribute at least a fair proportion of what is necessary to protect his interests.

"MAY JOURNALISTS CATCH THE SPIRIT."

MR. J. G. ELLIOTT, of the Kingston Whig, who last year held the position of president of the Canadian Press Association, in his annual address in Toronto last week, drew a picture of what, in his opinion, the newspaper should be and the place it should fill in the world. The world still moves. There is improvement noted in every branch of industry, and the newspaper business is no exception. Just as there is more toleration today than ever before for the religious beliefs of others, so there is less of that bitter partisan spirit which has been the curse of this country ever since anything like party government was first organized. One paragraph in Mr. Elliott's address, a copy of which should find a place in the library of every newspaper in the country, and the sentiments of which should be woven into every editorial creed, is as follows:

> "We may also look for changes in the political fabric. No longer—at least not much longer, many hold—are the people to be herded in two camps. There will be a growing spirit of independence—and may journalists catch the spirit—and the possibilities are that with the soldiers' vote, the industrial vote, the women's vote, and two or three other sectional votes among the people, a wider interest will be created and many reforms will be promulgated. This may or may not be in the best interests of the country, but it will be an improvement upon the systems that have prevailed in the past, and may be needed in our reconstruction. There will be opportunity for social service and education along reform lines that will be helpful in the end. I take it that the soldier vote will be very predominant during the period of reconstruction, and it will be well for us as pressmen to follow the soldiers closely and give needed help wherever possible so that the best results may accrue."

Many of the journalists of the country have already caught the spirit which Mr. Elliott hopes may become general. The best papers today no longer follow a political party through thick and thin, adhering to them in good and evil report alike, as they did not so very many years ago. The grafter no longer finds a defender. Even if he is not condemned by the press of the party to which he belongs, he is treated with the chilly disdain of silence. No newspaper can be found to follow party or individual in any flights or support them when their position is wrong even in the eyes of the most superficial observer. The change is already apparent. It may have been first noticed in the thinking and intelligent people themselves, and so has been forced upon the newspapers as a matter of expedient business policy, but however it may have been brought about, it has come.

Not all the leading newspapers of the country, unfortunately, have caught the spirit. It is lamentable that, in a time of stress like the present, there should be discord in Parliament, discord that is fomented by the party papers. There should be no party tactics when the very safety of the nation is in the balance, and there should be no journalistic quibbling with the gravest issue that has ever arisen in Canada.

One of the best proofs that some of the journalists of the country have caught the spirit was afforded last week when the Opposition amendment to the Military Service Bill was announced. One of the leading Liberals organs in Toronto boldly announced the step as a mere play for party advantage, a feeble attempt to embarrass the Government in the titanic task which it has undertaken.

The newspaper that is partisan in season and out of season no longer commands public confidence or exerts influence among its readers. Its opinions and its policy are always easily anticipated. Editors who either fail to read aright the new popular sentiment or who, by reason of long years of following the same beaten path, are unable to strike off into a new trail, are being dropped from the roll or reduced to the ranks by newspaper proprietors alarmed at the waning influence of their journals.

THE RIOTS AT MONTREAL.

WAS IT BY ACCIDENT or design that the anti-conscriptionists in Montreal chose the municipality that is called Verdun as the scene of their rioting, when the consummation of the disgraceful proceedings was an assault on wounded soldiers? The name Verdun should have given the rioters pause. It was at Verdun that their fellow-countrymen in France put up such a gallant defence against the Huns, a service, too, for which they were conscripted and which was none the less valiant and effective on that account.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

EVERY TIME Berlin says the Allied offensive is over, prepare to hear of another drive.

• • • •

THE RIOTERS in Montreal who assaulted wounded soldiers acknowledge Sir Wilfrid Laurier as their leader.

• • • •

THE EQUATOR is an imaginary line, according to the geography, and the Hindenburg line will soon be another.

• • • •

THE ONLY CAMPAIGN literature which the Conservative party requires is the letter written to Sir Robert Borden by Sir Wilfrid Laurier on coalition.

• • • •

THERE ARE STILL royal heads in Europe upon which a straw hat, even of this year's styles, would be more becoming than a jewel-bedecked crown.

• • • •

LIKE ADAM OF OLD, Nicholas and Constantine can severally blame it on "the woman whom Thou gavest to be with me," and with more justification.

• • • •

IF THERE WAS a referendum on conscription, how would Sir Wilfrid Laurier ask the people to vote? Against the war policy, just as he did during the campaign in South Dorchester.

• • • •

"SEND US HELP" is the cry of the Canadian soldiers in the trenches. And in the meantime Parliament plays with the question of conscription and the Opposition quibble for conditions.

• • • •

"SOME ONE HAS COINED the expressive word 'polatriot,'" says the Mail and Empire. We suspect that our contemporary is the guilty party and that it lacks the courage to acknowledge the corn.

He was a brother of John Redmond, the leader of the Irish Nationalists. He was a major in the Sixth Royal Irish Rifles. He was only less known than his brother. The Redmonds have proved their loyalty and good faith at this crisis. Their cause deserves corresponding good faith from the British Government and people.

Printers Are Doing Well.

(Guelph Herald.)

Returned soldiers who queried the motives of printers in regard to conscription, at the Ontario convention in London, ought to, and no doubt did, when the facts were presented, recognise the proud position of the typographical unions of Canada in regard to the war. No other body of workingmen have displayed in such a practical and substantial manner their loyalty to the cause of Empire. In addition to liberal contributions to the various patriotic funds, nearly $8000 has been paid out to relatives of union printers killed in action, of whom nearly seven hundred are at the front. A bonus of $25 is given by some of the unions to each of their members on their departure. The dues of every union printer enlisting are paid, thus preserving his pension and mortuary benefit, and his position is assured him when he returns.

THE BLUFF THAT FAILED

"It surely was a surprise to see you, Jerry!" explained the prosperous-looking man, playfully whirling in his office chair after lighting his cigar. "When you came in the door I thought it was a spectre. Man, how long is it since you left this city.

"Nigh on twenty years, Tom," replied the visitor, whose appearance put him in the "seedy" class.

"Twenty years?" repeated the prosperous business man. "I thought of you once or twice in that time, Jerry. I thought you were dead."

"Not except in the word's connection with broke. You seem to have hit it about right, Tom."

"Hit it right is right, Jerry! Tom Jonesby is the big man here now. Emulated a porous plaster and just stuck till I had my roll baled. Did you see my factory? It was on the siding as you came down—I suppose you blew in on a freight or blind baggage.

"Look out the window there and you'll see my garage—the biggest one in the row. I scrape along with two chauffeurs and five gas cars. The wife has two electrics."

"You married well, eh?"

"Most popular girl in the county. Maybe you remember her — little curly-haired Susie Anders. Biggest wedding ever held here. Leading society now. Makes the elite beg, lie down and jump through a hoop. Went around the world twice on our honeymoon. Most expensive wedding tour ever known in the state."

"You'll soon be in the million class, eh, Tom?"

"Soon? See that stretch of open ground out there? The D. & Z. railroad has been dickering for that chunk for right-of-way. I'm a wise guy, Jerry. I let them think the K. & O. is offering me five times their price. Every D. & Z. official from the president down has been here, but I can bluff 'em all. Remember how I could bluff everybody when we were kids?"

"Except me,' said the seedy-looking man modestly.

"Ha, ha!' laughed the prosperous-appearing man. "Well, I'm a man who'll even give a 'bo credit for retaining a little of his old-time pride. How'd you like a job as porter around my place?"

"I'd like to predict that you'll sell that right-of-way at the price first offered you,' said the seedy-looking man.

"What?' said the prosperous man.

"I'm special attorney for the D. & Z.," said the seedy one. "If you're ready to do business we'll step over to the hotel, where the directors are waiting for us."

NEW LAWS FOR THE AUTOIST

Changes in the law governing motors and motorists have come into force as a result of the legislation passed at the last sesion of the Ontario House.

One of the more interesting is a clause relating to reckless driving, exceeding the speed limit and the driving of motors by persons who are intoxicated. In the past violators of the law under these heads had to be summoned to appear before a magistrate. Now, any peace officer may arrest offenders on the spot without a warrant, provided he has reasonable and probable grounds for believing an offence has been committed. A change has been made in the penalties for infractions of the law. Hitherto a straight penalty of $50 was prescribed for violations of the law relating to markers, as for example failure to exhibit the number in a proper way, for intoxication when running a motor, for running a motor before the legal age, and for omitting to report an accident. Under the amended law, the penalty is left to the discretion of the magistrate, who may impose a fine "not exceeding $50" for the first offence. At the same time the rule regarding accidents has been made more severe. A motorist is required not only to report an accident, but he must render all possible aid," failing which he may be punished.

Restrictions As To Age

But the motorist is not punishable, as he formerly was, for violations of the law, if he was not responsible for such acts. The law now says he shall be held responsible, unless at the time of such violation the motor was in the possession of some person other than the owner, without his consent, such person not being in the employ of the owner. This is evidently to relieve the owner of responsibility when the law is broken by some person who has appropriated his car. A change has been made in the restriction as to the age of the person who may drive a car. A person under 18 could not drive under the old law. Now, a person over 16 and under 18 may drive if licensed after examination as the regular chauffeur is. It was formerly the law that a motorist on approaching a horse or horse-drawn must slow down to seven miles an hour. Now a fifteen-mile gait is allowed. Horses are not so easily frightened as in the early days of the motor. With regard to funeral processions, an important change has been made. Motorists were required, under the old law, when meeting or overtaking a funeral procession, outside of cities, to stop or turn into an intersecting highway. Now, the motorist has to stop or turn off, only on "meeting" a procession, and not on "overtaking" a procession.

Lights on Motor Vehicles

There is a change with reference to the lights on motor vehicles. Until the law was altered a motor could carry on its front one lighted lamp at night. Now, there must be two lighted lamps on front, and a motor cycle must have one lamp in front and an extra lamp for the side-car. The use of search lights has been prohibited for years. Some cars abandoned these lights and carried revolving lights. These lights have now been ordered out of use. No motor can carry a light which revolves on a pivot, so that the rays may be projected in any direction. The headlight problem has been dealt with by making it unlawful to carry any light of over four candle-power equipped with a reflector, unless the same shall be so designed that no person of the beam of reflected light 75 feet ahead of the lamp shall rise above 42 inches from the level surface on which the car stands. This regulation, which is calculated to cause the rays of light to be thrown upon the surface of the street rather than into the eyes of the passing drivers or pedestrians comes into force when the Governor-in-Council orders.

MASON'S MELODIES

ALLIES

Since war against our name is written, I'm mighty glad we have a chance to aid and comfort brave old Britain, and lend a hand to dauntless France. For long I thanked the gods above us that we had peace—strife I abhor— and railed at men who tried to shove us into the noisome reek of war. But sometimes, in the silly gloaming, when I sat by my figtree trunk, all pensively my hang-down combing, I thought our peace was rather punk. For principles we all should cherish the allied nations gave their best, and while they saw their children perish we gloated o'er our treasure chest. Our starry banner flies for freedom—that's always been our pride and boast when tyrants came along we treed 'em, and soaked them where it hurt the most. Yet tyranny was rank and raging, these later years, and still we dreamed; the worst of tyrants war was waging; our eagle rather cooed than screamed. And then we started from our slumbers, we saw the proper course at last, and patriots in joyous numbers have nailed our colours to the mast. And I, who hate all strife and quarrel, now swing the sword and make it hiss; for peace is vicious and immoral in such a crucial time as this.

As Bad As Ever.

Sandy Macpherson came home after many years and met his old sweetheart. Honeyladen memories thrilled through the twilight and flushed their glowing cheeks.

"Ah, Mary," exclaimed Sandy, "ye're just as beautiful as ye ever were and I ha'e never forgotten ye, my bonnie lass."

"And ye, Sandy," she cried, while her blue eyes moistened, "are jist as big a leear as ever an' I believe ye jist the same."

Making the Best of It.

The shipwrecked sailor sat disconsolate on a lonely raft in the middle of the trackless ocean. In his hands he held the last remnants of a pair of shoes. "Though reduced to the lowest extremities and completely surrounded by water," he croaked hoarsely, "I can still take to my heels." With these words he made his semiweekly meal and spent the remainder of the afternoon picking the nails out of his teeth.

The Test.

Some men on the top of a building once dropped a handful of mortar down on a hodcarrier's head to test its hardness. The hodcarrier did not notice it at all.

The men then dropped a brick on the hodcarrier's head. He looked up and growled:

"Hey, be careful where yer droppin' that mortar."

A woman from the city was spending the summer in a small town and one day, while doing her marketing, she asked the butcher how he happened to choose his business.

He hesitated a moment and then:

"Well, I don't know," he answered, "but I always was fond of animals."

Editor Review: Some people talk as if it would be an easy matter for the soldiers to go into the widow's little home and take her only son while the rich man across the street without any children looks on and smokes his pipe? What need he care He has no sons to send, and his taxes are just the same as hers, and no more. Is that fair? Is it justice, and likely to help the cause? Can it or will it succeed?

Is this not why a bill adding income taxes to the rich had to be added?

ONE TYPICAL SLACKER

Young Canadian Ran Away From National Duty

Like Others of His Kind, He Has Taken Out His First Naturalization Papers in the United States, and Feels Greatly Alarmed Because the Washington Government Intends to Have Conscription.

SHORT was the time allotted to the Canadian slacker to enjoy, after his arrival in New York, that feeling of peace and security from military service, says a correspondent of The Toronto Telegram.

Few were the occasions on which he was permitted to gaze fondly upon "his first papers" in the delusion that to him the recruiting sergeants would forever be nothing more than a bad dream. The United States has a form of conscription. He who runs, and that, of course, is the particular joy of the slacker, may read, and it does not help him feel safe from the roar of the cannon, or whistle with joy his favorite air, "I Did Not Raise My Boy to be a Soldier."

It was at the Subway station at 42nd street that the writer met one of the thousands of former Canadian boys who got away from the talk of compulsory military service in the Dominion by walking into the outstretched arms of his Uncle Sammy. That was nearly a year ago, when his Uncle was maintaining a strict neutrality. The boy is twenty-one or twenty-two years of age, and was raised somewhere in Toronto, his parents being British.

"Hello," he cried, on recognizing the writer. "How are things up in Toronto? They say everything's pretty dead all over Canada now. Are you living down here now?"

His questions were answered, and then he proceeded: "Say, how about that conscription scheme? It's a funny thing, but they are getting that up down here, and I don't know what to do. Do you think it would ever be enforced when there are so many Germans down here?"

"It looks as though such a law will be necessary," he was told.

"Do you think they will be able to take me then? You see, I was born in Canada, but when I came here I took out my first papers to avoid being sent back in case of trouble."

"Well, your first papers won't make you a United States citizen."

"Well, I don't know what to do," sighed the former Toronto boy. "I got a good job here on the subway, and I am making good money. If they are likely to catch me for the army I will have to get out, but I don't know where to go. Are there any countries not far away that aren't in the war?"

"There might be some down in South America, but most of them are always having an internal war."

"Like Mexico, eh?"

"Mexico and Brazil and other countries down in that direction."

"Wouldn't the fare be pretty high?"

"I was never down there," explained the writer, "but I would want five hundred or a thousand dollars at least if I were going down there to stay."

"More than I have. But say, there may be conscription here to get men for farm work. How would one go about getting into that? I'd prefer my present job, but I wouldn't mind hard work, and if I could avoid getting into the army, I would go on a farm."

"Doesn't Canada look good to you any longer?" he was asked.

"Canada used to be all right," he answered. "My parents live there, you know, and I get lonesome for them at times. The people in some of those houses I used to call at got sore on me for not enlisting. I didn't mind that at first, although it hurt some not to have them be nice like they used to be, but I got over it. Then they started talking conscription, and I told my mother and father I was going away, and they said all right."

"How did you get the money?"

"I had about fifty dollars and dad let me have twenty-five more."

"So, like the Arab, you quietly stole away?"

"No, I didn't steal away. I told them at the border I was looking for work, and I passed the examination and got down here right, and took out my papers. I wouldn't do any stealing."

Canadians are not so much interested in the vapid talk of the slackers who have left the Dominion because of a fear that they would be called upon to defend their country, beyond the extent of appreciating the fact, which, according to the registration books of the United States Immigration Department, shows that the number of young men of military age who have come to the United States during many weeks of 1916 and 1917 averages 1,000 per day.

Canadians, however, are interested in knowing that the Dominion has hitherto housed and clothed and fed these thousands of slackers whose parents and whose own inclinations have caused them to go to supposedly neutral territory during the greatest war of the world so that they might avoid the first obligation resting upon them as British subjects.

The slacker from Toronto, who is working on the subways of New York, is one of a class numerically too strong to be ignored in the country of his birth. His lack of national pride, or rather his lack of that first principle that should govern the life and habits of every adult man, the principle of citizenship, would carry him, if his pocketbook permitted, to the ice-clad lands of Greenland or Iceland, or to the shores of some South American country, in his effort to avoid military service.

To Keep the Blankets Clean.

No matter how careful one is to cover cold creamed hands with gloves before retiring, the top of the blanket is quick to become soiled. But there is a way to check its progress along this line. Bind the blanket with a piece of heavy cheesecloth or with muslin a yard in width. This will allow eighteen inches on each side of the blanket. If the material is held on with slip stitches it can be easily removed when it is necessary to send it to the laundry.

Last Stronghold of British Deer

EVEN the war's needs have scarcely touched Exmoor. The uplands remain an unspoiled heirloom of the past—a place where the wearied brain of the city-worker finds that rare rest of open space swept by the free sea wind, where in every direction the eye ranges over undulating wild country fading, gold upon gold, into the blue horizon, beyond which even on the clearest days there rise only faint cloudy outlines of the highest hills of distant counties. Thus sometimes with glasses you may trace the shape of the Malvern heights; but over all the rest of the invisible landscape you know that the air comes to your lungs fresh and unbreathed by men.

On this free tableland it is appropriate that the wild red deer should have found in our far south-west one of their last strongholds in Britain. Over a space 25 miles in width and many more in length the antlered stags still fight for their harems as their ancestors fought before men had learned to fashion weapons of rough stone. They still bellow out their prehistoric challenge, and the silent hinds gather dutifully to the summons as of old. When the stags shall have dropped their antlers for the year and the hinds, conscious of coming maternity, shall be stealing apart to secret places amid the heather and bracken, where they will lay their precious speckled burdens down, will the whirlwind of war be over and our men be coming home again? There has been next to no hunting on Exmoor for many months now; only just enough to keep the stags down, and the meets have been ill-attended. Visitors have been few; and the dwellers on Exmoor have had other things to think about. Man here easily becomes merged in his surroundings, only one of the slow-moving specks that the buzzard, circling aloft on level pinions and fan-spread, barred tail, looks down upon. Unweariedly, with scarcely a wing-flap, the great bird patrols the sky, and to the listener below its slurred cry of all the vowels "a e i o u," seems to emphasize the solitude of the scene. So, too, the croak of the rare raven, perched on some inaccessible summit above a precipitous gorge which the human pedestrian scales far below, sounds like the forbidding voice of the guardian spirit of the rocks. Further on, where the headland, crested with jumbled crags like a devil's rockery, fronts the sea, a litter of white feathers may mark the "stance" on which luckless seagulls and pigeons are dismembered by a peregrine; and even as you look the great falcon, with angry barking cry, may shoot upwards from some pinnacle on which it was perched invisible, and drift away in rising circles out of sight.

In summer, when every yard of the upward way is embroidered with wild flowers, from the yellow horned poppy that decorates the sand below, to the dwarf furze that sprinkles the heather above broadcast with gold, the sense of vastness is lost in diversity of details and bird life distracts attention everywhere. Each tumbling streamlet has its dipper in neat black, with a white front, bowing a welcome to the visitor, like a well-trained waiter. Each pool, starred with marsh flowers, is the haunt of dainty sandpipers whistling plaintively as they skim over the surface on curved white-barred wings; and often distant yelping calls and glimpses of large birds circling above the heather betray the breeding haunt of the curlew.—London Times.

Food and Intellect.

It used to be thought that fasting purified the spirit and made the intellect clearer. The mind with wings unclogged by the gross appetites of the body was supposed to be more free and nimble. The British Medical Journal does not believe that the intellect is strengthened by fasting, though undoubtedly it may be clouded by over-eating. On the other hand, fasting has often ill-effects on the temper, which undo whatever spiritual good it may do in other ways; and, as regards the intellect, it is a truism that the brain must be fed like any other part of the body. The quantity of food required to keep one in sound condition varies so largely that it is impossible to lay down more than a tentative average standard. The quality is a matter of custom and environment; here, too, no rigid universal rule can be enforced.

The Graves of the Anzacs.

The Maoris, who fought with the Australians in the Dardanelles and elsewhere, have the greatest respect for the dead, and consider every place where a dead man lies for ever "tapu," guarded by spirits who will do a mischief to anyone showing disrespect or even trespassing on the ground. They brought stones up from the beach and arranged them in elaborate designs above the graves, or they carved little wooden images of gods with their gleaming shell eyes set askew in wonderfully carved faces. Many of the crosses bear the name of one man, but there are others inscribed: "To the memory of sixty Australians." These mark the scenes of great contests, where thousands flung themselves into the fight and only hundreds returned.

Ancient Vanity Cases.

From the twelfth to the fifteenth century small mirrors, carried in the pocket or attached to the girdle, were regarded as indispensable adjuncts to ladies' toilets. The pocket mirror was a circular plaque of polished metal fixed in a shallow box and covered with a lid.

Prof. Miljukoff Made Speech to Free Russia That Will Be Historic

THE memorable speech delivered by Professor Miliukoff, the Russian Foreign Minister, to the great crowd of soldiers and workmen which thronged the lobby of the Duma on the night when the Russian revolution had emerged an accomplished fact, is already assured of a place amongst the world's great speeches. It is not that it was remarkable for its eloquence or smoothness of oratory; on the contrary, it was rugged and often disjointed. The speech was, however, a masterpiece of sincerity, and it revealed an ability, not so much to handle a crowd after the approved fashion of the demagogue as to discover just the points upon which the crowd desired to be reassured, and to reassure it.

M. Miliukoff was sure of his case. He had nothing to hide, and he sought above all things to give his hearers fully to understand that, henceforth, on all occasions, they had a right to know. It was a momentous half hour. There were probably many times when it seemed doubtful which way the crowd would go; times when the speaker was compelled to make decisions of the greatest moment in a flash. On each occasion, however, the Foreign Minister's evident determination honestly to state facts, and nothing but facts, saved the situation. "Who elected you?" rapped out some one from the crowd. As quick as thought came the answer, "Nobody elected us, because, if we had waited for a popular convention, we should not have been able to seize the authority from the hands of the enemy. It was the Russian Revolution that elected us." And then, when the cheering had ceased, came the reasoned dealing with the matter, the frank assurance that the new Government would not exercise its authority for a single minute after the elected of the people told them that they wished to see in their places others more deserving of the people's confidence, and that simple declaration of disinterestedness which won such instant applause, "We do not assume authority because of desire for power, but rather for service and sacrifice."

PROFESSOR MILIUKOFF

It was the same when M. Miliukoff came to the difficult task of announcing the personnel of the new Government, for it was practically certain that very few of the names would be everywhere approved. The crowd growled out, "Landlord!" when Prince Lvoff was named as Prime Minister, but it was not long before it was applauding, as Professor Miliukoff reminded his hearers of what the Zemstvos, of which Prince Lvoff was the leader, had done for Russia; and so the speaker patiently and fearlessly went through the list, forestalling objections, sweeping away prejudices at every turn, and, in the end, establishing the new Government in the confidence of the people. Finally came the question of the program, and Professor Miliukoff gave a short resume of what the Government hoped to do. There were no elaborate details. Everywhere the fact was brought out that much remained to be decided, but that, in the end, his hearers might rest assured, the people would have the decision. It was a truly great speech, and it is more than likely that a longer retrospect will only add to its greatness.

The Churches of Salonica.

Salonica boasts of twenty-two famous churches, but one of the most interesting of them all is the Saint Sophia, which was built at the end of the fourth or the beginning of the fifth century. It has suffered from fire, earthquake, and restoration, but the original lines of the structure remain, as well as the pillars and beautiful capitals of wind-blown acanthus and two fine fragments of mosaic. The principal mosaic, an Ascension, with decorative green trees between the standing figures, lines the great dome. It is supposed to date from 584, though the figure of Christ in the centre is older still.

EXTREME WEAKNESS AND SUFFERING

When a medicine has been successful in bringing health to so many, no woman has a right to say without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." ONTARIO'S RICHES.

Its Agricultural, Fishery, and Mineral Possibilities.

Mr. J. L. Englehart, manager of the Temiscaming & Northern Ontario Railway, recently gave an address on the riches of Greater Ontario, the agricultural, fishery, and mineral possibilities of which equal the very best in the world. The climatic conditions are all that are to be desired; the rainfall well distributed throughout the area, with temperate summers, delightful autumns and sunshine at Haileybury equal to that at Toronto. There are virtually three soils—mould, created by leaves and forests for countless ages; below this clay which on test compares favorably with that of Lambton county, except for fall wheat and corn; underlying the clay is limestone—a reservoir into which roots descend and refresh themselves, create growth, ripen grain, roots, vegetables, etc. Greater Ontario has twenty millions of acres of alluvial soil—the greatest expanse of fertile territory in the world so far as known. This does not include vast stretches of agricultural possibilities south and west of James Bay.

Farms taken up by settlers at fifty cents per acre are now valued at from $100 to $150 per acre. Temiscaming took the highest mark in 1916 for potatoes in the standing field crop competition. An exhibit of spring wheat from Uno Park was awarded first honors in competition with counties from York east and Parry Sound north. Settlers can get $36 per acre for pulpwood cut, drawn and peeled; thus settlers are paid for clearing their own land, the work being easy as compared with old Ontario, as there are no tap roots, while uncleared spruce-wood forms a savings-bank for settlers on which they may draw as needed.

The approximate value of pine on crown lands is $150,000,000; on licensed lands, $10,500,000; pulpwood, approximate value, $300,000,000.

Fisheries are important, with annual value of four millions. The largest fresh-water fisheries on the continent are within the Province of Ontario. The salt waters in James Bay and Hudson Bay are teeming with fish—a virgin field. The speaker predicted that that region would form the future summer resort of the Province, with motoring from Pacific to Atlantic along the shores of bays.

Between Cochrane and James Bay there are more than a million horsepower. In that secluded part of the world are ideal conditions for munition factories that may be of imperial importance, as minerals are plentiful which furnish nitrates for explosives and also for the very best fertilizers, which will be needed in our Canadian west.

The production of nickel, copper, silver, cobalt, and gold in Northern Ontario equals the world-record today; to the end of 1916 these mineral products netted over five hundred million dollars.

The mileage of the Government railway is 427 miles. Plans are ready for electrification of the road, which has been held up by the war; but the Government has reserved 10,000 horse-power for this purpose, to be used as required. From 1905 to 1916 the railway has carried more than six millions of passengers, without one being killed or seriously injured.

"I measure three inches by two-and-a-half, and my thickness is half an inch.

"My weight is exactly an ounce.

"I am wasted once a day by 48,000,000 people of Britain.

"I am 'the bit left over', the slice eaten absent-mindedly when really I wasn't needed; I am the waste crust.

"If you collect me and my companions for a whole week you would find that we amounted to 9,380 tons of good bread—WASTED!

"Two shiploads of good bread!

"Almost as much—striking an average—as twenty German submarines could sink—even if they had good luck.

"When you throw me away or waste me you are adding twenty submarines to the German navy."

PARIS DESIGN.

A Beautiful Outfit For After Easter Social Events.

THE REAL THING.

Smoke gray satin is fashioned into this simple costume of narrowish skirt and jumper top over long sleeves. A Paisley pattern is embroidered in silver threads, a very rich effect indeed. The stringy belt confines loosely the blouse, which is of graded length.

THE JOB HUNTER.

How to Face Work Without Any False Pride.

A very good piece of advice, which, however curious it may sound, should be impressed on all women who are trying to find employment is, "Do not be a lady."

There is a vast distinction between being a lady and being a gentlewoman. The word "lady" is most misused and in its present day application it stands greatly in the way of those who are seeking work and who, time after time, cling to this description of themselves, despite the failure to gain employment that its use entails. Remember that good, hard, honest work is never lowering. If you are a gentlewoman by birth and nature you will be as much a lady when you are scrubbing the floor as when you are receiving guests in the drawing room.

Numbers of women refuse good positions because they consider themselves too ladylike to undertake the work involved. The aim of hundreds of girls today is to be described as "young lady." To achieve this they prefer to work for long hours in a shop or typewriting office at rates of pay which only with a hard struggle provide food, lodging and clothes, rather than take a better paid and far more comfortable situation as a domestic, and all because they think that domestic work is beneath them.

The modern young woman in many cases will wait for weeks on the chance of finding a position as lady companion or lady housekeeper, and yet when it comes to hard facts she is serving her employer just as much in one situation as in the other. Whoever works for another is a servant, and from the highest to the lowest we all serve in some way or another.

If women would only take this matter to heart and cease struggling after a false social position they would find life much easier, and many of the serious problems of the labor market would be easily solved.

Keeping Wicker Clean.

Many a housekeeper has discovered the difficulty of dusting wicker chairs. No amount of careful rubbing or flickering of the feather duster can reach far into these crevices; there the dust collects and there it ordinarily stays. But not long ago a woman—and a very busy one at that—hit upon a new plan for cleaning her wicker chairs. One by one she carried them into the bathtub and turned the spray upon them. The penetrating stream of water pierced them through and through, and after the process was complete each chair fairly shone with freshness and cleanliness. "If housewives could know the amount of dirt and dust that I succeeded in washing out of my three chairs," said the woman in question, "they would not hesitate long to follow my example and pop them into the bathtub."

SUN BATHS.

Health Tips About This Popular Way of Getting Strength.

Prolonged exposure of the human body to bright sunlight in those not accustomed to its rays is dangerous.

The damage is more than the sunburn which results, for physicians have shown that headache and symptoms of meningitis have developed after youths under their observation had been lying several hours in the sunlight with unprotected head and no clothing but bathing trunks.

The symptoms shown by these patients demonstrated that the sun's rays had evidently penetrated the skull, thus indicating that a sunstroke is the consequence of direct exposure to the sun.

Sun baths are most popular with anemic and nervous city indoor workers, but too much sun is most apt to harm the nerve system of nervous people.

Instead of being benefited by long exposure to the sun the nervous are rendered more nervous, and when the summer is over they are tanned, but otherwise in poorer condition than in spring.

No one welcomes more than the physician the "back to nature" tendency of recent years, but they are now being careful to warn against excesses and abuses in the "enjoyment of nature."

For Middle Aged Women.

Women who are middle aged and rather stout will find a cold bath every day with plenty of friction afterward an admirable fat reducer. If you can't take a cold bath have a cold sponge down after your warm bath and dry yourself vigorously with a rough towel. There is something very stimulating in the friction induced by thorough drying after a bath.

Plenty of fresh air is essential to health, and it is essential, too, to avoid much lolling about in easy chairs. This last induces that fatal habit of stooping, as a result of which there is formed, as we get on in years, an unsightly roll of fat between the shoulders, which hangs over the top of the corsets. Very often faulty corsets are responsible for the formation of this figure blemish, corsets which are laced so as to press the fat upward between the shoulders. To cure it in the first instance you will require to go through a course of scientific massage. Massage is also splendid for fat which forms beneath the waist line and for double chin.

Shoe Rack.

"I have found a shoe rack a very useful and convenient addition to my bedroom closet, as it saves space, keeps the shoes from getting scratched and keeps them in order," said a housekeeper the other day. "It is a six inch board as long as the width of closet placed on a forty five degree angle at a desirable height. Fasten it to the sides of closet by means of cleats nailed or screwed. Nail a one inch strip full length of board on the top about one inch from upper edge to hook the heels over."

For the Guest Room.

An electric hand lamp in your guest room will prove the greatest convenience to your guest, saving him from stumbling about hunting for the light switch or matches should he wish to get up during the night.

A Tidy Linen Closet.

A linen closet that is tidy and neat is a delight not often met with. The linens may be placed in neat piles when the laundry comes home, but when searching for a particular sheet or pillowcase or towel the pile is apt to become disordered. If you will use bands and tie each pile you will find that the shelves will present a much better appearance. A band of linen about ten inches long and about three or four inches wide is scalloped in blue and the words "Sheets," "Pillowcases," or whatever the article may be, are worked in cross stitch. Tape strings are attached to each end.

Bindings Ready.

When making children's clothes have bias binding and facing ready to put on. Save pieces of lining lawn, colored linens and gay plaid ginghams, and cut them into one inch bias strips and sew together and fold into neat rolls and put in the machine drawer, where they will be handy when needed. The linens and ginghams are excellent for pipings on contrasting materials for children's school dresses.

For Sweeping Day.

A common handled basket that sells for 8 or 10 cents will save more steps on sweeping day than one would think. Line with table oilcloth, make pockets all around to put in such things as tacks, string, soap; then in the basket proper put dust brushes and cloth, bottle of furniture polish—all the other things one needs for cleaning. Try it and see how many trips to the kitchen it saves.

SOLDIERS FOUGHT WHILE THE WORLD WORSHIPPED

Sunday's Story of the War is Another Record of Succes for Arms of the Allies.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 18. — It is officially announced that enemy airships approached the east and southeast coasts early Sunday morning, and two of them later came inland. One dropped bombs in Kent, starting a fire and causing some damage in a coast town. Later one Zeppelin was brought down in flames.

British airplanes were particularly successful on the battle front yesterday. Six German machines were brought down add ten were driven down out of control. One British machine is missing.

The British have made further progress and captured prisoners to the south of Ypres.

The Council of Workmen and Soldiers' Delegates at Petrograd adopted a stirring proclamation placing the council on record as irrevocably opposed to separate peace.

The war office at Paris announces an attempted German attack northeast of Cerny on the Aisne front was broken up. In the region of Courcy the French retook a trench where the enemy had gained a foothold.

An attack by the British Thursday morning, which resulted in the capture of three-quarters of a mile of trenches on Infantry Hill with 175 prisoners, started at 7:25 totally without artillery preparation, and two minutes later rockets signalled all objectives achieved.

Sir Douglas Haig to the British private is never anything but "D. H."

Sir William Robertson, the Chief of the Staff, is always "Wullie."

HASTINGS COUNTY CLERK.

BELLEVILLE, June 18. — Mr. W. H. Nugent, reeve of Wallaston township, was selected by the County Council of Hastings as county clerk in place of the late Mr. A. M. Chapman. PROMOTER OF GIGANTIC ENTERPRISES WEPT WHEN THE STRANGER LEFT

How Judge Goldhammer Beat the Major at at His Own Game of Soft and Beguiling Ways--Much Downcast Over Outcome.

WAS FAKER LIKE HIMSELF

MAJOR CROFOOT, grand promoter of twenty-six different gigantic enterprises, with three or four others ready to launch on the public as soon as funds become a little easier, had made a light breakfast, gone without lunch and was seated in his office in serious thought when there came a rap on the door. The person outside who wanted to be inside might be his landlady, who had that morning hinted that she would like his room; it might be his laundress, who had threatened to hold on to his last shirt; it might be his cobbler or his clothes cleaner, or it might be his landlord come to indulge in one last horrible threat.

When a man has arrived at that period where he has only 7 cents and a receipt for hair dye in his pockets he must take chances. The grand promoter drew a long breath and bade the unknown enter. In response to his call a stranger entered. He was a man of middle age. His face betrayed the fact that he was oily and unctuous and effusive. He made himself at home in ten seconds, and in another ten he was saying:

"Major Crofoot, permit me to introduce myself as Judge Goldhammer, banker, broker, capitalist and promoter, and to say that I should not have come to take up your valuable time except for a matter of business—strict business."

"I am glad to see you, sir," replied the major as he extended his hand and sighed a sigh of relief that it wasn't the sheriff.

"Major," continued the caller as he became seated, "you are known to the general public as a grand promoter of great enterprises. To the few of us inside the ring the fact has become known that you are not always successful for the want of capital. You have the head to organize, but not always the capital to carry out. I am one who has watched your career very closely, sir. For the last three months I have watched you more closely than ever, having a distinct object in view."

The major bowed and blushed and didn't know whether to be pleased or uneasy. He hadn't decided which when the caller went on:

"You need a capital of ten millions to carry out your enterprises, and I don't suppose you have over a million. You can't push anything with a mere million in such times as these. You can simply make a stab at it, and you have done so repeatedly and thereby excited the admiration of myself and others."

The major felt a warm glow of pleasure stealing over him and wondered if he hadn't died and been transported to paradise. A mere million! He hadn't had $10 at once in the last five years. His head was going round and round, when Judge Goldhammer touched him on the shoulder and said:

"Give it up, major—give it up until you can swing at least $5,000,000 as capital. Give it up and come with me. I need you in my business. I want a right hand man, and you are the one. I have been thinking of coming to see you for the last fortnight."

"What—what is it?" gasped the major as he thrust his hand into his pocket to see if the 7 cents had got away.

$20,000,000 Profits First Year.

"The greatest scheme on earth, my boy—positively the greatest. It will return $20,000,000 profits the very first year. You shall be vice president of the company at a salary of half a million per annum. That shows you how badly you are wanted. It's something the public must have and can't do without. Will sell just as readily in Asia and Africa as here in America. I wouldn't part with the idea for $1,000,000,000 in United States bonds. All I wanted was a right hand financier, and now I've found him."

The major closed his eyes and felt himself sailing along on a cloud of purple and gold, and nightingales with tongues of silver seemed to be singing to him. In a faraway voice he heard the judge asking:

"Major, you have dreamed, of course. Every one has dreamed. At certain times you have dreamed of alligators, serpents and roaring lions; at other times you have dreamed of angels, cupids and broiled lobster. When you have dreamed of the one you awake in the morning unrefreshed and morbid; when you have dreamed of the other you awake feeling yourself a jim-dandy, and you go at it and fight luck and make $100,000. Am I not right, major?"

The major bowed his head, but he couldn't speak. His heart was too full.

"My new scheme, which is my forty-seventh good thing, is the corker of all. I have discovered that dreams are a subtle but tangible thing, the same as ozone. After making this discovery I asked myself, Why not preserve the good dreams and dream them over again—a score, a hundred, a thousand times? After two weeks I hit on the way to do it—simple as A B C. I connect a copper wire from the brain to a storage battery. If the dream is good store it up; if it is bad let it ooze away next day. One good dream warranted to last a year at least. Then you dream something else for a change. Have tried it on myself and dreamed of angels counting gold pieces and rich widows wanting to marry me. All perfected and in working order, major, and yesterday I organized the Great Worldwide Pleasant Dream company. Shares to be sold at not less than par; dividends will start at 100 per cent. Good dreams wanted all over the world. Machines can be made for $3 and sell at $10. One battery answers for a whole family and will last a life time. Major Crofoot, do you tumble?"

"HIS FACE BETRAYED THE FACT THAT HE WAS OILY AND UNCTUOUS."

The major did. The perspiration was rolling off him from 10,000 pores, and he felt that he must soon tumble off his chair.

Duties as Vice President.

"As vice president," continued the judge, "your duties will be extremely light. We shall want to send out a dream with every battery as a sendoff. It will be for you to dream that dream. They must be varied according to locality and sex. For instance, we cannot expect that the same dream will do for an African chief and a New England old maid. We shall ask nothing of you but to dream. You can do it, major, and you may consider your fortune made. Would you like an advance of $25,000 on your salary?"

The poor major swallowed and gulped, but could not even nod his head.

"Well, you can answer when I come in tomorrow. Meanwhile select your trunk and order your auto and your new clothes. We'll look for offices tomorrow and also see an architect about a ten story building of our own. Might get you a diamond for your tie, as we want everybody around us to look prosperous. If you prefer horses to autos then get horses. I think this is all. Ta-ta."

The major couldn't bow him out. He sat there for ten minutes and thought it over, and then it came to him that the judge was the same sort of promoter he was and had used the same soft soap and beguiling ways, and he laid his head down on the desk and wept. He had been taken for a skate, and he wasn't even consoled by knowing that his 7 cents still remained in his pocket.

The Mutual Annoyance Society.

"Mildred," called her father from the head of the stairs, "is that young man an auctioneer?"

"Why, no, father."

Determination.

"Why don't you get rid of that mule?"

"Well, suh," answered Erastus Pinkley, "I hates to give in. If I was to trade dat mule off he'd regard it as a personal victory. He's been tryin' fo' de las' six weeks to get rid o' me."—Washington Star.

Animals on Firing Line Are Beloved by Fighters As Friends in Distress

AMONG all the innocent victims of the war none deserve more pity than the animals who find themselves suddenly in the midst of all the horrors of war.

One source of thankfulness is that such a society as the Blue Cross is at work, and through this agency alone a vast amount of suffering has been saved to the horses engaged in serving man in the firing line. A visit to one of the establishments of the society has been described, and it would appear to be most humanely managed. Here the wounded and sick horses are brought, and if these are judged to be beyond rescue they are at once put out of their misery. If, however, they can be cured they are skilfully handled by experienced men.

One of the animals described was a black mule with a gray muzzle belonging to our Indian troops. This animal limped painfully, having been shot in the leg, until he could be hoisted on to a wagon sent for him, and it is said he appeared most grateful when the rest of the painful journey to the home was accomplished with as little suffering as possible. When the horses arrived at the home they were placed in two lines to have their wounds dressed. Many of them had bullets still in them, and these were, when possible, removed, and in all cases the wounds were carefully dressed. The saving of such a method in the number of horses' lives is very great, and, considering the terrible wastage of modern war, such an institution is valuable if only from the human point of view, while to anyone who knows from experience the sound of the cry of a wounded horse it is pleasant to know that our dumb helpers are saved as much as possible from the consequences of war.

The animals left in the deserted villages through which the tide of war has passed had extraordinary experiences. Some of the dogs have been found fastened to kennels and left by the inhabitants, where they have spent several days without food or drink. Our soldiers put them out of their pain as quickly as possible while in several instances the captives have been adopted by our men.

It is strange how soon animals get used even to terrific shell-firing. This is seen in such places as Shoeburyness, where the testing of large guns is frequent. New horses being brought there to be trained show every symptom of fear, while the animals who have been there for some time graze unconcernedly under the muzzles of the huge guns even at the moment these are being fired without stopping for an instant. And it is said by those in the trenches that the cows which are kept by both sides for the sake of fresh milk are milked every day under fire, the cows seeming in no way disturbed by the falling shells unless they are hit; these animals are constantly under rifle fire, while in the fields round animals are feeding in many cases as if they were in a land of perfect peace.

Amusing tales are sometimes heard of the farmyard animals close to the rival armies. One officer records an instance of some hens which his servant set out to catch for his supper. The hens actually laid eggs in their fright, but managed to escape into the neighboring field, where his man did not dare follow them. And another case of animals under fire, or rather insects, was told by Lord Roberts of one occasion when he was leading the 9th Lancers. Passing a compound in the Northern Provinces in India, a soldier thoughtlessly poked his lance into a wild bees' nest. The angry bees immediately swarmed round him and his companions, and Lord Roberts saw his men scattered in wild confusion, as though an enemy was in pursuit, though none were known to be in that neighborhood. He afterwards found that the Highlanders complained that their dress had not proved suitable for such an encounter.

Wild animals suffer in many ways from the presence of troops in their neighborhood, for they have not even the poor protection of one side or the other. In this way it is said that wild boars and bears are hastily leaving their haunts in the East of Europe and making across country in every direction, appearing in places they have never before visited. The Carpathians, which have hitherto been one of the finest sporting countries left in Europe, will suffer extremely in this respect from the present conflict which has raged over so much of the range. In Russia wild animals are leaving their haunts; but in this case some of them at least are profiting from the present disturbance, for multitudes of wolves are leaving their fastnesses and, losing their fear of the guns by degrees, are appearing in the neighborhood of the troops as soon as the noise of battle lessens, and are to be found devouring the dead, and even those who have been severely wounded.

And amid much that is lovable in the Russian soldier there are few more pleasing traits than his love for his horse. A writer gives a prayer said to be regularly used by the Russians before going into action for the welfare of his animal. He prays "for the humble beast who with us bears the burden and heat of the day and offers his guileless life for the well-being of their common country" that it may be saved from suffering and given, if its life cannot be spared, at least a speedy death. Such a prayer may seem primitive to us in the West; but at least it gives us a feeling of tenderness for our Allies in the East who even at such a moment think of and care for their innocent friends.

HON. A. J. BALFOUR IS DEEP RELIGIOUS THINKER AS WELL AS A STATESMAN

HON. A. J. BALFOUR

THE great interest aroused by Mr. Balfour's mission to this continent has called renewed attention to a phase of his life which is apt to be overshadowed by his political eminence. For many years past he has been a thoughtful student of religious problems, and several books from his pen are among the most valuable of their kind. A little more than a year ago he issued "Theism and Humanism," containing the substance of the "Gifford Lectures," and although these lectures, by the terms of the foundation, cannot deal with questions outside what is generally called natural religion, yet, nothwithstanding the exclusion of any thought of supernatural revelation, the book is of real importance to all Christian people, because Christianity is necessarily based on a theistic view of the world.

Mr. Balfour's position is that, apart from all earlier questions of biology, man's present ideals of knowledge, ethics, and aestheticism demand a belief in God as their source, and that unless God exists our deepest convictions about truth, goodness, and beauty have no foundation. He first urges that beauty would cease to have any meaning if it were regarded as something accidental or materialistic, that a work of art requires an artist, and that on this account beauty is a revelation of spirit to spirit, and implies the existence of the Divine Spirit whom we call God. In the same way, he shows that virtues, when properly understood, are absolutely impossible apart from a belief that they derive their sanction from the will of God: "ethics must have its root in the Divine." Perhaps more important than either beauty or goodness is the discussion of knowledge, and with penetrating force it is argued that intellectual conceptions cannot possibly be due to a naturalistic view of the universe, that beliefs must find their origin in God, and cannot be traced back to any other than a rational cause. So that the only alternative to a belief in God, as a guarantee of knowledge, is entire scepticism, which is both unthinkable and impossible in ordinary life. From this it will be seen that what Mr. Balfour calls Humanism, including the various aspects of beauty, the essential features of morality, and the necessary principles of knowledge, needs belief in God if it is to have value for human life.

The real value of the book consists in the fact that it gives another proof that materialism is wholly impossible. It is not so very long ago when, to use the title of a well-known book, men inquired, "Can the Old Faith live with the New?" But that position has been entirely left, and now, on the basis of the best science and philosophy, men realize that naturalism cannot possibly explain the universe. And it is the virtue of Mr. Balfour's work that it brings home to the "man in the street" the utter failure of any merely material explanation of the world. All this is particularly welcome not only for itself, but also because of the eminence of the author as one of our leading statesmen.

Objected to the Publicity.

Man's instinctive and perfectly reasonable preference for reprimand delivered in private is illustrated by a story told by Lieutenant General Sir William Butler, G. C. B., in his autobiography.

A general commanding at Aldershot had been forcibly reprimanded by a royal commander in chief. He openly rebelled.

"I don't mind being called a fool," he said, "if it pleases your royal highness to call me so, but I do mind being called a fool before your royal highness' other fools," sweeping his hand toward the commander in chief's large and brilliant staff.

When Doctors Were Slaves.

Romans of means had physicians in their own houses. These men were slaves, for, odd as it seems, many Roman slaves were accomplished in literature, art and science. At one time the selling price of a slave doctor was about the equivalent of $300 in our money.

After the time of Julius Caesar, who encouraged physicians, the art began to "lift its head" in Rome, and later men of character and position, though generally foreigners, entered the profession. Some of them accumulated large fortunes, and one who was noted for his skill made the equivalent of at least $500,000 in a few years.

Rossini's Jealousy.

Rossini was intolerably jealous of all his musical contemporaries and particularly of Meyerbeer. In 1836 he heard "The Huguenots," and on listening to the performance from the beginning to the end he made up his mind that Meyerbeer had excelled him and determined to write no more operatic music. He lived until 1868, but produced nothing for the lyric stage. His thirty-two years of retirement were spent in the pleasures of a voluptuary. He was particularly fond of good eating and drinking and assembled about him the youngest and gayest society he could attract to his house.

ATTRACTIVE DINING CAR SERVICE

Probably nothing helps more to make a railway journey really enjoyable than a visit to the "Dining Car," especially if it be a Canadian Pacific Dining Car, where the passenger is assured of the highest form of efficiency in the culinary art; the choicest provisions that the market affords prepared on the scientific principle known as "Dietetic Blending."

Your favorite dish, as you like it, may be enjoyed at reasonable cost, amidst ideal surroundings, while travelling on the Canadian Pacific.

CARE OF CLOTHES.

Slip Your Garments on a Hanger Instead of a Chair Back.

Never leave your suits or dresses lying on a chair or on the bed rail, but put a hanger in them the minute you take them off. It is simply a matter of habit, and it is just as easy to learn to slip a hanger into your coat and put it in the closet at once as it is to throw it on a chair, to hang up later. Creases and wrinkles wear out the cloth, and the only way to keep your clothes free of wrinkles is to hang them up when you remove them.

Shoes, too, retain their shape much longer if trees are kept in them. You can always tell the shoes which are neglected by their wrinkled, shapeless look. It is a matter of a moment or two to slip shoe trees into your boots when you take them off, and this will prevent the leather from relaxing. Footgear which has no acquaintance with shoe trees usually splits and cracks just twice as quickly as the well cared for variety. If you will rub a little vaseline into your shoes when new it will prevent the damp and wet from splitting the leather.

When your tailored skirts become wet from the rain do not let them stay wrinkled, but press them with a hot iron before they become dry. By the way, it is a real economy to invest in a good, durable raincoat, because it will protect your suits and frocks to a great extent and will actually save you money.

A Foolish Notion.

"The critics say the last act of our play falls flat," remarked the manager.

"Hum," said the "angel," "can't you put in a few of those 'props' I hear you theatrical people talking so much about?"

A Serious Predicament.

"How can he afford to keep an automobile?"

"He can't, but he has to keep one to prevent people from finding out that he is too hard up to afford it."

He Learned the Lesson.

"Tommy, you should not fight with that Jimpson boy."

"I know it, ma."

"That's right."

"But I didn't know it before I hit him."

Not Quite Symmetrical.

"There are invariably two sides to an argument," remarked the parlor philosopher.

"Which is all the more remarkable when you consider that there is only one end," said the mere man.

VICTORIA CROSS IS HIGHEST HONOR A SOLDIER CAN WIN

About a Dozen Canadians Have Been Awarded the Coveted Badge Since it Was Designed.

The Victoria Cross, "the most highly coveted decoration which it is possible for any soldier or sailor, officer or man to obtain," has been awarded to about a dozen Canadians in this war. A week ago it was announced that it had been awarded to four Canadians, two of them having been kill in performing the deed which brought them the great honor. One of the two was Sergt. Ellis Sif[illegible], of Wallacetown, a farmer's boy of Elgin County, who responded to the call to service in the fall of 1914, and at 25 years of age fell gloriously at Vimy Ridge on April 9 last.

The V.C. was instituted by Queen Victoria in 1856 at, it is said, the suggestion of the Prince Consort. The decoration consists of a bronze Maltese cross, one and one-half inches across, with raised edges. On the obverse, in the centre, is a lion passant gardant standing upon the royal crown, while below the crown are the words, "For valor," on a semi-circular scroll. The reverse has raised edged like the obverse, while a record for the act for which the decoration is bestowed is engraved in a circle in the centre. The cross is suspended by means of a plain link from a V, which is part of the clasp ornamented with laural leaves through which the ribbon passes. On back of clasp is engraved the name rank, regiment or ship of the recipient. The ribbon, one and a half inches wide, is red for the army and blue for the navy.

Once Won In Canada.

The V.C. was established during the Crimean War. If the recipient was below the rank of commissioned officer, the cross was to be accompanied by a pension of £10 a year, and in 1898 it was ordered that this amount could be increased to £50 a year if the recipient were in very reduced circumstances. In 1858 it was ordained that the cross could be bestowed for valor not in the presence of an enemy, but in only one instance has this been done. In 1867, when Pte. Timothy O'Hea, of the 1st Batt. Rifle Brigade received it for helping to extinguish a fire in a railway car of ammunition during the Fenian Raid in Canada. In 1902 King Edward decreed that the V.C., when earned by soldiers or sailors who had been killed could be delivered to the relatives. Previous to that the names of such recipients were gazetted, but the medal itself not conferred. In 1912 King George extended the award of the V.C. to natives of the Indian Army. One of the very few instances where a V.C. recipient has received a bar to his medal has occurred in the present war, Captain Arthur Leake, R.A.M.C., who won the award originally in the Boer War, being the recipient.

WOULD NOT FORFEIT PAY.

Returned Men Who Re-enlist Would Not Be Sufferers.

Recently it was announced that all soldiers honorably discharged from the Canadian Expeditionary Force after six months' overseas service would be granted three months' pay and allowances. An affidavit which the men are asked to sign has puzzled some of them. In a few instances men who have seen overseas service received their discharge, and have re-enlisted for overseas, have been worried with the thought that they would have to sacrifice the three months' pay. Among the many affirmations which a returned man has to make in drawing the three months' pay is the following:

"I, the above noted" (meaning name, etc., given) "do herewith declare and affirm that I am not at present a member of the Permanent Staff or Permanent Force or an official or employe of any one of the several provincial governments or of the Federal Government, and that part of my service was performed overseas."

Men who have served with the Canadian Expeditionary Force are not of necessity Permanent Force men, few of them ever were. Once they are honorably discharged from the Canadian Expeditionary Force they become civilians and are entitled to the three months' pay, no matter what they may do in regard to re-enlisting with the Canadian Expeditionary Force. If, however, they receive an appointment with the permanent force, such as at Stanley Barracks, and are given an appointment under the Dominion or Provincial Governments, they will not get the money. That is the interpretation as given by officers in close touch with the situation.

GOLD MINE IN BACK YARD.

Great Expectations of Huge Crops of Garden Truck.

This summer is destined to see an expansion of the vegetable garden under private cultivation to an unprecedented extent, says the Philadelphia Ledger. The man with the hoe, instead of being a remote and isolated target of the poet or the facetious paragrapher, will be domesticated in every suburban household. Even in city back yards he will be found engaged in making a dozen tomato plants grow where only the clothes-tree flourished before. It is time for everybody to raise something beside prices. There is one ozone for the golf links and the garden; there is bracing exercise to be found with the rake as well as with the racket. The market garden monopolist, keen to set a fancy price on his Jerusalem artichokes or his Brussels sprouts because Jerusalem and Brussels are involved in the war, will have to abate his exorbitant demand or home-grown green goods will flaunt their lustrous foliage in his mercenary eyes. Many who never knew it before are finding the joy of life in the outdoor toil that rivals the blissful productivity of Eden.

"There's not a pair of legs so thin,
there's not a head so thick,
There's not a hand so weak and white, nor yet a heart so sick,
But it can find some useful job that's crying to be done.
For the Glory of the Garden glorifieth every one."

HEINTZMAN HALL FORMAL OPENING A HUGE SUCCESS

Over Two Thousand Visitors Present—More Than 1000 Carnation Souvenirs Given to Ladies—Beautiful Display of Instruments Amid Charming Surroundings.

Saturday was a pleasingly attractive day at Heintzman & Co's new home in the Royal Bank Building, corner George and Hunter Streets, when hundreds of delighted citizens took advantage of the cordial invitation extended by Mr. B. H. Britton, the company's local manager, to inspect Ye Olde Firme's new piano and phonograph salon on the occasion of its formal opening.

From 1:30 to 5 in the afternoon and from 7 to 10 in the evening, a courteous staff of attendants were kept busy extending their firm's greetings and demonstrating and explaining the qualities of the high-grade instruments in evidence on every hand, while the Grand Opera House orchestra filled the hall with a flood of very acceptable melody. The event was graced by the presence of Mrs. B. H. Britton, whose charming personality at once made lady visitors at home, and who saw to it that each lady carried away a floral souvenir of the opening. In this way over a thousand carnations were disposed of, and as no gentleman or junior were recipients, it represents an approximate attendance of some 2,500 visitors. Congratulations are also due Mrs. Britton for the acme of refined taste displayed in the furnishing and adornment of the premises, for which she had assumed the responsibility.

The pure white decoration of this beautiful home of music was tastefully relieved with just a sufficiency of national bunting, together with the reflecting polish of perfectly finished instruments and moderate floral and foliage adornment to give a commendably harmonious whole and avoid being glaringly ornate. Seductive resting nooks here and there were considerately provided, to the appreciation of the ladies. In fact, all preparation for the comfort, pleasure and information of visitors was perfect and reflects considerable credit on all concerned therein. One old citizen enthusiastically remarked that it discounted anything of a similar nature he had ever attended in this city.

The large exhibition hall showed to splendid advantage a varied assortment of instruments, including Louis XV. Grands, Miniature Grands and Upright Pianos, all of artistic designs and manufactured in fancy walnut and mahogany. Here also were seen handsomely finshed oak and mahogany cabinet sonoras and Victrolas, to which there are also devoted three distinctive sound-proof rooms, as well as one for a huge assortment of the latest popular records.

The whole event was in perfect accord with the principle dominating all Heintzman & Co.'s business and manufacturing methods, "that anything worth undertaking at all is worthy of the best possible effort." And this the formal opening of their handsome and spacious Peterborough hall of music, proved an unqualified success, gratifying to ye olde firme and appreciably entertaining to all who visited it.

The plant decorations were supplied by the Peterborough Floral Co, and A. Blade & Son, the carnations by Jordan Bros., the flags and bunting by J. J. Turner & Sons., and the furniture by Messrs. Belleghem and McFadden.

The fullest measure of credit is due Mr. Britton's premier salesman, Mr. Chas. Gentleman, for his loyalty and energetic co-operation in connection with the opening. Mr. Gentleman has been for years associated with Mr. Britton, who was district manager in Toronto before assuming charge of Peterborough's Heintzman Hall. Messrs. F. B. Hutchinson, H. Gilbert and H. McCullough, also assistants of Mr. Britton, left no stone unturned to assure the gratifying success of this memorable event.

Mr. Knapp, manager of Ye Olde Firme's Victrola department at their Toronto headquarters, was also in attendance, and rendered valued assistance.

HEAVY TRAVEL OF U.S. TOURISTS

IMMIGRATION MEN HAVE ORDERS TO EXTEND LATITUDE.

It will be good news to the tourists who visit the local resorts to know that the Dominion Government is endeavoring to make transportation between Canada and the United States as easily accomplished as possible for those who are not "draft dodgers." Instructions have been issued to all immigration officers to the effect that American tourists desiring to return to their country were to be given every latitude, and the means of securing passports were to be made as easy as possible for them.

Apparently a heavier influx of American travel is expected with the coming of the real summer season, and the department wishes to accommodate this travel with the least possible delay and inconvenience. To this end the officials at this end will do their utmost to see that the way of the tourist, American as well as Canadian, is made smooth.

WHY HATS WERE WORN.

First Hat Worn was Invented by Swiss in 1404

A covering for the head dates back to early times, but the hat, as we understand it to-day, was invented by a Swiss manufacturer of Paris, and the first were worn in that city about 1404. The inhabitants of the northern climes many centuries ago began wearing a head covering, which in those days was usually made of fur. This was in most cases in the form of a hood. It was not until the Phrygians had conquered Asia Minor that the people of warmer latitudes wore head coverings. The Phrygians were the first to adopt the fashion, and they did it in order to distinguish themselves from the conquered race with whom they lived. Their head dress was a small, closely fitting cap, which was also soon adopted by the Roman free citizens. Hats were first manufactured in England in 1510, and superseded caps, or soft headgear, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

MOUNT CAVELL HAS ITS UNIQUE FEATURES

Glacier Upon It Resembles Woman Robed in Spotless White—Was It Selected By Inspiration?

The mountain in Jasper National park that perpetuates the memory of Edith Cavell, the English nurse who suffered martyrdom at the hands of the Germans in Belgium, is a striking pile, whose summit reaches to a height of over 11,000 feet above sea level, and is about 12 miles south of Jasper, from where it can be clearly seen at any time when not obscured by clouds. Its northern face is covered by snows and glaciers, and when lit up by the rays of the sun or moon presents a splendid spectacle, and it is regarded as being a most appropriate monument for the unfortunate victim of Hunnish hate.

Strange Figure

Lying between Mount Cavell and a high, sombre, verdureless mountain, as yet unnamed adjoining at right angles there is a remarkable glacier of immense size, which, at close range resembles the prostrate form of a woman attired in robes of white, with outstretched arms, one extending to the side of each mountain and the feet reaching down to the great ice bed at the foot. This figure creates in the minds of those who see it impressions associated with the supernatural, and it lends an additional interest to the memorial mount.

In Mournful Attitude

On the nameless mountain, which it is proposed to call Mount Sorrow, there is another remarkable figure which nature has carved from the solid rock with wonderful fidelity. It is that of a woman in an attitude of mourning, standing over a fount like basin. Except at the feet, there is no cleavage between the figure and the mountain, and from the point from where it can be seen best it is startlingly realistic, even to the garments, which look like buckskin, the stone being stained a brownish yellow. The life-like appearance of the figure is so very real that impressionable people will doubtless conclude that it was by no mere chance that the mountain named in memory of the murdered nurse was chosen, but by an inspiration.

CLIMATE LESS SEVERE

What Study of Larger Glaciers in B.C. Has Revealed

Dr. Charles D. Walcott, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and Mrs. Walcott recently returned to Washington after several months' field work in Canada. Accompanied by only a packer and cook, they spent most of their time on the continental divide, which forms the boundary line between Alberta and British Columbia, south of the Canadian Pacific Railway, studying the cambrian rocks, containing the fossil remains of the earliest animal life.

Owing to the heavy snowfall of the previous winter, and the fact that most of the geological formations which they wished to examine were in the deep snow about the timber line, little progress was made till the latter part of the summer of 1916. Sections were examined and measured in the Mount Assiniboine region, and from there northwest to the celebrated Kicking Horse pass, where the Canadian Pacific Railway has bored a double loop through the mountain in order to obtain a feasible grade on the western side of the pass.

Some years ago Dr. Walcott found a remarkable fossil fauna in boulders which had been carried into Kicking Horse canyon by glaciers that have long since disappeared. This last trip he located the source of these boulders high up in the mountain cirque, where a portion of what must have been a great hanging glacier is still active.

Mrs. Walcott, who has studied glaciers for several years, and is well known as an Alpinist, visited Glacier, British Columbia, where she measured the position of two large glaciers, and determined that the front ice foot in each case had retreated at the rate of 100 feet a year during two preceding years. Mrs. Walcott's studies prove that the ice has been steadily retreating during the past six years. Her measurements agree with observations made in Alaska, and indicate that the climate is not as severe on the Pacific side of the continent as it was a decade ago.

Brake cable wire on motors should be frequently inspected. If a single strand becomes broken the rest will give way very quickly. Especially is this true at points where the cable passes through or around a sheave.

SHOTS FROM THE SKY

Earth is Steadily Subjected to Phenomenal Bombardment

Most persons have no comprehension of the actual bombardment to which the earth is continually subjected from the heavens. Millions of small meteors enter the atmosphere every twenty-four hours, and in addition to these it has been calculated that on the average not less than a hundred large meteorites strike the earth somewhere every year. The small meteors are totally consumed by the heat and friction, and only their slowly settling dust ever touches the earth's surface, although any one of them if not resisted by the air would hit with from twenty to a hundred times the velocity of the swiftest bullet. The big meteorites, on the contrary, which frequently consist of solid iron, often get through the airy shield with enough of their original velocity left to bury themselves many feet in the hardest soil. They constitute a real peril. Although the chance of anybody being hit by a meteorite is almost infinitely small, yet the annals of mankind show that a few persons have actually been killed by these strange shots from the sky.

PRECOCIOUS BABY

Crocodile One Hour Old Hunts Cleverly for Prey

The moment that a young crocodile breaks its shell it is to all intents and purposes as active as it is at any time during its life. It will make straight for the water, even if it be out of sight and a good distance off, and it will pursue its prey with eagerness and agility during the first hour of its free existence.

FISH CAN REMEMBER

Have Faculty for Remembering at Least 24 Hours

Experiments have shown that fish have the faculty of remembering for at least twenty-four hours. The fish studied at Tortugos are gray perch, whose favorite food is the little silver sardine. The experimenters painted some of the silver sardines light red; then they offered them to the great perch mixed with the unpainted sardines. The perch snatched the silver sardines and ate them, then very deliberately and cautiously they nibbled at the painted sardines. Finding that the fish were the same, whether red or silver, they devoured the red fish. Having given proof of their intelligence, they were allowed to rest twenty-four hours. The experimenters offered them sardines painted red and sardines painted black. The perch eagerly devoured the red sardines.

PROTECTING MINERS

Canada's Death [illegible] to High—Belgium's [illegible]?

The accident death rate among miners is greater in Canada than any other civilized country. This is due largely to the hazardous nature of the work and to the class of labor available for employment. The fatality rate in coal mines in Belgium has been the lowest in the world, being but slightly over one per thousand employed. In 1850, the fatality rate in Belgium was as high as it is in Canada. The decrease is the result of the combined efforts of the mine owners, the workmen, and the Administration of Mines, and it is due, to a great extent, to diffusion of technical and professional education. In view of its importance, the Government should direct more attention to the education of the workman, so that he may not be a danger to himself or others and that he may become better educated, more skilful, and thus have the opportunity to better his position.

Dry Battery Trouble Lamp

Dry batteries, testing eight amperes, or less, will operate small electric-light bulbs and doorbells satisfactorily. Four cells wired in series to any desired length of cotton drop cord terminating in a miniature pull socket, that is equipped with a six-volt lamp, will provide a good trouble light for a considerable period

Many accidents may be prevented by the provision of municipal skating rinks and coasting slides.

a shame
How often these little things spoil a good game?
They rattle the pitcher and make the fans groan,
There's just one thing worse, and that's "pulling a bone."

Good old Dave Bancroft, the clever shortstop of the Phillies! Dave is hitting 'em to beat the band these days, mast unusual thing, for while he has always been looked upon as a clever fielder, his work at the bat has not been particularly noteworthy. But it's different now, and David's batting eye is in fine working order.

Denver's shortstop, Charley Hollocher, is certainly making a name for himself. The Pirates have had their eye on him for quite some time, and have made several attempts to purchase him. Before you know it, Denver is going to lose Charley, and then what'll they do?

Pat French, who recently came from the University of Maine for a tryout with the Athletics, ought to make a valuable addition to Connie Mack's little band. Pat starts work on June 20. He excelled in baseball, football and track athletics at his university.

Optimistic Oscar says: "The boxer who gets licked has his advantage: after the bout he can go and take a nice long rest and he won't be disturbed by the usual host of admirers."

If anybody says the baseball players are not helping Uncle Sam get in trim for the war, let them come out and be taught the error of their way. Jimmy Archer, catcher, and Jimmy Sheghard, of the Cubs, are busiest pair of baseball players in any league these days. They are both up at the United States naval training station at Great Lakes, Ill., teaching the recruits how to play baseball. The arrangements for this instruction were made between President Charles M. Weeghman, of the Chicago National League club, and the commandant of the training station. Manager Mitchell will, therefore, have to worry along without his able assistant, Jimmy Sheckhard, for a while, at least.

There was an old man in Pawtucket
Who kept all his cash in a bucket,
His daughter, named Nan,

And as far as the bucket, Nantucket.

He followed the pair to Nantucket,

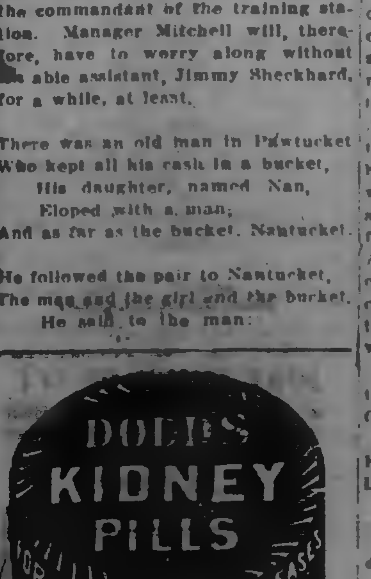
He said to the man:
"You're welcome to Nan."
But has for the Bucket, Pawtucket.

Old-timers among the fans will remember with admiration William D. O'Brien, popularly known as "Darby," who was as famous as an outfielder in his day as Ty Cobb is in this. O'Brien was claimed by the Grim Reaper twenty-three years ago to-day June 15th, 1893. He succombed to consumption. "Darby" first gained fame as a member of the New York Metropolitan team, but it was with the Brooklyn Nationals that he made his greatest reputation. He joined the Dodgers in 1890, the year they joined the National League. It was in this year that the Players' League tried to break up organized baseball. O'Brien played left field for the Dodgers, and led the bunch in bat work, his average being 314. He continued to star for several years, until death cut short his career. Right here it may be well to mention a few other stars of earlier days who rivalled the accomplishments of Ty Cobb. There was Lipman Pike, of Troy; Ed. Cuthbert, of Philadelphia: Mart King, Dave Eggler, Al Gedney A. J. Reach and Jim O'Rourke, all of whom were star performers in the National Association of the early '70's, the parent organization of the present National League. Don't get the idea that we of the present day have a monoply of stars. There were plenty of them in the old days, and they had to play a harder game, too.



PUGILISTIC NEWS

Pugilistic Annals

1869.—Mike McCool defeated Tom Allen in nine rounds on a foul, near St. Louis. This battle was declared to be for the world's championship, but with Jem Mace holding the undisputed English championship, such a claim had no standing. McCool first claimed the American title after John C. Heenan's retirement in 1863, but he was beaten by Joe Coorn in sixty-three rounds, at Charleston, Md. Three years later McCool beat Bill Davis, the Californian, at Rhodes' Point, Mo., and became the champion. Tom Allen, of St. Louis, after defeating a number of good men, including Bill Davis, in forty-three rounds, challenged McCool. Allen and McCool met, and according to all accounts the former had the better of the match when the referee warder the victory to McCool on an alleged foul committed by Allen. Few fight fans accepted the verdict, and Allen was hailed as the American champion He fought for the world's championship against Jem Mace in the following year, in Louisiana, but was defeated.

MANAGER JENNINGS SARCASTIC

Hugh Jennings, who is a past muster at handing out sarcasm, was asked recently about the Detroit team and what its chances were. He refused to answer as to its chances, so he was asked if its poor showing this season hadn't been a great disappointment to him. Then Hugh exploded and delivered himself of these fine slams at his team in general :

"Am I surprised by the position Detroit holds in the race? My answer to that is that Detroit does not wish to corner all the good things in life. We claim that Detroit is the best city in the world in which to live. It also has the greatest ball player of all time and the greatest red-headed coacher in the business.

"We also have some of the best pool and checker players in the game enrolled among the Tigers. As for crap shooters, you will have to go some to find the superior of Donie Bush. We also have the best trainer who ever trained West Point cadets. In military drill, we have attained a high degree of efficiency.

"In Ed Spencer we have the greatest come-back catcher in the world. In Sam Crawford we have one of the most expert amateur photographers who ever got peeved when you opened the door of his dark room. In Bill James we have one of the best big game hunters the world ever knew, a second Paul Raney, in fact. In Harry Coveleskie we have the best south-paw pitcher among all the brothers of Stanley Coveleskie, the star hurler of the Indians.

"Oh, yes, we also have a strong baseball team on paper. Some day they may demonstrate that they are strong on the diamond as well.

"All that ails our pitchers is that they lack control and effectiveness. Their appetites are splendid. As for our batters, they seem to know how to play their hands as well as ever. They are shy only in hitting. I can not understand why our infielders miss so many chances. They all had new gloves this spring—just as good gloves as were bought for any other team in the league. Somehow or other, though, the ball always seems to bound badly for my fellows.

"It may be as you say, that we are not using the right kind of bats. There may be something in that. I understand that George Sisler of the Browns has invented a new bat that seemed to work well. I guess I will wire for some of them. I heard it finally was thrown out for being illegal, but perhaps we might get by for a few days. Judging from the lack of eyesight displayed by some of these umps, I think it would be two weeks before they would catch on.

"Yes, we are battling the Athletics for position once more. It reminds me of the seasons of 1909 and 1910 when the Tigers and Athletics had such strenuous fights for the pennant. Now, after seven years of varied fortune, we again are contenders.

"Do not think for a minute that I am worried about the future. In fact I am full of confidence. I know we have it in us to win some more games. Do we not play the Athletics again this season "

FOR ASHES IN CELLAR

Block and-Tackle Hoist For All Heavy Material

Removal of ashes, or other heavy material, from a cellar is often difficult; the device shown in the sketch was installed to facilitate such work. A davit, or curved standard, to support the block and tackle used, was fitted into the stairs with the upper portion projecting out of the cellar door. The support is made of a 2-inch pipe, fitted at its upper end with a clevis to which the pulley is attached. At its lower end it is set into a larger pipe, which is bolted to the stairs. This arrangement enables the operator to load the bucket in the cellar, raise it by means of the block and tackle, and revolve the load on the standard for convenient dumping into a wheelbarrow. The standard may be arranged so that its upper portion slides down into the supporting pipe, when not in use. It may thus be inclosed in the cellar, making it unnecessary to remove the tackle.—Popular Mechanics.

DYNAMITE HAIR SEALS

Experiment Rid Pacific Coast of 200 Salmon Thieves

A Western newspaper has the following: 200 hair seals were blown to pieces by the fisheries department on the Sandheads, about halfway between Point Grey and the north light and two miles south of the Vancouver cannery. These seals have been dining on salmon in the Fraser River for some two or three years, creating such a destructive effect on the fishing industry that the authorities found it necessary to take action to eliminate the pest if possible.

A trial experiment was carried out successfully by Mr. J. McHugh, an engineer of the fisheries branch of the department of naval service. Fourteen mines containing two hundred pounds of explosives were laid in a sort of egg-shaped pattern, with a row down the centre right on the ridge of the bar and two curving rows on the outer sides. Each mine consisted of a coal oil can with explosive in the bottom, dynamite and forcite gelatine, packed tight in sand and with a sand cushion on top, above that a quantity of shrapnel, then another sand cushion, tar paper and the top sealed with tar, out of which rose the wires from the primer or exploding charge in the centre of the explosive.

These wires were all connected with the main lead wires, which were half a mile long, necessitating in all 37 separate connections. The mines were buried eight inches below the surface, and the lead wires were also buried, a buoy about half a mile from the mines marking the point at which later the boat took them up and connected with the battery.

WONDERFUL ECHOES

Remarkable Natural Echo on Bavarian Lake

Probably the finest echo which the world knows is in the Cathedral at Pisa- where the Leaning Tower is. Sing two notes and there is no reverberation; sing three, and they are at once taken up by the walls of the edifice, swelled, prolonged, and varied till they seem as a divine harmony from some majestic organ. There is a cavern in Finland in which, if you test your lungs to the top of their capacity, there will answer you such horrible roarings, moanings, and mutterings that you will be glad to rush out in absolute terror. Undoubtedly the most extraordinary natural echo in the world is to be heard by the side of a small lake in Bavaria. On one hand rises a perpendicular cliff several thousand feet high, while on the other side is a dense forest. If a pistol is fired on the lake the woods send back a faint echo that gradually dies away, but presently it is heard from the cliff, continually increasing in power till it bursts over one's head like a deafening peel of thunder.

Northern Potato Seed Best

Authorities agree that northern-grown seed will give the best results in old Ontario and that immature seed does better than mature seed. "In parts of Scotland," said Professor Zavitz of Guelph, speaking on this point, "they grow an early crop of potatoes and then plant a later crop for seed purposes, and they find that the immature potatoes make the best seed, and the same result has been found at the college, potatoes not fully matured make better seed than a well matured potato."

Arm Is For Food

A rather curious fact is that the bones of the arm are arranged primarily for the purpose of carrying the hand to the mouth—food being, of course, the first necessity of life. If you do not believe it, try it for yourself, and see how much more [illegible] ally, when your arm is bent, your hand moves in that direction than in any other.

ON TO THE ARCTIC

McArthur's Road to Touch Fort Providence "Somewhere in North"

"All aboard for Fort Providence, Mackenzie river!" How long will it be before that announcement will be heard in the Winnipeg railway depots? J. D. McArthur's Peace River line is definitely reaching out that way. A charter has been secured as far as Hay Lake, on the north side of the Peace and west of Fort Vermilion, and Mr. McArthur seeks an extension to Fort Providence on the Mackenzie River a place which a few years ago seemed far remote from the possibility of railway connection.

Mr. McArthur's line, a branch of the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway, is now in operation to Peace River Crossing, and tenders are being called for the erection of a bridge to carry it over that stream. Graders will be at work on the north side of the river preparing a grade for the rails of a road to be built through the settlements already established in that part of the Peace River country. This will be the start of the contemplated road to Fort Providence, which will make accessible rich and varied natural resources—agricultural and pasture lands, timber, minerals and fish.

The steel section of the bridge that is to span the Peace at the Crossing will be 1,700 feet long, with approaches that will add another seven or eight hundred feet to its length. The settlers on both sides of the river are demanding that provision be made for vehicular traffic when the bridge is constructed, and representations will be made to both the Alberta and Federal Governments concerning the matter. It is likely that both Governments will be asked to give financial assistance for a vehicular traffic deck. Unless this is done it is felt that it will be many years before a bridge can be built for the use of the general public. The estimated cost of the railway bridge proposed is over $1,000,000. A special traffic bridge it is felt would be a great aid in the settlement and development of the country.

SYSTEMS OF NOBILITY

No Middle Class in Russia—Queer Rules About Names

Contrary to the laws existing in England and Sweden, in Russia when a lady belonging to a titled family marries a Russian gentleman without a title she takes her husband's name entirely, and the only right left to her of her former title is to write on her visiting cards and official papers, "Mrs. So-and-So, born Princess, Countess, or Baroness So-and-So." Her children are called by their father's name. There are only a few exceptions to this rule.

In Russia no middle class or gentry are known. There are only nobles and peasants. The Czar, however, grants sometimes for special merit the right to be styled a nobleman, and also for the same reason the titles of count and baron, and occasionally that of prince. All those merchants who have kept their firms always flourishing for a hundred or more years have the right to receive the foreign title of baron. This law was made by Peter the Great over 200 years ago, but the merchants very seldom accept this Germane title and generally decline the privilege.

In former days when the peasants were still slaves they had no family names, but were called by their father's Christian name. Peter's son was called son of Peter—in Russian Petrov. So also Smirov—Simon's son; Ivanov—Ivan's (John) son; and so on. When slavery was abolished and the emancipation proclaimed by the Emperor Alexander II, they all kept these names. Since then many of them have received the right to belong to the class of nobles.

The Russian clergy, belonging to the class of peasants, for it very seldom happens that nobles become priests have special family names. Their names mean always a feast day, or a precious stone, or something connected with the Church. In former days the clergy was a class apart, and a son of a clergyman was bound to be a clergyman, and when they first entered the Church they chose a name for themselves.

THE TERRIER'S FRIEND

Collie Tended Comrade For Week With His Own Food

A true story comes from Hudson, Ill., from A. N. Starkey, living on a farm northwest of that village. He owns a collie and a rat terrier. The latter disappeared and after being searched for was given up for dead. The collie, however, acted very strangely. Immediately after being given food he disappeared and did not return again until the next meal time. Members of the family decided to follow him. They did so and a half mile from the house the poor little rat terrier was found, caught in a trap which had been set for mink. The collie had been carrying food in his mouth to his little friend for over a week and was overjoyed to think help had come to the rat terrier. The latter was very soon released and tenderly carried home to be given proper care. The devotion of the collie was much remarked on in that neighborhood.

Princess' Canadian House

The London Daily Mirror says: "So attached had Princess Patricia become to Canada that before she left she determined to have some place there which she could call her very own. She, therefore, bought a piece of land from the Duke of Sutherland, who has a few hundred thousand acres there, and built a pretty little house on it."

Old Age Pensioners Marry

Two old age pensioners, aged seventy-four and seventy-three respectively, were married at Mansfield Woodhouse (Notts). The bridegroom went to the coal mine when eight years old, and worked as a collier for nearly sixty years.

READ INSURANCE POLICY

Householders Careless About Details That Might Mean Loss

The following, or a similar clause, appears in all policies of fire insurance: "The company is not liable for losses following, that is to say: Where the insurance is upon buildings or their contents for loss caused by the want of good and substantial brick or stone or cement chimneys, or by ashes or embers being deposited, with the knowledge and consent of the assured, in wooden vessels; or by stoves or stove-pipes being, to the knowledge of the assured, in an unsafe condition, or improperly secured."

Nothwithstanding this, in one year in Canada, there were 51 fires from defective and overheated stoves and furnaces; 83 from defective and overheated pipes, chimneys, etc., and 8 by live coals and hot ashes. Should the insurance companies take advantage of this clause, many victims of their own carelessness would find themselves without any recompense for their losses.

MR. MITCHELL BROUGHT SAME OLD MESSAGE TO ST. ANDREW'S

Large Congregation Hear Him Preach Anniversary Sermons in His Former Pulpit.

"I bring the same old message to you," said Rev. T. H. Mitchell to his former congregation at St. Andrew's yesterday, when he announced the text for his opening discourse, which was based on the Saviour's request to Peter if he loved Him to feed His lambs and His sheep. The church was crowded at both morning and evenings services, a large number of members of other denominations being present, especially in the evening.

It was the same old message, the same gospel of love that Mr. Mitchell preached so acceptably for over a year in St. Andrew's, and which he exemplified in his daily walk and conversation. The "shepherd idea," one of the oldest in religion, was the theme that ran through his morning sermon. Church attendance may be falling off and discouraging financial reports sometimes received, and the question is raised how this condition can be improved. Some are in favor of changing the form of worship, improving the musical service, and the like, but Mr. Mitchell believes that the true solution is for every church member to become a shepherd or a shepherdess and bring the strangers and the outsiders into the fold.

Strangers in the City.

There are one hundred thousand less young people on the farms of Canada than there were a few years ago, and as a result the cities are filled with lonely young people. Competition these days is so keen that more of the population die in middle life than ever before. The poor and rich alike are homeless, the former on account of their poverty and the latter because they own so many houses that they have no real home.

A member of Mr. Mitchell's congregation in Toronto has written to him, asking him to establish a social centre near the church where the young people, especially those who are strangers in the city, can meet and become acquainted. He is not sure that this proposition is the solution of the problem, but would bring the shepherd idea to bear upon it and get he strangers into the fellowship to be found in the church.

The Greatest Commandment.

The rabbis of old were agreed that the "birds' nest law" was the least of all the commandments in the Mosaic code. They were never able to agree as to which was the chief duty of man, whether the observance of the Sabbath Day or some of the other precepts. Then, when Christ was on earth, a lawyer put the question to Him, and we all know His answer: "And thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" was man's highest duty.

A Curse Turned To a Blessing.

In his evening discourse Mr. Mitchell again voiced the brod Christian charity that has always characterized his preaching. Once, while standing in front of his church, while a pastor in New England, a stranger asked to be directed to the Catholic edifice, and Mr. Mitchell pointed it out.

"And what church is this?" asked the stranger, pointing to the one of which Mr. Mitchell was pastor.

"The Presbyterian Church," was the reply.

"But you have a cross on it."

"Yes, and I wear a cross on my watch chain and am proud of it," was Mr. Mitchell's answer.

Mr. Mitchell said that his father had been an Orangemen, and his brother is a member of that order. Once when he himself was preaching to Orangemen one of those in the audience objected to the cross on his watch chain.

The speaker deplored this exhibition of narrowness. The cross is not a mark of any religious denomination, but is the symbol of the Christian faith.

Good Out of Evil.

Mr. Mitchell believes that good will follow the war, even though homes have been filled with sorrow and countries have been desolated. When the soldiers come back they will insist upon the real and will no longer be satisfied with the incidental. The war is already developing international character, something the church has failed to accomplish in nineteen hundred years. The spirit of mankind has been too provincial. National character may have been created, but the broader union of the nations was still lacking when the war broke out.

God will turn a curse into a blessing as He has so often done, but He needs help. The soldiers in the trenches and the nurses at the front are helping Him. Are those at home doing their share? Mr. Mitchell added that, while he believes in the sovereignty of God, he also believes in the freedom of man's will.

The "Birds' Nest Law."

When Mr. Mitchell alluded in his morning sermon to the "birds' nest law," which was regarded as the least of the Mosaic commandments, he said he would not tell his audience what it was, but hoped they would look it up in their Bibles. The law referred to is found in Deuteronomy xxii: 6 and 7, and reads:

> "If a bird's nest chance to be before thee in the way in any tree or on the ground, whether they be young ones or eggs and the dam sitting upon the young or upon the eggs, thou shalt not take the dam with the eggs.
> "But thou shalt in any wise let the dam go and take the young to thee, that it may be well with thee and that thou mayst prolong thy days."

KIND WORDS FOR MR. AND MRS. ROWAND.

"You cannot understand what pleasure it gives my sister and myself to be with you again," said Mr. Mitchell, as a prelude to his sermon last night. "We have decided to remain over for the reception tonight, which will be held to give everybody a chance to meet Mr. and Mrs. Rowand, the new occupants of the manse You are to be congratulated upon securing Mr. and Mrs. Rowand, for wherever they have been they have left an excellent reputation behind them. I can only hope that they will be as happy among you as I was."

MRS. JAMES GOSELIN.

Elmire Goyette, beloved wife of Mr. James Goselin, died at the family residence, 45 Crescent street, yesterday afternoon after an illness of nearly two years' duration. She was born in La Prairie, Quebec, forty years ago, and is survived by her husband, four daughters and four sons.

The funeral will be held from the family residence on Wednesday at 9 a.m. to the Church of the Sacred Heart and from there to St. Peter's cemetery.

RICHARD CLEGG.

Richard Clegg, a former resident of Peterborough, died at Wingham yesterday. The remains will be brought to the city this evening and the funeral will take place to the Little Lake Cemetery on Wednesday afternoon. Funeral announcement will be made tomorrow.

THE LATE MRS. F. J. SAWERS.

The funeral ceremony in connection with the death of Mrs. Sawers, wife of the Rev. F. J. Sawers, formerly rector of St. Luke's Church, Peterborough, and for the past two years rector of St. Peter's, Cobourg, took place on Saturday, June 16th, in the latter church.

The service was conducted by the Bishop of Toronto, assisted by Canon Morley, the Rev. W. H. White of Peterborough, and other clergy. The Bishop's address was one of sympathy and hope. His reference to the sweet, womanliness and high character of the departed awoke echoes in the hearts of all his hearers. The stately old church of St. Peter's was filled with sympathising friends representing not only St. Peter's congreation but the citizens of Cobourg generally.

Among the mourning relatives present were Mr. and Mrs. Smyth and Miss Nora Smyth, of Montreal, parents and sister of the deceased; Mr. A. Sawers, Mrs. W. E. Brown, Messrs. A. R. Sawers and H. Rush, of Peterborough; Mr. A. and Lt. Huntley Paterson, Mrs. Evans and Mrs. Donald Edwards, all of Toronto, Mrs. C. Fairbanks, Mrs. H. Roller, Mr. and Mrs. W. Allen, of Cobourg, and Mrs. G. Whitaker.

The pall bearers were Messrs. E. H. Osler and D. Denton, Church wardens, Messrs. W. F. Kerr, B. Heaslip, J. Dick and J. Sprague, the latter a son of a former rector.

Peterborough former parishioners and friends were represented by Judge and Mrs. Huycke, Messrs. E. A. Peck, R. B. Rogers, R. H. Turner, H. Adams, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Parsons, Mrs. J. J. Turner, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Hay, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McKone and others.

The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful and among them were included many from St. Luke's Church and Peterborough friends.

The interment took place in the Rector's plot of the picturesque old cemetery of St. Peter's.

Mrs. Sawar's death occasioned a great shock to her husband, family, and friends. Her health was considered to be slowly improving up to a day or two before her death when she was suddenly called upon to undergo a serious operation.

The Rev. Mr. Sawers accompanied his wife's relatives to Montreal the day after the funeral. It is understood that he will be away from his parish for some weeks and that in the meanwhile his duties will be taken by the Rev. Canon Morley.

DRAFT BILL CERTAIN TO CARRY

BRITISH TROOPS RAID HUN POSTS, DESTROY DUGOUTS AND CAPTURED PRISONERS

Violent Artillery Action Still Continues on French Front---Counter Attacks Repulsed.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 19. — Parties of our troops raided the enemy's positions last night south-east of Laverguier, and in the neighborhood of the Bapaume-Cambrai road, says today's official statement. Several of the enemy were killed and his dugouts destroyed. We captured eleven prisoners .

HUNS AGAIN REPULSED

PARIS, June 19.—An official statement says: In Champagne there was violent fighting between Mont Blond and Mont Carnillet. Strong German counter attacks on the position we captured yesterday in this region were broke up by our fire. The enemy suffered serious losses and left a number of prisoners in our hands. German attacks on small posts north of St. Quentin and near the Calonne trench were repulsed. Patrol encounters occurred in the Parroy Forest. We took some prisoners.

BRITISH TRANSPORT SUNK

LONDON June 19.—The British transport Cameronian, with a small number of troops on board was torpedoed and sank by an enemy submarine in the eastern Mediterranean on June 2, it was officially announced Monday. Sixty-three persons including the captain of the transport, are presumed to have been drowned.

LINER STRIKES MINE

MONTREAL, June 19. — The steamship Carthaginian, of the Allan Line, struck a mine and sank shortly after leaving Glasgow, while bound for Montreal according to information received in Montreal yesterday.

No details had arrived at a late hour, but it is understood she did not carry passengers , and it is thought she was sunk Sunday morning. As the vessel had wireless, it is regarded as probable that her officers and crew were rescued.

TO RE-TAKE SERBIA

LONDON, June 19.—The massing of entente troops in Thessaly, south of the centre of the line now held by General Sarrail's forces, taken in connection with the withdrawal of British forces on the extreme eastern wing along the lower reaches of the Struma River seemingly is an indication that big events are in the making in the Macedonian theatre in an attempt to re-take Serbia, at least that portion of it as far as Nish, through which runs the famous Berlin-Constantinople railway.

The principal losses will be incurred by the Canada Steamship Co., the Metropolitan Insurance Company, the Sorel Newspaper Company, the Bell Telephine Co., and the Dominion Government. LAURIER DEMANDS VOTE BE TAKEN ON CONSCRIPTION

Says if Measure is Endorsed by People Quebec Will Fall in With Decision---Sir George Foster Says Liberal Amendment is "Miserable, Dilatory Motion."

OTTAWA, June 19.—The fight on conscription began in the house of Commons Monday, and the Liberal policy to a certain extent was defined by the amendment offered by Sir Wilfrid Laurier on the second reading of the bill. He moved that the conscription bill be not further proceeded with until it had been submitted by referendum to the electorate. His amendment was supported by Hon. Frank Oliver and Hon. Charles Marcil, both of whom, by the way, declared themselves to be in favor of the principle of conscription. Mr. Oliver complained that the law was not drastic enough, and Mr. Marcil declared that the present parliament was moribund and defunct, and had no mandate from the people.

Laurier's Point of Law.

Sir Robert Borden moved the second reading of the bill in a brief statement, having already explained its provisions when he introduced the measure. He declared that no new principle was involved, as compulsory military service had been provided by the Militia Act since 1868.

Sr Wilfrid Laurier followed in a long and somewhat labored speech. He insisted that there was no power as the law now stood to compel men to serve as soldiers outside of Canada, and in support of this contention quoted from the despatch sent by the Dominion Government to the British Government at the outbreak of the war. He said that the present parliament was moribund, and that it should not act on so important a matter without a mandate from the people. He spoke of the opposition to conscription on the part of organized labor, and the strong feeling against it throughout the Province of Quebec, and closed by moving an amendment referring the whole subject to the people.

Foster's Reply Effective.

Sir George Foster followed in an eloquent speech declaring that parliament must accept the responsibility resting upon it and then be judged by the people. We had sent out soldiers to the front under an implied contract to support and reinforce them. He could not stop to discuss the constitution with the Huns at our gates. A referendum could accomplish nothing because even though the people voted against conscription parliament would still have no choice but to fill our armies, referendum or no referendum.

Points Made in Sir Wilfrid's Speech

If there is a referendum and people vote for conscription, the people of Quebec will cheerfully acquiesce in that decision.

Today the government insists on forcing through a moribund parliament, a rump parliament, without consultation with the people, a measure which it has proclaimed every day from Aug. 4, 1914, to April 18, 1917, it would never resort to. It would change the law, as old as Canada itself, that no man shall be compelled to serve as a soldier against his will, except to repel an invasion.

The government has never brought the Militia Act into force or sought to justify sending a Canadian expeditionary force abroad by its provisions.

Conscription has aroused bitter opposition and caused a deep line of cleavage, not only between province and province, but between classes and classes in all the provinces.

No such radical change in national policy should be made without appealing to the people.

The working people are saying to the government: "If you compel us to give up our lives, you must compel the rich men to give up their money."

Quebec's showing is poor, but it is due to faulty recruiting methods. If proper appeal had been made at the beginning the people would have responded.

WHILE HOTEL MAN SLEPT GUESTS BROKE THE LAW

Young Men Smuggled Liquor Into Local Hostelry and Were Caught by Police---Case Dismissed in Police Court.

A local hotelkeeper appeared before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning on a charge of keeping liquor for sale contrary to the Ontario Temperance Act. Some days ago the officers on duty at the corner of Charlotte and George streets noticed a few young men coming down George street apparently under the influence of drink. They watched them go into the hotel and later one of them came out and was placed under arrest. Shortly after the officers returned to the hostelry and asked about the other men and after going to the room of a guest of the house found the other men there with a very strong smell of whisky on their breath and a glass with a drop or two of whiskey on the dresser. No trace of where the liquor came from was in evidence and a search showed that in the adjoining room some one had placed a bottle of Scotch on the dresser there.

Under the law it was up to the proprietor of the hotel to explain the presence of the whisky and as he was in bed at the time he was in entire ignorance of the whole transaction.

The evidence of some of the young men was heard and it was quite clear to the magistrate that the hotelkeeper was innocent and the case was dismissed.

Will Close Contract for Fire Motor Truck

COUNCIL TO MEET FOR THE PURPOSE TOMORROW NIGHT.

Mayor Duffus has called a meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council for to-morrow evening at eight o'clock to be followed by a council meeting. It is the intention to close up the contract for the purchase of the new motor apparatus for the fire hall, if possible.

At the last meeting of the council a request was made to the La France Engine Co. to submit any possible deviaton from the specifications to the council instead of leaving them so broadly described as in their last agreement.

A few other matters relating to the bridge bylaw will also be discussed in committee.

FINER SENSES OF SOLDIERS NOT DULLED BY THE GHASTLY SCENES WITNESSED DAILY

Young Canadian Warrior Gathers Wild Roses to Place on Bier of Dead Comrades.

(By Stewart Lyons)

Canadian Headquarters in France, (via London). June 19.—The enemy artillery, which for several days has been little in evidence at this part of the front, has again become fairly active. Much of the shelling is in the vicinity of Reservoir Hill. This is a miniature production of Vimy Ridge, and lies to the northeast of the electric station. The battalion now holding this portion of the line has been industriously improving the trenches, thus lessening the casualties. Some occur, despite the best precautions.

While out visiting the front I saw an incident that proves the finer feelings of the men are not blunted by daily contact with death. Three bodies of victims of the enemy artillery lay on a mortuary truck, awaiting removal to the cemetery behind the lines. Each was wrapped up in his blanket, which is the universal substitute at the front for winding sheet and coffin. A companion of the dead lads, himself a young fellow, barely out of his teens, had risen early and gone out into the Wood of the Swallows to find some flowers that he might lay upon the breasts of his friends as a last tribute of affection. He returned carrying an armful of roses, wet with the dew of the morning, and shedding their fragrance widely. It was a touch of poetic sentiment amid the gift and prose of war.

Roses Bloom Amidst Ruins.

Later, in the woods we came upon the place where the roses grew in great abundance. In a small clearing, girt about by German wire entanglements, lay the ruins of an isolated cottage. A shell had so smashed it that scarcely one brick remained unbroken. Around this heap of war's desolation bloomed a rose garden that must have been the pride of its owner. A refugee, far from the roses she had tended with still evident care, the woman of the rose garden, would find consolation in the thought that her flowers had lain on the breasts of men from the surf-beaten shores of Canada to redeem her garden with their life blood.

The enemy is hard at work on new trenches between the present front and Lens. He is not very confident, apparently, that he could hold the present line if the day of trial came.

POLES TO VOTE AGAINST BUDGET IN AUSTRIA

They Have Completely Broken Off Relations With Government.

A RIOT IN PARLIAMENT.

Disturbance Was Stopped Only By the Adjournment of Sitting.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, June 19. — A Reuter despatch from Zurich says the Poles in the Austrian Parliament have completely broken off relations with the Government. They have decided to vote against the budget, and the Government's position is serious. One Polish deputy declared in the Austrian Reichsrath that the Germans had hanged thirty thousand of his compatriots. A Pan-German deputy shouted, "All of them ought to have been hanged," whereupon the Slav and Polish members rushed upon him and the president was obliged to suspend the sitting.

Gentlemen:—

Following precedent, I beg to address you on some of the important matters you have been dealing with, and will have to deal with, throughout the year 1917.

Before doing so, I beg to express my gratification at the material progress made by this County in the past few years, and we can look forward to a harvest encouraging to those engaged in agricultural pursuits, and the great consuming peoples who are at this critical time depending so much on the product of the farm.

Having my attention called to the last two presentments of the Grand Juries, I am proud to know that our public institutions appear to be carrying into effect the purposes for which they were intended.

JOHN C. CHITTICK KILLED WHEN BOILER IN CHEESE FACTORY BLOWS UP

Explosion Occurred at Noon Today---Building Wrecked and Debris Burned---Albert Carter Has Close Call.

John C. Chittick, owner of the Trewern cheese factory near Chemong, was instantly killed at noon today when the boiler of the factory blew up with a terrific crash that was felt for miles in the surrounding country. Death must have been instantaneous. The factory was totally wrecked and the debris was consumed by fire which followed the explosion. Mr. Chittick was alone in the building when the explosion took place but Albert Carter was close at hand at the time. He escaped unhurt.

Undertaker Hendren of Lakefield took charge of the remains. The loss on the factory is covered by insurance. The explosion was probably caused by the lack of water in the boiler.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, JUNE 19, 1917

CO-OPERATION AMONG FARMERS.

AT THE ANNUAL MEETING of the West Peterborough Board of Agriculture, held last Friday at the Mann farm in Smith, one of the speakers, Mr. J. P. Sackville, of the Guelph Agricultural College, advised the farmers to co-operate as a matter of self-protection in selling their produce. This does not imply any attempt on the part of the producer to hold up the ultimate consumer, but is designed simply to save the farmer from the manipulations of the speculator.

The war has caused an abnormal rise in the price of wool, just as it has in other commodities. If there is any financial advantage in this condition to anyone it is only right that the producer shall have a share in the profits. There is no reason on earth why the farmer should be held down to the old figure for the wool which his sheep produce, while the middleman walks off with all the profits. Co-operation in cheese factories has worked out well. There is no reason why it should not be employed in other lines.

The wool produced in Ontario this year is being marketed largely through co-operative agencies. One farmer belonging to one of these societies will not undersell a fellow member. Mr. Sackville told his hearers the other day that in Guelph the middleman went among the farmers offering them 25 and 30 cents a pound for their wool, when the market price was over 50 cents. Except for the cooperation the farmers would have had no alternative but to accept this offer, and it is easy to compute the loss on every such transaction. By holding out for the market price they did not in any sense increase the final cost. The farmers got a square deal and the middleman went shy.

While there is a combination against the farmer in every line his only hope lies in similar organisations. He can eliminate the middleman to a great extent by acting in that capacity himself. He is his own middleman every time he comes to the Peterborough market with a load of produce and deals directly with the consumer. If the food speculator went among the farmers gathering up their produce the producers would be victimized by being held down to the lowest possible price. The speculator looks for higher profits than satisfy the farmer who comes to market himself.

There are combines that are a detriment to individual prosperity and there are combines that are beneficent. One of the latter has been formed by employes of the C. G. E., who have planted one hundred ad thirty bags of potatoes on a plot of land in the outskirts of the city. Every man interested in that enterprise has signed an agreement that when the crop is harvested he will not sell a single bushel to a dealer ,but will treat only with the ultimate consumer. soldiers' wives and dependents to be given the preference.

ALL MAY YET BE WELL.

HUMANITY is as selfish as ever. The man without wealth is willing to have the material resources of the country conscripted. The man with no sons of military age is perfectly willing that the sons of others shall be taken by a corporal's guard if necessary. So there the deadlock is likely to arise.

But all may yet be well. The members of the Bon Entente who set out to win the war by mutual felicitations and the lavish adoption of resolutions expressive of interprovincial good fellowship, have always assured us that Quebec panted for conscription as the hind for the water. The man who holds back in one province does so because he does not want to go if the other man does not follow his example. The very suggestion of conscription would send the young fellows all over the country to the recruiting officers in droves.

Perhaps the Bonne Entente altruists are right and Quebec may really be in favor of conscription. If so, it must be said that that province has guarded the secret most carefully.

HOW THE DRAFT WILL WORK.

THERE IS NO NEW principle involved in the Military Service Bill, the second reading of which was moved in Parliament yesterday by Sir Robert Borden. A measure embracing what are practically the same provisions was adopted in the House one year after Confederation, and the same was reaffirmed in 1904 in a bill which was introduced by the Liberals and supported by the then Opposition and which was wisely designed to meet just such an emergency as now exists in Canada.

The only difference is in the method of application. Under the Act of 1904 men of military age would be chosen indiscriminately by ballot without regard to the necessity for their services in private life. Their physical fitness alone would enter into the consideration. When the present bill goes into operation those will first be taken whose services can best be dispensed with in the ranks of industry. The bill is beyond all doubt an improvement on the law as it now stands, and there is no apparent reason why it should not be unanimously supported, or all but so, just as it was in 1904. Thirteen years ago it was passed as a precautionary measure, and there was no immediate prospect of its being put in operation. That prospect is in sight now, and this may have a tendency to make some of the members either timid or hostile in their attitude. Most any man is brave when it comes to providing for an emergency that is merely potential. When actual danger confronts him it is an entirely different matter.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in his statement in the House yesterday, was not very explicit in defining the attitude of himself and his followers. He would not commit himself further than to promise that the Opposition would not cause any delay except so far as a discussion of the measure was necessary. Even in the face of the records, he took upon himself the responsibility of saying that "His Majesty's loyal Opposition have never offered a word of dissent when measures dealing with the prosecution of the war have been brought forward." "Canada's soldiers are good citizens of Canada," said Sir Wilfrid. "They left to uphold in battle the cause they deem rightly to be the cause of freedom. I am loath to believe that on their return they will forget the principle for which they risked their lives."

Canada's soldiers are all that Sir Wilfrid so gracefully says of them, but they are human, and cannot be expected on their return to cherish friendly sentiments for, or to forget any individuals of a political party that withheld the help that they so sorely need today.

BOYS FOR THE FARM.

IT IS A BENEFICENT WORK that the local Y.M.C.A. is engaged in in securing boys as recruits for farm work. It will be good for the boys themselves, for the farmers, and for the Empire. The new recruits will have the benefit of careful guardianship in their new venture None but the physically fit will be taken, and the lusty young fellows will be given a fair chance. They are in the national service just as much as if they were older and clad in the King's uniform. The badge they are given is as proud a distinction, all things considered, as khaki itself.

The old story that farmers are harder as a rule than other employers on their hired help is no longer cited. That delusion has been broken up long ago, and is no longer urged as a reason why farm labor is scarce. It is the attraction of city life that lures the young men and women from the country. Farm laborers are not underpaid, either. The average laborer is vastly better off from a financial standpoint, he has better food and a more comfortable home, in nine cases out of ten, than he would have if working in the city at the same grade of labor. They work under better conditions, for the open air is more healthy than a factory, no matter how modern the sanitary arrangements may be. The work is really fascinating if those engaged in it only take the proper interest in their task. The hard work that was common before the invention of farm machinery is no longer necessary, and no healthy boy can possibly receive other than physical benefit from a few months' service on a modern farm.

An exchange says that boys placed on farms must be assured of a fair wage and a moral environment that will at least approximate home conditions.

The one condition is as certain as the other. With regard to environments, any boy will be at least as safe on a farm in Peterborough county as if allowed to spend his summer holidays in semi-idleness in the city.

The school authorities are helping in this work, and no student in the high school will forfeit his class standing if he gives up school for farm work.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

DELAY, always dangerous, was never more so than at present.

A DAY IN THIS JUNE would be rare indeed without a thunder storm.

THE KAISER should keep away from the deposed Constantine. The trouble may be contagious.

WHEN THE KAISER has any more Zeppelins he can spare for good, he knows where to send them.

WHAT STATESMAN can think up some other reason for depriving the autoist of his money in the shape of fines?

• • • •

THE MAN who insists upon a referendum on conscription is one of those who burns with an ambition to put it out of commission

SIR WILFRID LAURIER says the voluntary system has not been worked to the limit. Does he, after all, realize his own dereliction?

• • • •

THE MAN WHO WISHES to align himself with Bourassa and Lavergne can achieve his purpose by voting against the Military Service Bill.

• • • •

WHAT IN THIS CRISIS is to be expected of a leader who refused to cooperate with the Government because he is opposed to conscription in any form

• • • •

THE STYLE of home rule in vogue in Greece and Russia proved a dismal failure and is one argument likely to be seized upon by the anti-suffragists.

AND THE BEST OF IT IS that the men in Russia who are opposed to a treacherous peace are the ones who are ready to take as active hand in the fighting.

IF SIR WILFRID LAURIER really feels that he has done everything in his power to encourage recruiting, who would have the heart to wake him from his delusion?

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Each Russian His Own Czar.

(Chicago Tribune.)

New Russia seems to be multiplying governments to permit the individual to do precisely what he pleases. The object sought is an amiable anarchy, attained not by abolishing government, but by increasing the number of parts in its machinery, all constructed for the license, pleasure and profit of the individual.

This is a new conception of a state. Regulations which are not desired by the individual are ignored by him. If the regulations desired by him are not promulgated, he and other citizens whose desires coincide with his form a little group and become a new government.

WHO WANTED AN ELECTION?

St. John N.B., Globe (Lib),

Did Sir Borden suggest the general election proposal in connection with the conscription bill, or was that suggestion a compromise to meet the expressed wishes of Sir Wilfrid Laurier? The answer is to be found in the published correspondence. The Telegraph in discussing the correspondence to-day, challenges the statement of the Globe that the Prime Minister's aim was first to get conscription, and says:—

"Sir Robert Borden's proposal was that the military service bill should passed by a coalition government, but that a pledge should be given not to enforce it until after a general election; that Parliament should be dissolved, and the coalition government should seek a mandate from the people — before an attempt was made to enforce conscription."

This was undoubtedly Sir Robert Borden's proposal, contained in the document prepared by Sir Robert at Sir Wilfrid's request for presentation to Sir Lomer Gouin, but it was a proposal made after a conference between the two leaders, of which Sir Robert Borden says:—

"At our first interview, you had expressed the opinion that compulsory service should not be enforced until it had been approved by a referendum or at a general election. It was for this reason that I submitted the further proposal on the 28th of May, which is described in the fourth paragraph of your letter.

This sentence furnishes proof, absolute and convincing, that the referendum and election suggestions came, not from Sir Robert Borden, but from Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and that the offer Sir Robert Borden made of an election, after conscription had been carried through Parliament by the coalition, was made at the request of Sir Wilfrid and in the hope that it would induce him to join the Government. The correspondence fully justifies the Globe's statement that "the Prime Minister's desire and purpose was first to get conscription." It does not justify the Telegraph's contention that "the very essence of the proposal was that the people should vote on conscription for or against." That was the Laurier demand, to which Borden assented in the vain hope of unity. It is well to keep the record clear.

NATIONAL SERVICE NEEDED

The National Service Board is appealing to the country for the exercise of thrift and the investment of every possible dollar in Government War Savings Certificates. A way to war service has been opened for every man and woman in the Dominion. "You cannot have absolute equality of sacrifice in war" as Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George has declared, but as the Prime Minister of Great Britain said: "You can have equal readiness of sacrifice from all. There are hundreds of thousands who have given their lives; there are millions who have given up comfortable homes and exchanged them for daily communion with death. Multitudes have given up those they love best. Let the nation as a whole place its comforts, indulgences and elegances on a national altar, consecrated by such sacrifices as these men made. The nation will be better for it—stronger mentally, morally and physically. It would strengthen its fibre and ennoble its spirit." So with Canada. The need of the time is economy. Save your money and lend it to your country. Buy War Savings Certificates.

Wit and Wisdom

Her Sarcasm

"Will you have my seat?" he enquired politely.

"On the ground that I am aged and decrepit," the woman asked.

"No, indeed, madam."

"That I am young and beautiful and possibly not averse to a flirtation?"

"Certainly not. That is—"

"Then it must be because you are a gentleman, in this respect differing from the fat person on the left and scrawny specimen at the right. I am glad to learn your principles, sir, but here is my street. Good-day."

Their Big Task.

"Good morning, Mrs. O'Flaherty. And has yer husband been called up yet?"

"Not yit, Mrs. Maclagan, thanks be! He's got six months' expension because he's doing work of rational deportment. They've put him into seminary duty abroad; but when I thinks of the trouble I has to get him up every morning and off to work, it's a fair puzzle to me how the government'll be able to call him up. If his own wife can't call him up, who in the world can?"

Fresh Paint.

A certain city gentleman, who was very well known by porters of a small railway station not many miles from London, was one morning waiting for his usual train, and, observing a porter coming toward him, said:

"Ah, good morning, John! Anything fresh this morning?"

"No, sir," said the porter with a smile, "only the paint you are leaning against."

Not Normal.

Mrs. Bjones—"But I don't see, dear, why you think Mr. Smith isn't normal. I thought he was charming!"

Mr. Bjones—"Mark my words: There's something wrong! Not once did he claim that his dog was so intelligent that it could do everything but talk!"

Cautious.

Mamma—"What is Willie crying about?"

Bridget—"Shure, ma'am, he wanted to go across the street to Tommy Green's."

Mamma—"Well, why don't you let him go?"

Bridget—"They were havin' charades, he said, ma'am, and I wasn't shure as he'd had 'em yet."

Thrift.

Mrs. Pry—"I don't see how you can tolerate a husband who stays out every night. Why don't you divorce him?"

Mrs. Sharp—"I would, my dear, but you have no idea what dandy movie scenarios his explanations make. I sell them all."

MASON'S MELODIES

Uncle Sam is not a quitter; he is slow to shed his coat, slow to draw his lethal weapon and demand another's goat. But when once the fuss is started, though the scrap be fierce and rough, Uncle Sam will go the limit, and will never say "Enough!" When the warlike captains thunder, and the blazen bugles blare, Uncle Sam will join the scrimmage, with his coat-tails in the air. He will swing his shining saber, he will whirl his deadly brand, till the Hohens cease their zollern, and the kaiser has been canned. You will see his banners flying, as to-day you see them flung, till he fetches home the bacon, and the last dog has been hung. Though he's slow to indignation—as our neighbors long have felt—he can whip an anaconda when he tightens up his belt; oh he'll scrap and keep on scrapping never think to end the scrap till the foe is shot to pieces and goes tumbling off the map; he'll conduct his red hot riot on the sea and on the land till the Hohens cease from zollern and the kaiser has been canned.

1917 ROSE EXHIBITION

The Exhibition Committee of the Ontario Rose Society decided at a meeting on Friday, June 15th, to hold the 1917 Rose Exhibition at the Foresters Hall, College St., Toronto, during the first week of July. There will be twenty-three amateur and professional classes this year with a first and second prize in each class. The culture of roses in Ontario has increased wonderfully in the last three or four years. In the 1916 Exhibition there were a number of entries, by rose enthusiasts living outside of the immediate vicinity of Toronto. It is hoped that there will be a great many more entries this year. The 1917 Exhibition promises to be the largest, most beautiful and most successful showing of roses ever made by the Rose Society. Sir Edmund Osler, Dr. Allen Baines, Mrs. Caspar Clark, Mr. Charles Temple and Mrs. Graeme Adam, are among the many well known patrons and patronesses of the Annual Rose Exhibition of the Ontario Society. Mrs. Graeme Adam, 160 St. George Street, is the President, and Miss Marion Armour, 103 Avenue Road, the Secretary of the Society, both of Toronto. Any inquiries in regard to this year's Exhibition should be addressed to Miss Armour.

Little Ruth—"Mamma, do dogs get married?" Mamma—"Certainly not, my dear." Little Ruth—"Then what right has Prince to growl at Fannie when they are eating breakfast?"

"Bettie," said a mother to her 4 year old daughter, "did you peel your apple as I told you to before eating it?" "Yes mamma," replied Betie. "And what did you do with the peeling?" asked her mother. "Oh, replied the little miss, "I ate it."

SPORT SILKS.

Points About the Gorgeous New Designs Just Out.

Brilliancy of coloring and surprising combinations characterize the new sport silks which have just arrived in the big stores.

Plaids, stripes and spots of various sizes and great diversity of shapes are found among these silks, and the vivid, ofttimes rather startling color schemes are most interesting. The comparatively few plain varieties are supposed to be chiefly for evening wear, although even these may be used in combination, the coat of one color and the skirt of another for street wear. In fact, they are not supposed to appear alone for the evening, but to be used in pairs at least, according to the latest rumors of spring fashions.

Heavy shantung pongees seem to be leading in favor, with georgette crapes and satins following closely after. All of them have the great advantage this year of being woven on broad looms, which, of course, spells both ease and economy for the dressmaker.

Robin's egg blue is scheduled as a leader on this spring's color calendar, and a highly successful season is expected for it. Some of the combinations in which it is destined to play a part are certainly surprising, to put it mildly. They do not sound exactly attractive in words, perhaps; but, contrary to all expectations, they really do look well when put together properly.

"Be careful never to throw them at each other," warns an expert. Then he proceeds to gather up handfuls of soft satin, the robin's egg blue in one hand and violet in the other. After the first start of surprise one realizes, as he twists them deftly together, that they really do harmonize after all, that the effect is beautiful. Another of the new combinations he shows is robin's egg blue and brass, far less startling than the first and quite pleasing. Chartreuse georgette crape also and this same robin's egg blue combine very well indeed, and the effect is particularly pleasing for evening wear.

Mr. O. C. Inman, 320 Harcourt St., Sturgeon Creek, Winnipeg, for many years a well-known man in the business life of Canada, says: "I was terribly rundown and weak. I had no appetite, and I suffered if I forced myself to eat. My nerves were in a bad way, and my sleep very disturbed. Everything pointed to a nervous breakdown. Then I got Dr. Cassell's Tablets. The first result was that I could sleep, and then my health rapidly improved. It was really astonishing how my strength and fitness came back."

Mr. Inman is now in England, managing the well known firm of A. W. Inman and Son, Printers and Publishers, Leeds. Letters will reach him there.

Railway Fact and Fiction.

Anyone with a knowledge of railway matters could make an amusing compilation of the blunders about railways which are constantly being committed by our popular novelists. None of these ingenious ladies and gentlemen would seem ever to travel by train or consult a time-table, since they invariably cause their heroes and heroines to journey to places by railways which do not serve them. Occasionally one does come across a drawing of a locomotive which looks as though it might do duty on a British main line, but the type with fixed coupling rod is more usual, and when the draughtsman designs a locomotive reminiscent of the practice of one company, the coaches always belong to another line. And what no artist has ever been able to depict correctly is a railway signal. The wrong side of the semaphore arm is invariably shown towards the advancing train—we have even seen this mistake on a poster issued by a railway company—and when a distant arm is shown on the same post as a home signal, the former is generally at the top. Any observant reader can amuse himself with hundreds of similar blunders by writers and artists.—Railway Gazette, London.

Modern Roumania.

Roumania is as large as England, with a population equal to that of England a century and a quarter ago. The present war seeks to add to it Roumanian lands and Roumanian peoples equal to Scotland, and, like Scotland, a region of pine-clad hills. Of cultivated land—as rich as any in the world, so that this small kingdom stands fifth among the nations for wheat and fifth for wine—Roumania has twenty million acres. Some ten million acres are divided into little peasant holdings of less than ten acres each; some ten millions into great estates averaging over two thousand acres, worked by laborers not far from serfdom, while the owners spend their money lavishly in Bucharest or Paris. So it comes that in no other country in Europe is the chasm so wide between the few very wealthy landowners—less than five thousand families — and the great bulk of the people who till the soil.

Boys to Play the National Game

ONE of the most unusual developments in Canadian sport in recent years has been the growth of the interest taken by the men in the boys playing lacrosse. There was a time when no one paid any attention to the lads who played the national game, and it was only the senior teams that received encouragement and newspaper space. The change came about very slowly. The first step was taken when juvenile teams were organized for boys under 18 years of age, and a campaign was undertaken to attract attention to these series.

It was on a cold January day in 1914 that this campaign was launched at a meeting held in Toronto, when a little group of enthusiasts met together to discuss the special needs of Canada's most characteristic sport. One thing was apparent to all of them: lacrosse could not continue to wobble along in a haphazard sort of way. The game had to be studied, developed, and fostered like any other sport that was succeeding on an organized basis. The gravest defect in the existing system was the lack of any organizations to develop material for the senior teams. It will be remembered that when this meeting was held nobody dreamt of war, and the chief excitement that the nation had before it was annual finals in Rugby, hockey, and lacrosse. Just at that time there was a great deal of lacrosse being played in Ontario, British Columbia, and the Prairie Provinces, but the critics of the game were beginning to realize that better lacrosse would be played in all the leagues if the boys were trained in the fine points of the game while they were younger. Here and there throughout Canada juvenile lacrosse leagues existed, and they had secured good results. More than one championship team ascribed its good record to the fact that the men on it had played together for almost a decade. What a juvenile team could do in one town it could do in many other towns. Accordingly it was argued that a series of leagues for boys would provide a supply of recruits for the older teams. The movement was launched on a large scale, and everywhere it proved successful.

Little did the men who started the widespread campaign to push forward juvenile lacrosse think that in less than four years' time the boys of Canada would have the national game practically to themselves. When war was declared in 1914, the various leagues for older players had reached the semi-finals, and the schedules were finished out. During the first year of the war the people in our Empire were trying to live up to the motto "Business as usual," which has since been execrated and forgotten. Sport went on without any interruption, and it was not until the end of 1915 that the men behind the different games began to discontinue the activities of the various leagues. One by one the organizations suspended operations until after the war, just doing enough to keep themselves alive. In fact, the only game that is now going on in Canada under the same conditions as before the war is professional baseball. Rugby has been put aside completely except in the minor leagues, and there is less than half the hockey there was four winters ago. Lacrosse did not suspend because the leagues decided to do so. The players, all of whom were fine virile young Canadians, made the decision for themselves.

During the summer of 1915, it was a common thing to hear the players say: "We will finish out this season and then go to the war." They were as good as their word, as the records of the following year showed. In the spring of 1916 the secretary of the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association reported that sixty per cent. of the players registered during the following season had put on khaki. This year it was stated that over a thousand men who had been playing the game in the province when the war broke out were with the colors.

Those figures indicate why lacrosse, a game that used to be played almost altogether by older fellows, has passed entirely into the hands of the boys for the time being. It is interesting to note how the leagues have met the situation. It used to be that junior lacrosse was played by youths under twenty-one years of age and juvenile lacrosse by lads of seventeen and under. Now a great change has come about. The boys under nineteen are the juniors, those under sixteen are juveniles, and those under fourteen have been made into special series known as "midgets." For the midgets, a number of men who used to play lacrosse have donated medals in order that the boys may feel that they are struggling for something worth having. Most Canadians want to see the national game restored to a proper place in the sporting life of the Dominion after the war. For that reason the boys have been organized, and they will be ready to give good exhibitions of the science of the gutted stick by the time the heroes in khaki come back from Europe.

Less Home Work.

Hereafter, according to the new by-law, teachers in Toronto will be permitted to give home work only to those children who are in classes from the junior third and higher. Third grade students must be able to do their homework in twenty minutes, fourth grade in thirty minutes, and fifth grade in forty minutes. When conditions warrant it the principals may segregate the sexes in the higher grades.

ROCHON, QUE., March 2nd, 1915.

"I have received the most wonderful benefit from taking "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered for years from Rheumatism and change of life, and I took every remedy obtainable without results. I tried "Fruit-a-tives" and it was the only medicine that really did me good. Now I am entirely well—the Rheumatism has disappeared, and the terrible pains in my body are all gone. A Valuable Bird.

An extremely helpful friend of ours, when bird friends are few, is the rough-legged hawk. Unfortunately this bird is little known or valued. It breeds in Canada between the months of April and October, and then goes South for the winter. It may be identified afield by its broad wings, its large size, and the broad dark band which crosses its breast and under side of its wings. It is comparatively tame. The name rough-legged or bare-footed is made appropriate by the bird's full-feathered legs and feet. The coloration of the American roughleg and its more western sub-species, the ferruginous roughleg, varies from the type here described to almost solid black. In this darker phase the roughleg is commonly called the black hawk. On such good authority as that of Dr. A. K. Fisher, under whose direction the U. S. Biological Survey made extensive field observations of this bird's feeding habits, it is stated: 'The roughleg is one of man's most important allies against meadow mice, feeding on little else. Other mice, rabbits, and grown squirrels are taken occasionally."

Scissors Hints.

If you have a sharp pair of scissors in your kitchen here are things they will help you do:

When cutting meat, celery, marshmallows, pimento for salads, or carrots, cabbage, onions, parsley for soups, nothing could be more useful than a pair of scissors. This is also true when cutting citron, lemon or orange peel or taffy candy.

Rhubarb sauce will have a better color and flavor if the stalks are cut with scissors instead of a knife, as the scissors do not remove the skin.

A fowl is more easily disjointed with scissors than a knife. The work is done more quickly, and there is no splintering of the bones.

These are only a few of the uses for scissors in the kitchen, besides the ordinary use of cutting strings and shelf papers.

Decorated by King.

A Canadian woman with much experience as a military nurse, now serving her country overseas, is Matron Elizabeth Russell, formerly of Hamilton, now in charge of the Cleveden Hospital at Taplow, England. Miss Russell, who is a daughter of Dr. James Russell of Hamilton, and a sister of Mr. John Russell, the Canadian artist, was trained in the Presbyterian Hospital at New York, and between wars has filled various posts in that institution. She served in the Spanish-American war and made nine trips to the Philippines. A little later she was with the Canadian troops in South Africa, where she served for fifteen months. At the outbreak of the European war she first served in charge of Mrs. Whitney's hospital at Juilly. But preferring to be with the Canadians she transferred and was engaged at Moore Barracks before going to Taplow. Matron Russell was recently decorated by the King at Buckingham Palace with the Royal Red Cross of the First Class. Besides possessing much executive ability she has tact and a genial way which wins favor with the soldiers.

A Canadian Honored.

A special cable despatch to The World from London a few days ago says: "Major Campbell Stuart, of the Canadian army, has been appointed Second Military Attache of the British Embassy in Washington. Major Stuart has done much valuable work in London of a semi-diplomatic character, and has just returned from Rome, where he had a personal interview with the Pope. He displayed signal ability in arranging a welcome from all parties in Ireland for the Irish-Canadian battalion, which he accompanied on its successful tour of that country. Of Ulster descent himself, his Canadian upbringing has imbued him with democratic principles, and he has made himself acceptable to the leaders of the Irish Nationalist party."

Mutes as Farmers.

In future agricultural training is to figure more largely in the curriculum of the Ontario School for the Deaf, Belleville. Upon the recommendation of the Minister of Education the Government of Ontario has purchased a farm adjacent to the school, and the increased acreage will not only be used to supply the institution, but also to increase the facilities for agricultural education.

Occupied Land.

The occupied land in Canada, according to the last census, was 63,422,338 acres, an increase of 4,843,344 in ten years.

WEALTH FROM MUNITIONS.

Enormous Amount of Money Comes to Canada From Europe.

The immensity of Canada's achievements in supplying the Empire with munitions is strikingly shown in a statement just issued to the press by Mr. J. W. Flavelle, chairman of the Imperial Munitions Board:

"Mr. J. W. Flavelle, chairman of the Imperial Munitions Board, has furnished the Minister of Finance with a statement showing the extent of the business in munitions which has been built up in Canada. The figures are very striking as evidencing both the industrial power of Canada and the extent to which the present favorable financial and commercial conditions have been created by this gigantic business.

The total value of orders received by the Board is $850,000,000, which is equal to the entire international trade of Canada (imports and exports) of 1912. The value of munitions shipped to April 30th was $470,000,000, the total disbursements to April 30th being $542,000,000. The number of employes is divided as follows: Headquarters staff, 800; inspection, 4,000; workers, direct and indirect, 250,000 to 300,000. Six hundred and thirty factories, chemical and loading plants are in operation in carrying out the orders of the Board. The products covered by these orders include shells and their component parts, which represent an immense tonnage of steel, brass, copper, lead, etc. They include propellants and fuses, also ships, locomotives, and cars. An idea of the financial magnitude of the business is obtained from the fact that the cash disbursements for March were $41,000,000 and for April $43,000,000.

Towards the financing of this immense business which means so much to the Empire from the standpoint of the successful prosecution of the war and to our troops at the front as well as to the prosperity of Canada, the Dominion Government has contributed $200,000,000 as a loan to the Imperial Treasury and arranged with the Canadian banks for advances aggregating $100,000,000. Of the co-operation of the Finance Department in providing these huge sums Mr. Flavelle says: "The advances made were not only of great value in themselves in assisting the Treasury to meet the ever present problem of exchange, but they gave evidence of so earnest a desire on the part of the Government and people of Canada to co-operate and assist in bearing the burdens of the war that to an increasing extent those who had the control of the placing of this business turned to Canada first because they desired to give as much business to us as possible, and second because they knew they would receive immediate and tangible assistance in paying for the products ordered. Before orders are placed by the Ministry of Munitions the Treasury's approval of the transaction has to be secured; you can understand, therefore, what a powerful ally we had in securing the business in the knowledge which the Treasury possessed that they would secure sustained support from the Government of Canada in rendering assistance in providing funds to meet these added

Help Canada Maintain Her Financial Freedom !

Do Your Share towards Financing the War with Canadian Savings Rather than with Outside Capital.

THE problem of meeting the enormous cost of this war is twofold. Not only must Canada get the money—most of it, of course, as loans—but she must get as much of it as possible here in Canada.

We can carry the war-debt if the bulk of the interest goes to Canadians, and so is used again in the country's development. But it will be a serious matter for us if a large proportion of the interest has to be sent outside the Dominion.

For the sake of our own and our children's future this drain on our resources must be avoided! Canada's financial freedom can and must be maintained! An average saving of 15 cents a day, invested by each man, woman and child in Canada in War Savings Certificates, would enable us to carry the whole cost of the war. To approach this average, hard work, thrift, self-denial and sacrifice are required of every citizen.

For each $21.50 you lend the Government now, you will receive $25.00 in three years—or you can get your money back at any time. Certificates are issued in denominations of $25, $50 and $100, and may be purchased at any Bank or Money Order Post Office. 22

Loss At Court House.

The burning of the Court House has been and is a serious matter, and the committee you appointed have to the best of their ability proceeded as far as possible. The chairman who is in a better position than I am with regard to these matters, will transmit to you all the particulars.

The proceeds of insurance have been placed in the Bank, and as a result of the efforts of the chairman of the Finance Committee, on the most favorable terms possible.

It is gratifying to note the rebuilding of the Quaker Oats manufacturing concern, and the County recognize with the City the benefits that are bound to accrue from such operations.

You will have to provide funds by way of debenture issue for the building of bridges and reconstruction of the Court House. There is now $2,550.00 of debenture proceeds in the Bank as well as insurance proceeds and it depends on the attitude of the City as to whether they will pay over their insurance proceeds as intimated by Mr. Moore. If not, more funds will have to be raised but the City's interest will lessen and more rental come to the County which will be a revenue to offset the extra debenture liquidation.

The chairman of the Finance Committee will, no doubt, have all figures prepared for your approval to meet the various obligations from a current standpoint which I presume will meet with such approval.

The chairman of the House of Refuge Committee will of necessity present to you a special report that will, as is characteristic of him, be in accordance with careful and proper procedure.

You will again have the opportunity of listening to the municipal advisor sent here by the Government with regard to the County Road System and I trust you will weigh well the matter having in view the great responsibilities that now devolve upon us.

Alludes to the War.

I refer to this horrible war that has been forced upon the British Empire and her Allies, and I sincerely trust that Canada will, as far as possible, set aside all contentions and differences of opinion, as well as assume no responsibilities that will in any way neutralize the successful conduct of the war. We need the best brains, we need the wealth, we need the conservation as well as the production of all necessaries. We have furnished considerable man power and will furnish more and all combined will be a strong factor towards the culmination of democracy, and I would solicit the influence and efforts of all to bring about the same in a way that anything contrary will be stamped out for all time to come.

The Council have undertaken no bridge building that could be avoided for the present due to the scarcity of material and help and the chairman of the Roads and Bridges, will before the year is out, provide information covering the year's operations.

In conclusion, I sincerely give expression to my feelings of gratification for the voluntary assistance you have given me in my duties as Warden, and I take this opportunity of placing on record my appreciation of your confidence in electing me to such position without opposition.

I am sure all join in recognizing the hand of kind Providence in the prospects for the year, and pray that the same Hand will continue to guide the Entente Allies in their endeavors to have right prevail.

MAXWELL BROWN, Warden.

Referred to Committee.

The Warden's address was referred to a committee composed of Messrs. Squire, Rye, Griffith, Clark, and Mathison on a motion of Messrs. Walsh and McKee.

Communications.

The Rev. J. H. Slimon of the Baptist Church, Lakefield, wrote the council in reference to a grant to the ministers who held Divine Service at the House of Refuge. He pointed out that on a previous occasion he had been renumerated for his services but of late he had not received any pay County Clerk Elliot stated that he had no authority to pay such a grant without a resolution of the council and the matter was referred to the Board.

Mr. J. G. Fowler claimed that he had been damaged by a new bridge which had caused the water to recede onto his property during the spring. This was referred to the Roads and Bridges committee.

The Ontario Bridge Company wrote the Council regarding the necessity of properly painting the bridges of the County and advising that they be allowed to do the work.

Here Are Ways of Saving Food Scraps From Waste.

DON'T FILL THE GARBAGE CAN

How to Utilize Leftover Bits of Nourishment That Are Usually Considered Too Small to Fuss With—Clever Combinations by an Expert.

Trimmings From Salad Greens.—Stew in water or stock, together with a little pickle spice, add rice to thicken (three tablespoonfuls to a quart of vegetable stock) and at the end of the cooking strain and season with a bouillon cube. A real blood tonic. Use cress in the same way; also mince any leftover sprigs and sprinkle over steak or fish.

Cauliflower Leaves.—Cook twice as long as the cauliflower, chop, season as greens and use to supplement the flower itself.

Celery Tips.—Spread on papers, dry, store in jars and use for seasoning. Use fresh as a basis for soup, a garnish for salad or meats and for frying in a thin batter.

Odds and Ends of Fruit.—Use in fruit salads, fruit gelatins, fruit cups, fruit soups, fruit beverages, tapiocas, compotes of rice and farina and, in case of juicy berries, as raspberries, strawberries and so on; use in drinks and cornstarch puddings.

Leftover Fish.—Use in croquettes with rice or potato, creamed as a sauce over brown rice, in salads with celery, cabbage, radishes or shredded romaine, cress of lettuce or use to season cream of fish soup or for stuffing peppers, tomatoes, cucumbers or cabbage leaves.

Bits of Cheese and Rinds.—Put cheese scraps through food chopper and use in Welsh rabbit, cheese sauce for fish, rice or hominy; in vegetable scallops, creamed potatoes (German style), cheese croquettes, etc.; grate cheese from rinds and use on spaghetti, in creamed vegetables, to make cheese sticks, cheese biscuits, cheese pie crusts for fruit pies, cheese toast, and serve with stock vegetable soups.

Bacon, Ham and Sausage Fat.—Use for sauteing when savory tastes are desired, in seasoning spaghetti, savory rice, savory hominy, browning meat for stews or casseroles, in shortening gingerbread or spicy cakes of dark color, in making spice and ginger cookies and in shortening quick grain breads or the crusts for meat, vegetable or fish pies.

Chicken Fat.—Try out and use in making "three minute pie crust," cakes, cookies and for sauteing.

Leftover Vegetables.—Peas, carrots, lima or string beans, corn, asparagus, radishes, green peppers, cabbage, cauliflower, use alone or in any combination in soups either in stock or with bouillon cubes, salads or scallops; turnips, carrots, beets, lima beans, potatoes, etc., use in vegetable hash, soups, casseroles, with ham or smoked fish; stewed or scalloped tomatoes use in casseroles with baked beans, in soups to make aspic, in sauces and bread or cereal dressings.

Cooked Cereals.—Use in stock pot, soups, scallops, meat, fish and vegetable loaves, griddle cakes, waffles, muffins, puddings and croquettes.

MILITARY BILL SURE TO CARRY

SIR WILFRID'S AMENDMENT WILL NOT REUNITE FOLLOWERS.

OTTAWA, June 19. — That Sir Wilfrid Laurier's proposal for a referendum upon the question of compulsory military service will fail in its object of uniting the two opposing wings of his party and will be defeated in the Commons by the normal Government majority, is the opinion here. It will not, it is asserted, have the support of such conscriptionist Liberals as F. F. Pardee, Hugh Guthrie, James Douglas, W. A. Buchanan, Champagne of Battleford, Robert Cruise, F. B. Carvell, McCraney of Saskatoon, A. K. McLean, and Dr. Michael Clark, and it will not, it is confidently believed, result in the defection of more than a dozen French-speaking Conservatives. On the main motion the majority for the bill will be increased.

In advocating a referendum, Sir Wilfrid Laurier is hampered by events under his own administration. When a referendum was taken upon the question of prohibition a large majority against prohibition was recorded in Quebec. Sir Wilfrid therefore justified his refusal to enact prohibitory legislation on the ground that one province had declared emphatically against it. It is believed that the only referendum will be in the form of a general election.

Cords of Pulpwood Adrift in River

QUEBEC, June 19.—Extraordinarily heavy rains have caused floods in Beauce County. Lumber booms on the Chaudiere River have broken and thousands of cords of pulp wood are adrift in the St. Lawrence. One man and one woman are reported drowned.

BILLY SUNDAY QUITS NEW YORK

COUNTS CONVERTS BY THE THOUSANDS SINCE BEGINNING CAMPAIGN.

NEW YORK, June 19.—The Rev. William A. Sunday preached his farewell sermon in New York on Sunday night, and started for his home in Winona Lake, Indiana, yesterday, where the evangelist will take a few days' rest before going to the Pacific coast.

The free will offering up to ten o'clock last night totalled $114,000. Checks received will considerably increase this amount. All of the money will go to war charities, the Red Cross and the Y.M.C.A.

Mr. Sunday preached to more than 70,000 persons in three services Sunday in the Tabernacle. The total number of trail hitters at the three services was 7,228. This is believed to be more than double the number that have hit the trail in any one day in other cities in which Mr. Sunday has conducted such campaigns. The grand total of converts for the entire ten weeks was 98,264.

When Mr. Sunday had delivered his last word last evening most of the 25,000 persons in the Tabernacle jumped upon benches, cheered, applauded, waved hats and handkerchiefs and a mighty chorus of voices took up the shout, "Good-bye, Billy, God bless you." Many women and men wept.

WILL ENLIST RECRUITS FOR CANADIAN ENGINEERS

Corporals Baird and Thomson of the Queen's University Company, Canadian Engineers, are here for the purpose of recruiting for that corps. Any of our young men who have any inclination to enlist in this important branch of the service will find these two men at the Y.M.C.A. where all information will be given to applicants. They will also receive men who desire to join the Divisional Signal Corps.

POOR BLOOD AND WEAK NERVES

(By F. Raymond Ward, M. D.)

Lack of strength is about the first symptom of violation of the laws of health. There come nervousness, unsteady hands and limbs, skin eruptions, dizziness, sleeplessness, heart palpitation, and with the feeling that the lifeblood is being sapped comes complete prostration. In this condition the sufferer is indifferent to all things—and looks upon life with a gloomy, melancholic view.

It is given as a statistical fact that seven out of every ten people in the United States are suffering from nerve exhaustion, and of this number less than half realise it. They know that they have gloomy thoughts, a depression of mind, an impaired memory, dizziness and headache, wakeful nights and spells of extreme exhaustion, but they attribute it to any other cause but the right one. They feel languid, irritable and restless, the why and wherefore of which they cannot explain. They are suffering from nerve exhaustion, a condition which is undoubtedly the means of causing more misery and crushing more hopes than any other trouble that flesh is heir to.

Nervous exhaustion will not cure itself. The sufferer who thinks that nature alone will bring about a restoration of health is simply deluded by a false hope. He will realise that (if the power of realising is left him), when he becomes a hopeless victim to one of the many diseases which follow in its path.

Those suffering from nerve exhaustion or loss of energy as a result of overwork, mental worry or violation of nature's laws are quickly restored to sound health by Dr. Ward's special treatments. Dr. Ward's office is located at 79 Niagara Square, Buffalo, N. Y., which is right opposite the McKinley Monument. His office hours are Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays 9 A. M. to 9 P. M., and Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays 9 A. M. to 6 P. M. Sundays 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. Consultation and examination is always without charge.

Church Welcomes Its New Pastor

RECEPTION HELD AT ST. ANDREW'S FOR REV. AND MRS. ROWAND.

A large audience filled the lecture hall of St. Andrew's Church last night, the occasion being a congregational welcome to Rev. and Mrs. W. L. H. Rowand, the new occupants of the Manse and all joined in a hearty reception which must have made Mr. and Mrs. Rowand feel at home in their new surroundings. Members and adherents were presented to the pastor and his wife by Mrs. J. John. Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., presided and an excellent musical program was rendered. The first number was a violin selection, heartily encored, by a boy of tender years, a pupil of Miss Laura Logan, and who with true artistic modesty wished his name withheld. Mr. Walter Evans rendered two solos in his usual pleasing style.

Rev. T. H. Mitchell, who waited over for the reception, made a brief address in which he spoke highly of his successor, of whom he said he had heard good reports in every place Mr. and Mrs. Rowand had ever been. Mr. Rowand thanked the congregation for their kindly welcome and outlined the work which he has in mind on behalf of the church.

Dainty refreshments were served by the ladies and the social gathering broke up at a late hour after a pleasant session.

Stratford Council for Conscription

STRATFORD, June 19.—By a unanimous standing vote, the City Council voted to have Mayor Monteith, Ald. Ballantyne (Liberal) and Ald. Wright (Conservative) draft and immediately despatch to Sir Robert Borden, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. H. B. Morphy, M.P., a resolution declaring that Council stands firmly behind the conscription bill, the defeat of which would be a disaster to Canada, as Ald. Wright put it.

THE MEN OF TOMMORROW

If humanity is to advance, if the future is to be better than the present the men of tomorrow must be better than the men of today. The boys of today are the men of tomorrow. What we do with and for the youth of today determines the character of the future. The future will be what they make it but they will be what we make them. In their hands they hold the future but while they are boys they are in our hands to mold as plastic clay in the hands of a potter. By neglecting the youth of today we heavily discount the prosperity of the future by developing them we not only bless them but generations not yet born. For the boys of today are not only the men of tomorrow but the parents of a still more remote generation.

The most valuable product of any generation is a new better generation of men to succeed it. The chief business of each generation is to produce and train its successors. And progress is possible only as each generation learns how to train its youth more wisely than its predecessor.

Now the greatest youth-molding boy-training institution in Canada is the Y.M.C.A. Molding and training youth—that is its definite purpose its peculiar business. Its task is to make the better man of tomorrow. It is to create the future better citizen, the future better administrator.

When you give to this organization you make an investment from which there will be an income every year for many years to come. Your donation of today helps to make the many tomorrows increasingly better in the higher development of the boys of today who will be the men of tomorrow.

"There's a Reason"

WOULD LIKE TO KNOW BUT ANYONE CAN GUESS

Who is the alderman who handles the "property" affairs of the town all right, but who failed to handle his car well enough to keep on the beaten path while passing through a swamp on a return trip from Peterboro? This worthy autoist got stuck on the roadside and along with a couple of ladies was forced to spend the night in the car, and was pulled out high and dry the following morning by a farmer and team of horses. Who was the autoist that "undertakes" to attend to a great deal of business matters (and as a rule does all things well) but who took all night to get home from a trip to Bobcaygeon? He also was partial to swamps and got off the beaten path.—Lindsay Warder.

ROBLIN IS ILL

May Not Be Able To Stand Strain of Trial

WINNIPEG, June 19. The summer assizes opened here to-day, and it is possible the cases of Sir Rodmond Roblin, Hon. G. R. Coldwell and Hon James H. Howden will be called a second time. Sir Rodmond is still far from strong and not able to stand the strain of a trial. The attorney-general and counsel in the case refused to make any statement as to whether the prosecution is to be dropped.

LINDSAY LOSES CHIEF JAS. BELL OF FIRE DEPT.

RESIGNS TO FOLLOW UP A MORE LUCRATIVE OCCUPATION.

Fire Chief Jas. Bell, for many years associated with Lindsay's fire department, has sent in his resignaton to the chairman of town property asking that he be relieved from duty as soon as possible.

Chief Bell for various reasons cannot be induced to remain in this position and says he is out of the business for good. He will remain until a successor is appointed, whom he will give all instructions possible in regard to the working of the place

In the resignation of Chief Bell from this department citizens fully realize that they are losing one of the best fire chiefs Lndsay ever had and few towns in Ontario can boast of one better. It may be difficult to get a person equal to him in this position. Mr. Bell will still reside in Lindsay, where he will follow up a more lucrative occupation.

Chief Bell is well known in Peterborough and the citizens will remember how he quickly arrived in Peterborough when the S. O. S. was sent out at the Quaker Oats fire.

PEAKS 11,000 FEET HIGH

The wonderful icefields and eleven-thousand-feet-high peaks of the Purcell Range, which the construction of the Kootenay Central Branch of the Canadian Pacific Railway rendered accessible to mountain climbers, are described and illustrated by Mr. C. W. Stone in the Canadian Alpine Journal. The approach to Mount Ethelbert, a peak which arrests the attention at Spillimacheen Station, seems almost to have overwhelmed the writer with its beauty. "Before us," he says, "lay a lake of exquisite blue color resting like a jewel in a setting between two rugged peaks, which mirrored in the clear water, rose abruptly thousands of feet on either hand like grim guardians of a lovely treasure. Beyond the lake the lifted eyes rested on a terrace stretched across the valley like a giant curtain eighteen hundred feet above the lake, down whose verdant slopes two gleaming cascades traced their foaming course and filled the whole amphitheatre with the sounds of falling water. Still farther and higher in the background, great snow crests appeared, inscrutably looming down upon —

NOWHERE SAFE FROM LIGHTNING'S FLASHES

Not Foolish to be Afraid of Thunderstorms—Some Places Safer Than Others

The question is often asked as to the location of greatest safety during a thunderstorm. In this respect it may be said that there is no place or object in the path of a thunderstorm that is not liable to a stroke of lightning. Places or objects may be more or less liable to a stroke of lightning according to their relative exposure, etc., but no place in the path of a thunderstorm is to be considered as one upon which a stroke of lightning is not likely to fall.

The location of complete safety during a thunderstorm is, therefore, one in which, even though a stroke of lightning does fall upon it, no harm will come to the occupants. Such a location may be found only in a space entirely surrounded by a metal network, in a steel frame building, or in an underground chamber.

No Absolute Safety

With the exception of places similar to these three, there does not seem to be any place where absolute safety may be obtained. The next degree of safety is undoubtedly to be found in houses or other buildings which are protected by lightning rods, but, although the degree of safety which can be attained by using rods may be very high, the risk can not be entirely eliminated.

In the event of a stroke on an unprotected building there is considerable danger to life, but there is no doubt that an unprotected house is preferable to the open, under trees, or in unprotected out-buildings. When a stroke falls on an unprotected house sheltering a family of the average number of persons, the minimum chances of escape are 45 in 100. In all probability, however, the chances of escape are much greater than this.

Better Indoors

In 254 instances of casualties in unprotected houses which are given in these records, there were 117 cases of death and 137 cases of injury. From the same source it is found that in 153 cases of persons struck in open fields, 116 were killed and 37 were injured. In nine cases of persons struck near wire fences, eight were killed and one injured. It seems, therefore, that it is far better to take shelter in a house which is not protected against lightning than to take chances in the open, where everything is damp and hence the liability to shock or injury far greater than in a dry place.

IN BACKWARD CANADA

Quaint Ways and Costumes of Islands in St. Lawrence Gulf

A night's sail to the north of Prince Edward Island in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, one happens on the Magdalen Islands. Low-lying and scattered Amherst, Grindstone Entry, Alright, Coffin, Bryon and the Bird Rocks—a group of romance-filled islands which if they were better known would have visitors by the hundreds through the summer months. La Grande Demoiselle et La Petite Demoiselle are the two smoothly rounded combinations of mountain and cliff which together with sandbars, miles in length, form the chief landmarks of the approach.

Here in these islands, whose history dates back to the French discovery and possession of Canada, one happens on rare things—women in sunbonnets riding in carts, knitting in hand; berry-pickers, ready with a pleasant smile to have their pictures taken; hay-makers, whole family groups, the women and children all helping with the hay while the good weather lasts; little boys sailing toy boats that they themselves have modelled and fitted; men and women wearing homespun garments and homemade shoes of sealskin; basket makers and hookers of gay patterned [illegible]

Refused Sixpence a Week

"To save the committe from getting into disgrace by making the fabulous advance of three farthings a day to me at the age of seventy-eight, I much prefer to tighten my belt and to save them from further trouble." That was the sarcastic reply of a Dover, Eng., old-age pensioner to a committee which added sixpence a week to his pension.

To guard against pneumonia, keep yourself in the best physical condition, get all the fresh air you can, and keep your home well ventilated. If you become overheated at your work, take ample time to cool off gradually before going out in severe weather. Be careful of contracting any chill.

LEARN HOW TO SWIM

Good swimmers are drowned now and then, but most of the victims lose their lives because they are not able to swim. As between the swimmer and the non-swimmer the chances for escape in an emergency are as ten to one. The point of the important lesson is driven home with emphasis every summer, and still it apparently needs urging as much as it did twenty years ago. Most people seem to regard swimming not as an important accomplishment, but merely as an optional recreation, like golf, tennis or china painting. And yet any of us may be confronted at any time with a crisis that makes swimming an art more important for the moment than that of walking. The folly of the common neglect is heightened by the fact that it is an art as easily acquired as the ability to walk. And once acquired it is never lost.

AUTO MOTOR NOT ALL

Other Parts That Owners Need to Understand

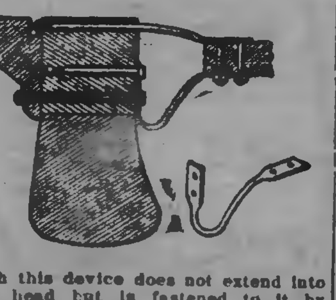
A writer on motor cars says: It has often been said that owners know too much about the motor, and their knowledge of it tends to remove their attention from the clutch gearset and the remainder of the power transmission system. We all like to work around machinery we know something about, but in the case of motor car owners, they should endeavor to learn more about the running gear and its care.

Universals, brakes, wheel bearings and many other parts not as accessible as the spark plugs, seem to be forgotten until something goes wrong with them. The owner does not wait for a bearing cap to fall off before he fills the crankcase with oil, and similarly he should not wait until there is excess play in the universal before it gets its supply of grease or graphite. It is difficult to keep universals well lubricated, even when the housing is periodically filled. These parts are just as important as the motor, and should receive just as much attention and at frequent intervals. There will be no buckling, due to end play in the propellor shaft assembly or clutch, if the parts are properly lubricated and kept.

ABSORBS SHOCK OF AXE

Device is Really a Shock Absorber For Axe Handles

A shock absorber for an ax has been designed, to minimize the vibrations which are felt in an ax handle when one is engaged in vigorous chopping. The handle of the implement fitted with this device does not extend into the head but is fastened to it by means of two short spring-steel rods. One of these is bolted to the upper edge of the wooden member and the other to the lower edge. The former extends through the head and is fastened by a nut; the latter describes a downward curve and is fastened to the head by two bolts. This gives the handle a resilient connection with the head without lessening the force of the latter's blow when it strikes into the wood.—Popular Mechanics.



"SPRING ONIONS": POET

Famous Police Court Rhymster of London, England

"Spring Onions," or to give him his full title, Mr. William "Spring" Onions, the police court poet, and a well known character in East London, died at Ratcliff. Mr. Onions, after making police court history with a "record" of 500 appearances, came under the influence of the Church Army, and from that time onward chose to appear periodically before a magistrate to "report progress," and record his spiritual pilgrimage in strange verse—a kind of spring song of his own composition.

SPORTING NEWS

IN THE BASEBALL WORLD

BASEBALL ALPHABET

G—stands for Grounder that tears o'er the lot;
It's a hard ball to get and is frequently "hot."
It plows up the earth like the very old Nick,
And if ever it hits you it makes you feel sick.

Whether you like it or not you've got to take off your hat to little Fred Maisel of the Yankees. His work at second base is steadily improving and he is developing into one of the stars of the game.

And, speaking of second-basemen, there's Pep Young, of the Tigers. Pep is proving that there is more than passing importance in his name.

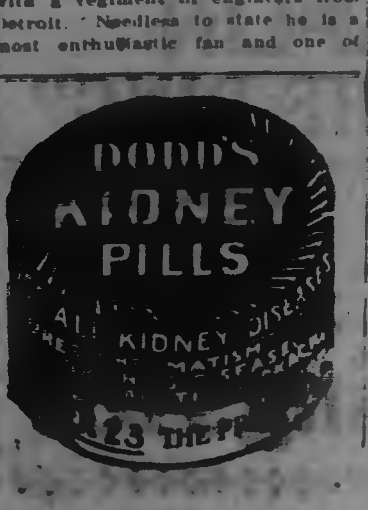
Hughie Jennings had better look to his pitching staff, and without delay. Jennings is casting about for good boxmen, and if he doesn't land one or two pretty soon he's going to find his famous team left somewhere near the dark, dank cellar.

Washington fans have been breathing a little easier since President Ban Johnson of the American League assured them that the Washington club would be retained in that league despite the fact that the attendance at the capital is so meager as to fail paying expenses. Johnson excuses Washington's lack of interest at the present time on the score of business pertaining to the war, and he is undoubtedly right. So the hopes of other cities of getting into the American League are dashed, for the present, at least.

Napoleon Lajoie, manager and second-baseman of the Toronto International League club, is all excited over that diamond-studded Maltese cross gift of the American League, for which he played many years. President Barrow of the International League, and Arthur A. Irwin, business manager of the Toronto club, are both very fond of Lajoie, and credit him with having done much for baseball in the Dominion.

Grouchy Gus says: "A good beating has made a real man out of many a fighter whose worst enemy in or out of the ring was conceit."

A more serious game than baseball is now ocupying the attention of Captain T. L. Huston part owner of the Yankees. Captain Huston is completing preparations to go to France with a regiment of engineers from Detroit. Needless to state he is a most enthusiastic fan and one of the most popular men identified with the game. Captain Huston saw service during the Spanish-American War as a railroad and bridge builder in Cuba and his ability as an engineer will be devoted to bringing victory to the allies.



POKER

Now poker is a funny game;
To win men must make faces
That make the other players think
Their hands are full of aces.

The poker face works many a time
And bluffing has its uses;
A man will always drop his hand—
Except when you hold deuces.

Carl Morris the heavyweight, is proving to be a great disappointment to many of his admirers. Every time he gets into the ring the bout turns out to be more of a wrestling match than a boxing contest. The recent exhibition betwwen Morris and Frank Moran in New York confirmed this statement. It was catch-as-catch-can boxing if ever there was such a thing. Science had no part in it and the spectators all enjoyed a good nap, as they got tired of seeing the men push each other around the ring. Morris just short of slugged his way to victory in this exhibition which was absolutely devoid of interest. Incidentally the fight fans were not a bit backward in letting their sentiments become known.

One of the greatest records for strike-outs was made on June 18, 1886 when Mark Baldwin pitching for the Duluth team of the Northwestern League fanned eighteen men. Of these twelve struck out one after the other. Baldwin later pitched for Chicago, Pittsburg and New York, then devoted himself to the practice of medicine in Pittsburg.

PUGILISTIC NEWS

1908.—Jack Johnson knocked out Charley Haghey in one round at Gloucester, Mass. This was the quickest victory ever achieved by the big black boxer, although he knocked out other men in the first round, among them Morris Harris, Peter Felix and Charley Cutler. Of Johnson's 69 battles, nearly one-third twenty-one, to be exact were won by the knock-out route. The average for Johnson's fights was six rounds. Twenty rounds was his limit. He fought twenty-round draws with Klondyke in 1901 and Hank Griffin in 1902, defeated George Gardner, Sam McVey, Pete Everett and Sandy Ferguson in twenty-round bouts, and lost to Marvin Hart in twenty at San Francisco in 1906.

1910.—Packey McFarland knocked out Goldswain in three rounds at New York.

1913.—Matt Brock defeated Tommy Houck in ten rounds at New York.

It is related that at Limburg Father Crotty, whom the Irish look upon as one of the heroes of the war, was asked by his German mentors if he would speak a word of authority to the Irish prisoners of war at mass to join the German army. Instead, he told them to keep their oaths to King George.

RID WEST OF GOPHERS

School Children Kill Great Numbers of These Rodents

Nine hundred schools in Saskatchewan reported the results of a gopher day, showing a total of 460,000 gophers destroyed, or an average of 510 to a school. Seven thousand six hundred and thirty-two were destroyed by 28 children at the Gutenburg school, in the Tramping Lake district. Christian Reiter, of this school, then 13 years of age, held the highest individual "score," having 2,092 gophers to his credit. To the Eyebrow Hill school went the credit of securing the second largest number of gophers for an individual competitor: Cecil Gettins, 15 years old, made short work of 1,811. Miss Madeline Ziegler, aged ten years, had a credit of 1,312 gophers, taking the third prize. In a gopher tail competition of the schools of the Province of Manitoba, the Lenore school took first prize with 1,642 tails. The greatest number of gophers shot by one individual was 286 by Walter Henry, then aged 14, of Rapid City.

The gopher is one of the species of the rodents; there may be no gophers in Eastern Canada, but there are plenty of the tribe in the form of rats and mice, that oft make havoc of growing grain crops in the field and in the barn. The Western farmers suffer far heavier losses from the gopher, on account of the grain lying out in the fields so long. The school children waged war against the destroyers of the needed grain for the multitudes in Europe. It was no child's play for the children to tramp the land to get the gopher, but persistent clever work to reduce the numbers of the farmers' enemy.

FREAK INVENTIONS

Tornado-Proof House that Turns on Pivot

Among the inventions that "one wonders who could be so mad as to wish to imitate," writes a correspondent, is a tornado-proof house. This is built on a pivot and every breeze turns it with its head to the wind. Then there is a noiseless alarm clock that yanks the sleeper's arm instead of ringing; another that starts a mechanism which throws him out of bed, a machine for roasting eggs as they are laid and a medicated nest egg.

Others are a device to be attached to locomotives which, when train robbers attack them, will squirt live steam in their faces. Goggles for chickens to prevent them from having their eyes pecked out; and an automatic hat-taker-off. This has springs and levers inside the crown of the hat, arranged so that if the wearer should have his hands full when he meets a lady he has but to bend his head forward, when the hat will take itself off with a polite sweep, returning to the head when its wearer moves his head backward.

PINE BLISTER RUST THREATENS CANADA

Deadly European Disease Ravages Country's Most Valuable Forests —Spreads Very Quickly

Those interested in the white pine of Canada and the United States have been greatly alarmed by the very serious outbreak of the white pine blister rust. This disease, which is due to a fungus similar to the wheat rust, has practically destroyed all the white pine and other five-leaved pines in Europe and is supposed to have been introduced into North America by the importation of infected nursery stock from Germany and Holland.

For its full development and propagation, this fungus requires two hosts. The summer propagation takes place on the leaves of currants and gooseberries and the winter stage on the white pine. The currants and gooseberries are infected by spores produced on the white pine in the spring. The disease rapidly develops on the leaves of the currants, and, in about two weeks, the under sides of the leaves are covered with yellowish-orange pustules from which the summer spores are liberated. These spores are carried by the wind to other currant and gooseberry leaves and the repetition of this several times during the summer results in the disease spreading rapidly over large areas.

Lurks For Year or More

Toward autumn, slender hornlike growths in which a different kind of spore is produced appear on the under side of leaves. These spores are carried to the white pine where, upon germination, they penetrate the soft tissues at the base of the bundle of needles and develop in the inner bark of the branch. Here the fungus may grow for a year or more before showing any outward indication of its presence.

Sooner or later, however, it produces a swelling in the infected parts, finally girdling the branches and causing all of the tree above the point of infection to die. Early in the spring, between the middle of April and the middle of June, small blisters appear on the swollen stems which, upon breaking, liberate the yellowish-orange spores enclosed. These infect the currants and gooseberries, but are incapable of transmitting the disease to other pines.

One Way to Fight

This habit of growth fortunately offers a means of combatting the disease through the elimination of the minor host. Although all the species of the currant family are subject to this disease, the black currant seems to be the most readily infected. The cost of destroying all plants of this family, aside from the loss to fruit-growers occasioned by this measure, would, of course, be large, but, in view of the value of the white pine in Canada, every effort should be exerted to save from destruction such a valuable asset as our white pine forests.

Unfortunately, the wild currant and the wild gooseberry act as minor hosts, hence the grave danger threatening our forests far from settled regions where the cultivated varieties perform the part of middleman. If our white pine is to be saved, prompt and vigorous measures must be adopted by the governments and the co-operation of lumbermen, horticulturists and foresters secured to combat this blight.

DO NOT MELT COINS

Why Gold Pieces Are Always "Doctored"

Why don't jewelers melt up $10 and $20 gold pieces in order to use the metal in the manufacture of gold jewelry? Indeed, gold pieces were used in the [illegible] by enterprising jewelers [illegible] too—until the practice was stopped in a very [illegible] but effective way. In those [illegible] jewelers bought enough $10 and $20 gold pieces for the work in hand. The gold was melted, the necessary alloys were added, and all manner of fine Etruscan work was turned out.

It was not long, however, before the Government began to wonder what was becoming to its gold pieces. The officials knew the people were not hoarding gold, so a quiet investigation took place. It was then discovered that the makers of gold jewelry were to blame. Having found the cause, it was not difficult for the officials to find a cure. They did it by "peppering" the coins with iridium. Resembling black emery in the crude state, iridium requires a heat of 3,542 degrees Fahrenheit to melt it. Gold, on the other hand, can be melted at 1,913 degrees Fahrenheit. It is easy to see, then, how the unsuspecting jeweler, melting up his gold pieces at the temperature required, got a large number of unmelted specks of iridium in his metal when it cooled. You can imagine his dismay when his analysis and deductions revealed that he had been trapped.

ROADS OF ANCIENT ROME

Through Hills and Over Rivers Went Imperial Highways

"The capitals of Syria and Egypt held a still superior rank in the empire; Antioch and Alexandria looked down with disdain on a crowd of dependent cities. . . . All these cities were connected with each other and with the capital by the public highways which, issuing from the Forum of Rome, traversed Italy, pervaded the provinces and were terminated only by the frontiers of Empire. . . The public roads were accurately divided by milestones and ran in a direct line from one city to another and with very little respect either of nature or private property. Mountains were perforated and bold arches thrown over the broadest and most rapid streams. . . Houses were everywhere erected at the distance only of five or six miles; each of them was constantly provided with forty horses and by the help of relays, it was easy to travel a hundred miles in a day along the Roman roads."—Gibbons.

EGG PRODUCTION

Great Opportunities Open to the Western Provinces

Canada has all the requisites for the production of a quantity of eggs far in excess of her own requirements, and with her favorable climatic conditions can, with proper care and attention, produce quality equal to the best in the world. Only the fringe of production possibilities has been touched up to the present. The Western provinces, with their volumes of cheap feed, are the natural home for the Canadian hen. The bulk of the surplus at the present time comes from the province of Ontario and Prince Edward Island. Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Quebec do not produce sufficient for their own requirements. They must do more; and there is now an opportunity for the Western provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta to demonstrate to Canada and the Empire as a whole what they can do in this connection in this great hour of trade expansion.—Canadian Thresherman.

Waste in Potatoes

Enormous waste is caused both in material and nutritive value by the peeling of potatoes before cooking them. There are thousands of pounds of potatoes wasted every day through the peelings. To be convinced of this it is only necessary to note the bulk of the peelings when you peel the potatoes before cooking. But this is not the only waste. When peeled potatoes are boiled in the ordinary way, there is a loss of nitrogenous and saline matter by extraction into the water, which does not occur when potatoes are boiled in their skins, or baked.

POINTS TO CONSIDER WHEN PURCHASING A RAILWAY TICKET

A Canadian Pacific Railway ticket does not represent merely a means of transportation between given points. It, in addition, provides the traveller with every comfort and convenience developed by modern railway science. "Safety First," with up-to-date equipment unexcelled dining service, palatial sleeping cars—in a word, everything that a railway can provide for the comfortable transportation of its passengers, including courtesy.

ICONS ARE RUSSIA'S DEVOTIONAL TABLETS

There is not a home in Russia that does not possess its icon, the devotional tablet in the mystic power of which every Russian believes. These icons vary in size, quality, and decoration, many of them being of great value and antiquity. There is an interesting collection of them at the Victoria and Albert Museum. The word "icon" is really the Latinized form of a Greek word signifying portrait.

The portrait may be small enough to carry in the pocket, or it may be life size, and the icons in the Russo-Greek churches are often of wonderful workmanship and costly design. The raised halos of the portrait figures are specially enriched with precious stones and in the case of the portraits of the Virgin the robes are encrusted with seed pearls and the fingers and neck adorned with jewels.

Some icons take the shape of a square or oblong box, set in metal thickly enamelled and hinged, which, when open, reveal figures of religious interest. Some curious examples of icons of finely carved horn are also to be found, the effect being most beautiful when hung in a position which admits of the light being seen through the carving. A small but exceedingly fine specimen of the horn icon is minutely carved with a series of episodes in connection with the birth of Christ. Its mounting is of silver-gilt, chased in a cord pattern, and the whole hangs from a suspensory bead. One may also come across the icon of carved boxwood, fitted for the sake of the protection of its fragile beauty into a case of precious metal, enamelled and studded with precious stones.

"OH! CECIL" AT THE GRAND

Jas. Dallas presented "Oh! Cecil," a bright and merry musical comedy in two acts, at the Grand Opera House last night. The scene depicted is The Busy Bee" Departmental Store, in which more song and dance and jest prevails than business, to the ruination of its English proprietor of recent importation, whose sensitiveness is continually shocked by American slang. The role of "Oh! Cecil" is cleverly sustained by Mr Vern Dushayne a talented impersonator, who starred with unqualified success in "Peg O' My Heart." Mr Dushayne is supported by a well balanced caste, the whole piece is replete with musical numbers and chorus and ballet. The company is closing a very successful touring season.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

McARTHUR—DWYER.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized this morning at St. Peter's Cathedral at six o'clock when Miss Margaret Dwyer, daughter of the late Joseph Dwyer, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. William McArthur, formerly of British Columbia, the Rev. Father Phelan officiating. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Joe, of Sarnia, looked pretty in a travelling suit of blue with hat to match and fox fur and had a bodice boquet of bridal roses. Miss Teresa Dwyer was her sister's bridesmaid, while Mr. Lonie McDonnell acted as best man.

After the nuptial mass breakfast was served at the home of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. McArthur left on the eight-ten train for Toronto and other points. On their return they will reside in Peterborough.

Clugston, C.A.M.C., of Base Hospital, Gerrard street, son of Mrs. James Clugston of Meaford. Rev. J. W. Woodside officiated. To the strains of the Wedding March, played by Mr. D'Alton McLaughlin, the bride entered on the arm of her uncle, Mr. A. MacGillivray. She was gowned in white silk crepe, with tulle veil caught with lily of the valley. Little Miss Verna Trumbell as flower girl was the only attendant. She wore a pretty frock of pink charmeuse, veiled with ninon. During the signing of the register Mr. G. C. McIntyre sang. Later in the evening the happy couple left for the Kawartha Lakes, the bride travelling in a suit of burnished gold bengaline cord, with black hat, trimmed with French flowers.

SUB LOSSES FOR PAST WEEK HEAVY AS ANY RECORDED

Admiralty However Are Not Pessimistic and Claim That Methods of Fighting Menace Are Constantly Increasing in Efficiency — Germans Shift Scene of Operation.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 20.—The weekly list of British losses in torpedoed ships, to be issued later, will show a number comparable to the worst week since the ruthless U-boat war began. Returns week by week show that U-boat activities run in waves, and it is assumed that this week is the crest of a period of super activity. The week includes one day regarded as a record for the number of vessels lost.

The situation, however, is not regarded over-pessimistically by naval men, who insist that the Admiralty's methods of fighting the subs are constantly growing in efficiency, and they point to the constantly increasing number of ships which escaped. The Germans are resorting to every possible method of circumventing patrols, and submarines frequently change the scene of their operations.

Rev. John Yorkston, retired Baptist minister, died suddenly at Tillsonburg, aged 71.

CANADIAN TO COMMAND C.E.F.

SIR ARTHUR CURRIE IS APPOINTED TO SUCCEED SIR JULIAN BYNG.

(By Stewart Lyon)

Canadian Headquarters in France, June 20.—Sir Arthur Currie, who has been acting commander of the Canadian Corps since Sir Julian Byng left, returned to headquarters this morning, having been authorised to take over the command. Sir Arthur came to France with the original Canadian overseas contingent as a brigadier, and has had a part in all the major engagements of the corps. His appointment greatly pleases the men in the trenches. He is the first Canadian to command the corps. His predecessors, Generals Alderson and Byng, were both Imperial officers of long service and distinction.

What Premier Borden Says

"The Young Men's Christian Association has amply demonstrated that it has done much, and can do more, to guide and keep young men in the right path. Thus it has a claim on the assistance of all right thinking men. Let it persevere in this good work and the highest reward will come in the accomplishment of good. This age is too greatly imbued with the spirit of the market place. The real greatness of any nation must be founded not upon material progress nor upon the accumulation of wealth, but on the character of its people. There is need to encourage the hearts and strengthen the hands of those who are endeavoring to make the Young Men's Christian Association what it ought to be — one of the greatest influences in the national life to guide and keep young men in the right path and to awaken their thoughts to higher ideals."

COUNTY COUNCILLORS ON TRIP TO HOUSE OF REFUGE

Morning Session Spent in Discussing Roads and Bridges and Warden's Address.

The County Council reassembled this morning and started in to discuss the money required for the different bridges ordered repaired during the previous session. Reeve Rye wanted considerable more repairs made to Payne's bridge than were recommended by the past council.

Reeve Walsh was not in favor of any further expenditure unless another inspection was made.

Reeve Rye was quite satisfied if the authority given to his predecessor was vested in him. He also drew attention to the condition of Dunlop's bridge which is between the two counties. He had ordered some repairs that were urgent after consulting with Mr. Baptie for Northumberland and Durham. The condition of Hogg's bridge was not satisfactory.

The North Monaghan representative took advantage of the occasion to refer to that part of the Warden's address which stated that "The rebuilding of the Quaker Oats plant would be of material benefit to the county." If this was so he asked that the county make a grant towards keeping the township roads in condition as the motor trucks of the company were drawing gravel over the township roads and tearing them up to a great extent.

It was finally left to a special committee of the Warden, the chairman of the Roads and Bridges Committee and Mr. Rye to inspect the Monaghan bridges at once.

Wants New Typewriter.

Mr B Morrow requests that a new typewriter be secured for his office and the matter was left with the chairman of the County Property Committee to deal with.

The Warden's Address.

The report of the Special Committee appointed to consider the Warden's address was as follows:

Your committee joins with the Warden in his expression of gratitude at the prospects of an abundant harvest particularly in this year when so much depends upon a large production upon the farm to aid the great cause in which we are engaged.

We agree that so far as possible county projects should be postponed so that every effort may be put forth to bring a speedy and successful termination of the present war.

The repairs of the Court House will no doubt receive full consideration at the present session as the work requires immediate attention, the want of a Court Room and offices for the officials being much felt and funds should be borrowed if necessary in order to complete the work in a successful manner.

In view of existing legislation the adoption of a county road system cannot be long postponed and we trust

GEN. HAIG PRAISES COURAGE AND ENDURANCE OF BRITISH TROOPS

Gives Encouraging Report of Operations for Past Five Months—Casualties Decrease Since Enemy Has Been Forced Into Retreat—More Open Fighting in Prospect.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 20. — Sir Douglas Haig has forwarded to the War Office a report fully covering the operations from December 18th to the present time. Speaking of the outstanding features of the five months' fighting, he says: "Despite the unusual severity of the weather, the winter campaign was conducted to a successful issue under most trying and arduous conditions. The activity of our battle front was maintained without a break from the conclusion of last year's offensive to the commencement of the present operations. The successful accomplishment of this part of our general plan has already enabled us to realize no inconsiderable instalment of the fruits of the Somme battle and has gone far to open the road to their full achievement.

"The courage and endurance of our troops have carried them triumphantly through periods of particularly trying fighting in which they were subjected to a maximum of personal hardship and physical strength The ability with which the troops on the Ancre were handled by Gen. Gough, and farther south by Gen. Rawlinson, was admirable.

"The retreat to which the enemy was driven by our continued success reintroduced conditions approximating open fighting. Our casualties, which were exceptionally moderate throughout the operations on the Ancre, became exceptionally light during the period of retreat.

"Th prospect of a more general resumption of open fighting can be regarded with the greatest confidence."

MORE PRAISE FOR CANADA.

In concluding his report, Sir Douglas Haig states that the problem of transportation to the battle area and behind the lines could no have been solved but for the patriotic action of the British and Canadian railways, who gave heir locomotives, rolling stock, and even their tracks.

FIRST CHANCE TO VOLUNTEER

Lt.-Col. Walker has received a letter from Lt.-Col. Brown, G. S. O. of Military District No. 3 in which he points out the shortage of instructors there is likely to be when conscription comes into force. He asks Col. Walker to look up a number of likely men and induce them to join the local company of the C. E.F. as the men who volunteer will be the first selected for the positions as Non-Commissioned officers and instructors.

This is a grand opportunity and possibly the last chance to get in under the volunteer system. See Col. Walker at the Armories at once.

RUIN AND DEATH CAUSED BY EXPLOSION IN SMITH

Parts of Boiler in Trewern Cheese Factory Found Hundreds of Yards From Scene— Useful Life Ended in Death of John Irwin Chittick.

The residents of Smith Township will not recover for some time from the terrible fatality that visited Trewern Cheese Factory yesterday afternoon, in which John Irwin Chittick, the proprietor, lost his life.

The scene of the disaster was visited last night by hundreds of people from the township as well as the city where Mr. Chittick was well and favorably known. The splendid factory was nothing but a smoldering mass of ruins, and all along the road parts of broken machinery, pipe, splintered lumber and parts of the boiler gave mute evidence of the force of the explosion.

The dome of the boiler was lying about 125 yards down the Third Line to the south of the ruins of the factory, while the end of the boiler with the ends of the flues in, had been hurled into a field of rye across the way and had travelled for a distance of at least 300 yards.

The Accident.

Shortly before noon yesterday Mr. Chittick was in the factory with his assistant, Albert Carter, and after giving some instructions in regard to the handling of the milk, which was curdling in the vats, went into the boiler room. It was only a few seconds later that the explosion took place. Just what caused it is not known, but an overplus of pressure was the most likely one offered, as there was plenty of water on hand to supply the boiler. It was thought at first that low water in the boiler had been the cause.

Mr. Carter, who was in the vat room, heard the explosion, and soon was buried under a mass of debris, which fortunately for him did not prevent his getting through a door into the curing room, and from there he got out and at once proceeded to the south end of the building, and found his late employer lying dead, the body partially covered with stones and brick from the walls of the boiler room.

Mrs. Chittick soon arrived on the scene, and later on a few of the neighbors, and after some difficulty the body was got out. It was almost impossible to identify the remains owing to the crushing the body had received.

Fire Starts.

No sooner had the body been removed to the house than fire broke out in the walls of the factory, and as they had been filled with sawdust and other inflammable material it was almost impossible for the bucket brigade to do anything, and in a short time the famous factory and its contents were being devoured by the fiery element.

The wind was from the south, and it was not long before everything was consumed. Mr. W. G. Fowler, who lives just across the way, was one of the first on the scene after the explosion, and was horrified at the extent of the damage. He and a few neighbors kept the fire from spreading to the wood piles which were at the east side of the factory.

The Loss.

The loss of Trewern chees factory to the Township of Smith will be a very serious one, not only by the death of Mr. Chittick, but as an industry of the community that will be hard to replace. Mr. Chittick as a cheesemaker had made a reputation among the buyers of the Peterborough Cheese Board for making a high grade of cheese, and Trewern was always among the first factories to be selected. In the factory was stored over four hundred cheese, all of it ready for shipment, having been disposed of in the last three sales.

The building and contents were insured, but to what extent is not known.

John Irwin Chittick.

The late John Irwin Chittick was born in Bobcaygeon about 55 years ago, and for the greater part of his life had been interested in the dairy business. He moved to Smith about seventeen years ago, and had, with the assistance of Mrs. Chittick and the family, worked both the farm and cheese factory.

The deceased is survived by his wife, one sister, Mrs. J. R. Purdy, of Washington, D.C., and two sons, Gunner John Irwin Chittick, who has been in France since the first contingent of Royal Canadian Horse Artillery went to the front in the fall of 1914, and Robert Clare Chittick, who works the farm and lives

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 20, 1917

CIVIC GRANTS TO THE BANDS.

THE 57TH REGIMENT BAND give their usual concerts in Victoria Park Friday evenings, but so far this season the Tuesday night concerts usually given by the Salvation Army Band are missing. The latter entertainments, always so popular, will not be resumed until the City Council does something in the way of a grant.

When the aldermen prepared the estimates for the next financial year, they set aside $600 for the purpose of making the usual yearly grants to the two bands, but that is all that has been done so far. Neither has received any civic aid, according to the records, but the 57th must have received private assurance of a grant, as that organization is giving concerts according to the schedule of former years.

Adjutant McElhiney wrote the Council some time ago saying that if the city would make a grant to his band, the money would be turned over to some patriotic fund and that the usual concerts would be given. This communication was read and "received" by he aldermen, and there the matter was allowed to rest. The Salvationists have so far given no concerts in the park, as they do not wish to establish a precedent. They feel that if they did put on the weekly entertainments they would be expected to do so for all time and that no further civic aid would ever be given them.

The money for band grants has been set aside. No one objects to some substantial recognition of the services of the 57th Band, which is one of the most valuable assets of the city as an advertising medium. Objections to a grant to the Salvation Army Band have been heard, based on the claim that it is a sectarian organization. If, say these objectors, this band is subsidized by the city, every church choir in Peterborough can claim a grant with as much reason.

The cases are not at all parallel. The Salvation Band cannot be regarded as belonging to any particular denomination. No church choir, so far as heard from, is in the habit of giving public entertainments in the park or on the street corners. The Salvation Band, too, is always available for church parades, for which service no charge is made. Secret societies, when they march to church for their annual service, are always headed by this musical organization, and next Sunday this band will appear in the same capacity at the yearly memorial services of the Oddfellows in Little Lake Cemetery.

Last year the Salvation Band not only gave the usual concerts in the park, but held extra entertainments in the South Ward for the benefit of the people too far away to attend the regular affairs.

The band asks nothing for itself. Any money that the Council may see fit to grant will go to some of the many patriotic schemes now before the people, and it would only be a business policy for the aldermen to take some action at once.

SIR WILFRID AND CONSCRIPTION.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER insists that all consideration of the Military Service Bill be dropped and the question submitted to the people at once. What he wants is not a referendum, although it has been so called, but a plebiscite. The people are to be asked for a mandate authorizing Parliament to pass a conscription bill, the terms of which would not be made clear under such an arrangement. The principle involved would be the only issue.

Sir George Foster, in his reply to the leader of the Opposition, characterized his amendment as a "dilatory and miserable motion" that would result in nothing but delay. To follow the course laid out by the leader of the Opposition would throw the country into a turmoil without getting a final decision on the matter. No plebiscite taken under such circumstances could be regarded as an expression of the sentiments of the people. The alien and he slacker would have the right to vote. The soldiers, most of any interested in the issue, would have no voice in the question.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier says that if the people of Canada declare for conscription, he will undertake to say on behalf of his own province, that the French-Canadians will abide by the decision.

There is hardly a doubt that conscription would be defeated in Quebec, and, just as he did when a plebiscite was taken on prohibition soon after he was elected Premier, Sir Wilfrid would not feel bound by the majority vote on the ground that one province had declared against it.

Sir Wilfrid says that the voluntary system has failed in Quebec because the proper appeals have not been made to the people. He should be in a position to know, seeing that he himself has been somewhat lax in preaching recruiting in Quebec, as every time he appeared on the platform for that purpose he turned the gathering into a political campaign.

It is hard to understand the position taken by the leader of the Opposition. To delay the issue and embarrass the Government seems to be his only object. He could have had the referendum that he now asks for if he had accepted the invitation of the Premier to co-operate, as one of the conditions to which Sir Robert Borden agreed was that conscription would not be enforced until the new government was given a mandate from the people.

If Parliament was dissolved and a general election held, what would be the situation in the event of Sir Wilfrid's success at the polls? His return would mean a victory of the anti-conscriptionists, with whom he must be himself listed. Quebec would be as indifferent as ever to the duty of the hour, even if all the other provinces had voted for the military measure now before Parliament.

The man or the party that insists upon a referendum, or tacks to the bill such amendments as the conscription of wealth, is simply playing with the question and bidding for the support of the rabble of slackers and others who are afflicted with cold feet. The soldiers represent the best manhood in the country. They and their friends at home are for conscription, and the soldiers would not have a chance to vote if the question ever comes to a popular test.

The Military Service Bill will be carried in Parliament. There are Conservative members who will bolt their party when the vote is taken, but there are enough patriotic Liberals to step across and take the vacant places.

"WITH MALICE TOWARD NONE."

NO LIBERAL PAPER in Canada has more influence with the party and enjoys the respect of its opponents as does The Toronto Star. The Star is for conscription, for anything to win the war. It is opposed to the attitude taken by Sir Wilfrid Laurier on the Military Service Bill, and in a first page editorial last night says:

> The Star is opposed to a referendum on the issue of conscription, not because we fear it might result in an adverse vote, but because if we are to have government by referendum it should have been resorted to at the outset of the war, and it should have been taken on the question whether Parliament should carry the country into the war. But we didn't have it. Parliament, the whole country approving, engaged this country in the war, and declared we should stay in it to our last man and last dollar. It may be these words were not used by the Liberal members of the House, but similar pledges were repeatedly made to the world at large—made to our volunteer soldiers, which is still more important. What did they mean, these members of Parliament, Liberals as well as Conservatives? A referendum after 300,000 of Canada's sons had answered the country's call and a hundred thousand had shed their blood in upholding the cause which is our as well as theirs? Was this what their pledges meant.
> If any member on either side of the House believes Parliament is moribund we would appeal to him to say whether these pledges are moribund or whether one supreme obligation is still to be discharged by him, namely, to keep faith with them, although it be the last act in his political career. Parliament as it is at present constituted—made up of the members who now sit in it—is responsible along with the Government for the sending of our armies into this war. Are these members going to repudiate their pledges and withdraw Canada from the war as fast as our abandoned battalions are wiped out on the battlefield?
> The party aspect of the situation so far as Liberals are concerned has its national importance, and is, therefore, not to be ignored. The way out for English Liberals, who believe in conscription, is for their leaders to stand by their convictions (drawn off neither to the right nor the left) and preserve for the English portion of the Liberal party in Canada a rallying point around which it may gather when the issue is fought out, as it must be, throughout the Dominion sooner or later. These disuniting crises pass, and it will be as deplorable as it will be inexcusable if, when the skies clear, it turns out that the Liberal party has been irretrievably disrupted. The party lost large numbers of its members in 1911, but that loss was honorable to it, because being due to the party's adherence to conviction. But for the leaders of the party to increase the inevitable disunion in the party and in the country because they depart from or compromise ther convictions would be disgraceful instead of honorable to the party as was the case in 1911. Let the two wings of the Opposition, those who believe in conscription and those who do not, go their separate ways on the straight issue of conscription. The way out for the party and the way out for Canada are the self-same path of adherence to conviction, with malice toward none and charity for all.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

IT IS HARD TO BELIEVE that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is entitled to be classed with those who call themselves conscientious objectors.

Where Truth Is Needed.

(St. Thomas Times.)

Rev. Father Minehan of Toronto says that talk of a referendum on conscription is "simply buncombe. You don't take a referendum when a house catches fire," the worthy pastor said. We would like to see Father Minehan invade Quebec and scatter a few truths in that benighted province.

Posterity Must Share the Cost.

(Charleston News and Courier)

Making this generation pay the whole cost of the war may be good business, but making posterity pay some of it is not bad morals. It is posterity that will reap the chief benefit of a world made safe for democracy.

Exemption of the Married.

(Toronto Telegram)

June 11, 1917, is now legally recognised as the date after which no able-bodied man can marry himself out of his liability to military service. The date should be further back in history. Exemption from military service should not be lightly granted to able-bodied men who hastened to the matrimonial altar when other Canadians hurried to the battlefield via the recruiting office.

YOUR HORSE IS NOT AN AUTO

The society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has issued the following instructions for the care of horses during the hot weather, asking owners to remember that their animals are not automobiles but are possessed of the same feelings as themselves:

Don't overload the wagon.

Don't speed your horse.

Use well fitting, lightweight harness, loose fitting collars and open bridles.

On long hauls allow periods of rest in the shade.

At the first sign of exhaustion stop and bathe the animal's head and neck with cold water. In case of complete exhaustion or sunstroke, endeavor to get animal in shade, remove all harness except bridle and apply ice packs to top of head and neck. Packs can be made by wrapping cracked ice in piece of old blanket, feed bag or any material handy. If ice cannot be obtained pour cold water slowly over head, neck and shoulders from pail or hose. Care should be taken not to get water in ears of animal. Endeavor to keep animal in prostrate position, head slightly elevated, with folded blanket or other soft material underneath to prevent injury by thrashing around or struggling, and notify society and veterinary surgeon.

Allow a liberal quantity of clean water to drink, provided the horse be worked or exercised immediately after drinking.

Carry a pail and sponge to wash or swab the animal's nose, mouth and face frequently.

Give a warm bran mash on Wednesday nights in addition to the one given on Saturday nights.

Avoid up grades whenever possible.

Relieve harness pressure from sores, a pimple as large as a pinhead will soon develop into a large open area if not protected.

Collar and shoulder pads are advisable only when the collar is too large or in the case of a horse with a sore, when the pad is usel to relieve pressure. Pads cause friction, create heat and become moist from perspiration. Therefore they should be removed from the harness every night, the pressure surface washed with warm water and soap and hung out in the sun to dry before being again placed upon the animal. Supply two sets of pads for use on alternate days. If this is done sore conditions will be entirely prevented.

Feed properly; do not overfeed or underfeed; study the individual horse and determine just how much nourishment it requires to keep it in good serviceable condition and health.

The man who underfeeds his horse or saves on bedding, blankets, shoeing, or employs incompetent help in order to save money, practise a false economy which invariably results in weak, lame, sore and enfeebled animals.

Plenty of light, fresh air, good food, pure water and proper housing are as necessary to the horse as they are to the human being.

ONE WAY TO WORK FOR VICTORY

Save your dollars. Every little economy that you practise means more money for the war. Twenty-one dollars and fifty cents will buy a $25 Government War Savings Certificate. Each certificate helps the man at the front. He is fighting and suffering for you. His days are days of denial and days of endurance. He has no comforts and enjoys no luxuries. Have you the right to be extravagant, to be wasteful, to be luxurious? Make your days of denial. Give your thoughts to the war. Practise true economy in the purchase of essentials, but prohibit indulgence in all commodities that have no war value. You can work every day for victory by practising thrift and controlling expenditures. Have you the right to shirk any more than the man in the firing line. Indeed, are you not under an additional obligation to him as well as to your country? Save your money and put it in war Certificates that will help the fighting man who is fighting your battles.

Valuable

One evening a pan handler sidled up to William Collier as the player was walking around to the theatre and addressed him thus:

"Sir, I began life poor and in hard luck. I—"

"Don't say anything more, my man," interrupted Collier, as he slipped the man a quarter. "It's worth money to learn how well you have held your own."

He Won

An Irishman, passing a shop where a notice was displayed saying that everything was sold by the yard, thought he would play a joke on the shopman, so he entered the shop and asked for a yard of milk. The shopman, not in the least taken aback, dipped his fingers in a bowl of milk and drew a line a yard long on the counter. Pat, not wishing to be caught in his own trap, asked the price.

"Sixpence," said the shopman.

"All right, sorr," said Pat. "Roll it up; I'll take it.

MASON'S MELODIES

Some men for carnage loudly holler, but when they're taxed an extra dollar to see the nation through, they straightaway hold an angry session and talk of tyrants and oppression until the air is blue. The government they were berating because it stuck to watchful waiting, when they were hot for war. "Why doesn't Wilson go a-gunning," they asked, "and set the kaiser running? What is he waiting for? For battle we are simply spoiling, the blood in our blue veins is boiling, we blush with deepest shame, because our country fiddle-faddles, and hesitates and stalls and straddles, while others play the game." Now we've set out to get the kaiser, that noxious little early riser, and getting him takes men; if we would put the Germans under, the country needs all kinds of plunder, to buy a club and gun. Our coin we should be gladly digging, to buy the necessary rigging, and most of us are glad; but some who used to whoop and holler, when called upon to cough a dollar, look mighty glum and sad. Oh, when the days of strife are over, and once again we are in clover, we won't forget these gents, who wished in crimson blood to wallow, but looked disgusted, wan and hollow, when asked for 50 cents.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review:—

In Monday's issue of your paper there was an item to the effect that Capt. Dodds of Peterborough had been given authority to recruit a draft to reinforce the 38th Battalion. The paragraph also stated that Capt. Dodds had been seventeen months at the front and had enlisted and gone overseas as a private.

If the item refers to Hurrell Dodds of Peterborough, the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association would like to ask Mr. Dodds, or anyone who wishes to reply on his behalf, for some information in regard to the following questions:—

In what battalion or unit, if any, did Capt. Dodds serve at the front?

If he was in the trenches at all, will he please state what unit he was with and how long he served there?

If he was in France at all, or, if not, why does he wear the active service button?

If it is not true that he joined the 57th quota of the 37th Battalion with the expectation of being Transport Sergeant that he went overseas as a sergeant with the 39th, that he remained in England as Assistant Sergeant-Major of the 39th for many months, that he came back to Canada once on leave and again last summer discharged to take a commission, that he was given a commission in the 235th Battalion, that he drew the pay of his rank of lieutenant with the 235th and then did not go overseas with his unit, and that in fact, he has been wearing the khaki for over two years without hearing a shot fired in real warfare, only at the rifle ranges.

Is it not true that he has been drawing pay from the Dominion Government in connection with his Customs House position while at the same time he has been drawing military pay?

In justice to the men who have been in the trenches the War Veteran feel that there should be some explanation to these things.

They mean greater safety in the Home. Surely something that interests you keenly!

Perhaps you have noticed these words and the notation, "No fire left when blown out," on our new "Silent Parlor" match boxes. The splints or sticks of all matches contained in these boxes have been impregnated or soaked in a chemical solution which renders them dead wood once they have been lighted and blown out, and the danger of FIRE from glowing matches is hereby reduced to the greatest minimum.

Phonograph Records.

Playing talking machine records with the finger nails was invented by a Chicago man. The record is placed over a penholder or pencil and supported by the left hand. Practice is required to obtain satisfactory results, and an old record should be used in practice, as the beginner will scratch and ruin many disks before he becomes expert.

SCHEIDEMANN'S CAREER.

Was Catspaw for the Kaiser and His Staff.

The name of Scheidemann has figured extensively in recent despatches, especially those dealing with German efforts to conclude a separate peace with Russia.

This Scheidemann is spoken of as a Socialist leader. So he is, or rather was, because there are many Socialists who believe that Philip Scheidemann has betrayed his party to the Hohenzollerns.

Recent news from Germany has indicated that the Kaiser and his war staff have been using Scheidemann as a catspaw, hoping that the Socialist's efforts could win the newly-made democracy over to a separate peace. It was Scheidemann who went recently to Denmark and Sweden to hold conferences with Russian officials; it was Scheidemann who went recently to Denmark and Sweden to hold conferences with Russian officials; it was Scheidemann who was given a high political post. It has become increasingly evident that every effort will be made to use Scheidemann's influence to hold the German masses together behind the junkers' war plans.

Scheidemann as had a strange career. Twenty-five years ago he still was an humble worker in a printing office. Then he suddenly broke forth in German journalism and his writings at once attracted attention. He became one of the leaders of the Social Democratic party, and was one of that organization's leaders in 1903, when the Socialists threatened to gain control of the Reichstag.

Bebel, the Socialist leader, advanced Scheidemann rapidly and the former printer became the chief counsellor and trusted agent of German Socialism. Scheidemann visited the United States in 1913 and delivered a series of lectures. These were not very successful, for the man displayed a personality that was not attractive, and he talked in a conservative manner that excited little sympathy from American workers.

When the war broke out Scheidemann, as leader of the Socialists, delivered them over entire to the German war party. He has consistently upheld the heavy war loans and the program of continued warfare. But Scheidemann's following is breaking away.

The radical Socialists no longer recognize his leadership, some fifty-one of the 109 Socialists in the Reichstag having formed an organization apart from that of the Social Democrats.

Wales and the Welsh.

Wales has plenty of coal, slate, scenery, and consonants, but very few surnames. If a Welsh schoolmaster should say, "Jones you may go home now for being a good boy," the whole school would quit.

People who are not called Jones are called Williams, or Evans, or Hughes, or Lloyd. They divide these names between them, and make the best of it. They do not follow the English method of taking their surnames from towns and villages. They felt that to do so would cut them off from the rest of mankind. Nobody could possibly call on Mrs. Llanymynech. Dislocation of the jaw is a great drawback to social intercourse.

The Welshman has the Celtic imagination. He never calls a spade a spade. When he has done describing this implement of agriculture, the stolid Englishman thinks he has been listening to a story from the "Arabian Nights." Hence the Englishman says the Welshman is an "untruther." He isn't really. Its only a difference of method. The Welshman means the truth, which is the main thing. His conscience is all right, if his story isn't.—Answers.

That Laid Him.

A policeman was called to quell a street row caused by a tipsy man, who wanted to fight the policeman or any other man in the town. In vain some of his friends tried to get him to go home quietly. He persisted in telling them all that he was a "brick" and would fight any man in the city. When the policeman arrived he still wanted to fight, saying:

"I am a brick."

"Yes," said the policeman, "but do you know what I was before I joined the force? I was a bricklayer."

Scandinavians May Enter War

THE Scandinavian situation is fast approaching a tragedy. Anyone who knows Scandinavia and its people must realize that the three little nations of Northern Europe may be dragged into the whirlpool of war at almost any moment.

But, after all, such a calamity would only be the second worst thing that could happen. The trouble is that war might not avert the worst possible fate, famine, which now seems to stare the Scandinavian people in the face.

Famine is a strong word, but the whole economic structure of Scandinavia is so interwoven with the commerce of other countries, already in the war, that a general starvation seems more than likely unless the U-boat puzzle is solved. Sweden is now almost without bread, and Norway and Denmark are little better off. Practically no grain has been imported into Sweden since the Russian revolution. Throughout the war Russia has had plenty of grain, and under the old regime Sweden was able to purchase large quantities of breadstuffs at Riga. The Swedes returned this favor by reselling grain to Germany, or its equivalent in foodstuffs raised on Swedish soil. Old Russia managed to export enough wheat, barley, and rye to keep Sweden supplied and help materially in provisioning Germany, although Russian peasants did not have enough to eat, and the Russian soldiers were starving in their trenches.

Since the revolution, brought about not by mismanagement of the war, of which the people knew little or nothing, but by hunger among the civilian population, Russia's crippled and inadequate transportation system has been devoted principally to the distribution of foodstuffs among the half-starved population of the country. But no grain has been shipped to the port of Riga or other Baltic ports for export.

With the granaries of Russia closed and Germany's U-boat campaign guided by a wierd intelligence which the world outside the Central Powers will not understand, Sweden is reduced to desperate straits, for Sweden does not raise anywhere nearly enough varied foodstuffs to feed itself. It is well enough to look at Sweden's annual trade tables and point to the enormous food materials exported from that country in normal times. If such figures meant anything at all now as indicative of reserve stock, Sweden could not be starved. The country could live on meat and fish varied with the very limited amounts of grain raised in the southern part of the country. But Sweden is sold out. The Germans have eaten up her livestock. The country has nothing much to subsist on except fish. The population will be bloated with scurvy unless the country can import grain in large quantities. Denmark is in exactly the same position, depending on the Western World for provisions, which may be cut off whenever it pleases the peevish war lords in Berlin to do so.

Norway may scrape through on half rations, for that country can communicate with America by a northerly route between Iceland and the Faroes. German U-boats have circled the Faroes, sinking trawlers and threatening merchantmen and laying for vessels plying between Archangel and English and French ports. But it would hardly be practicable for Germany to patrol the enormous stretches of the North Sea except perhaps during the season that the route north of the Baltic Peninsula to Archangel is open to navigation.

The food situation in Scandinavia has forced the Swedish Government to send to America Mr. Lagercrantz, former Minister to Washington, and one of Sweden's ablest diplomats. It is not unlikely that Mr. Lagercrantz comes as a representative of all the Scandinavian countries, inasmuch as they have pooled their interests in the handling of international questions during the war. He goes to Washington to plead with President Wilson to save Scandinavia from starvation. President Wilson has asked Congress for power to declare an embargo on the shipment of foodstuffs to neutral countries adjoining Germany in order to prevent trade with the enemy. Mr. Lagercrantz will ask the President to use this power leniently, if it is granted.

But the fate of Scandinavia hangs not on generous diplomatic agreement. It depends on Anglo-American success in drowning the U-boat pest in its own element. The best traditions of German markmanship and German diplomacy as practised since the war began were maintained when the three Swedish vessels, loaded with grain and bound from an English port to Sweden, were sunk with loss of life.

An embargo will not be enforced, it can be predicted, and Germany will continue to sink Swedish, Norwegian, and Danish ships, killing innocent sailors, and the inevitable result will be that Scandinavian patience will be exhausted. Norway's patience is already at an end, and the temper of the Swedes is not nearly so sunny as that of their cousins across the mountain range. Even if they are numerically weak, the Scandinavians can muster a fine stock of fighting men, and there is a limit to their good nature. When the Scandinavians have been goaded long enough by murder of their brothers on the high seas and by hunger at home, they will fight back. They will enter the war without illusion, if they do enter, knowing that they have nothing to gain, knowing that their only reward will be the maintaining of their self-respect. It is not in the nature of a proud, physically able and independent people to sit still under blows and starve like slaves because it suits the schema of a tyrant power to make them suffer.

MRS. MAY'S LETTER to WOMEN

More Proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieves Suffering.

Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered from a bad case of female ills. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended and I took about six bottles. It fixed me up all right. The common symptoms of such a condition—pain when walking, irritation, bearing down pains and backache, nervousness and disordered digestion—soon passed away. I look much better now than I did before, and I recommend the Compound every time for female troubles, as it did for me all it is claimed to do. You have my permission to publish this letter." Mrs. J. MAY, 3548 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

If you have any of the symptoms mentioned in Mrs. May's letter, remember what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for her, and try it yourself. It is a good old-fashioned medicine, made from roots and herbs, and it has helped countless numbers of women.

If you need special advice, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

DUTCH CITY BOMBED.

Historic City Tastes War After Long Peace.

It must have been a rude shock to the 7,000 inhabitants of the ancient Dutch city of Zierikzee when raiding airplanes dropped bombs upon it a few days ago, for having long forgotten its bloody experiences during the troublous times which marked the rise of the Dutch republic, it has for many years enjoyed the reputation of being one of the most tranquil spots on earth, one writer describing it as "utterly other-worldly, wholely peaceful, wholely restful."

Situated on the island of Schouwen, which with six other islands of the Scheudt and Maas delta comprise the Holland province of Zealand, Zierikzee is approached by a long canal which flows between beautiful green meadows. The people of the community are chiefly engaged in the salt industry, in trading and fishing.

Before the war there was also a somewhat lively traffic in tourists who were wont to frequent the spot not only on account of its rich historic associations, but also to see the interesting Stadhuis, an edifice begun in 1554, and the famous unfinished square tower of the minster, erection of which began 100 years earlier. Had the tower been completed in accordance with the plans (still preserved) of the famous architect Keldermans the Elder, it would have risen 100 feet higher than the Washington monument and been a rival of the Strasburg Cathedral tower in grace and symmetry.

Three medieval gates also attracted the globe-trotters who used to arrive here daily by the steamer plying from Middelburg, capital of the province, situated on the neighboring island of Walcheren. An interesting legend is told of one of these gates, the Nobel poort. It is supposed to stand as a fifteenth century memorial to two wealthy sisters, Anna and Maria, who wished to do something for their native city. As Anna was deformed the crooked tower of the gate stands as her monument, while Maria, tall and straight, erected a normal tower to commemorate her perfect physique.

Zierikzee has been the scene of two famous conflicts, the first in 1304 when Philip the Fair of France revenged himself for the defeat of the flower of his army beneath the walls of Courtrai two years previously, where the burghers of Ghent, Ypres, and Courtrai utterly routed the richly caparisoned and armored knights under Count Robert of Artois.

The second bloody event was the siege of the city in 1575-76. The great Admiral Boisot, he who had raised the siege of Leyden by navigating the 'drowned land' with his light fleet, lost his life in the futile attempt to drive off the investing army under the Spanish General Mondargon. The city continued to hold out against the enemy, however, until June, 1576, when traitors showed the Spaniards how they could wade across the encircling waters. The defenders fought with desperate fury, attacking the 1,700 Spaniards with boat hooks, knives, and flails, but all was of no avail.

Zierikzee lies 160 miles north-east of London in an airline across the North Sea.

Stout Person's Enemies.

Overeating is not necessarily gluttony, or anything approaching it. A small meal made up of certain foods will furnish more fuel—and more fat—to the body than on twice as large and less discreetly chosen. Foods vary vastly in fuel value; for instance, one pound of olive oil will stand sponsor for more surplus flesh than forty-five pounds of the lettuce on which we are likely to eat it. The stout person must learn that he has both friends and enemies at the table. His enemies are sugar, bread, cereal, deserts, butter, cream, olive oil, bacon, cocoa, and rich sauces. Among his best friends are lean meats, unsweetened fruits, and green foods. Yet, alas! most plump people seem stricken with an ardent love for their enemies. This may be good scripture, but it is mighty poor

Premier Ribot, Called the Rescuer of France, Is Brilliant Thinker

IT is a curious coincidence that Alexandre Ribot, the man who, more than a quarter of a century ago, signed, as Minister of Foreign Affairs, the first document of the Franco-Russian Alliance that gave back hope to France and who, a few days after this ceremony, delivered at Bapaume a public address in praise of Russia and the Emperor Alexander, should be made Minister of Foreign Affairs and Premier at the very moment when Russia has become a republic.

Alexandre Ribot was seventy-five years old on the seventh of last February.

He entered Parliament in 1878, at the age of thirty-six, and has sat there ever since as deputy or a Senator from his native department of Pas-de-Calais (one of the sections that has suffered most cruelly by the war), save for two years (1885-1887), when he temporarily lost the favor of his constituency by his persistent opposition to Jules Ferry, whom he combated "less virulently, but not less effectively" than did Clemenceau. He refused the portfolio of Commerce offered him by Gambetta (with whom he could not agree) in the "Grand Ministere" of 1881; but, in the early nineties he was successively Minister of Foreign Affairs (in the de Freycinet and Loubet cabinets), Minister of the Interior and Minister of Finance.

PREMIER RIBOT

He has been thrice Premier; the last time in 1914, shortly before the war, for only a few hours, the Chamber refusing a vote of confidence to the coalition ministry he had formed reluctantly, because his highly developed sense of civic duty did not permit him to refuse a call to service. Viviani succeeded where Ribot failed, and when Viviani, toward the end of August, 1914, readjusted his cabinet to the new war conditions, he called Ribot to replace Noulens in the ministry of finance, post of tremendous responsibility in which Viviani's successor, Briand, was very glad to retain him.

During a considerable portion of his service in Parliament, Ribot has been one of the leaders and at times the leader of the section of that body known as the Left Centre ("Centre Gauche"). He disapproved the Dreyfus agitation and opposed the expulsion of the religious orders and the separation of Church and State. For this reason and because he accepted as a young man a post in the magistracy of the Second Empire and displays a conservative respect for authority and property, he has frequently been eyed askance and treated as a reactionary by the extreme radical and anti-clerical elements, despite the fact that he pronounces the Republic the happy culmination of a century of evolution, and despite the further facts that he vigorously antagonized Boulangism, favored the reestablishment of divorce, advocated workingmen's pensions, defended the public schools and contributed materially to the cause of administrative decentralization. He has also been charged with excess of prudence. Thus the Advocate General Aubepin once observed caustically: "Ribot talks excellently; unfortunately you never know what his conclusion is." But even his adversaries are obliged to admit that he is "one of the biggest brains of Parliament, one of the few public men capable of compassing and penetrating a subject." It is an open secret that the politicians who brought about the resignation of Briand hoped to see Paul Painleve succeed to the premiership. But Painleve, though a personage of brilliant parts, is relatively new to politics and has not yet acquired the prestige demanded of a chief in time of war. Hence the appeal to Ribot.

Ribot realizes the classic conception of the conscript father. He comes very near being the tallest of the nation's legislators; and, thanks to this height, to a remarkably fine head (clean-cut features, deep-set eyes, bard-like white hair, and beard) and to a courtly bearing, he is altogether, taken all in all, the most impressive personality among them.

Morally speaking, likewise, Ribot is a commanding figure. His talent, his erudication, his integrity, and his dignity, combine to confer upon him a species of moral ascendency over his colleagues, which the political caricaturists are disposed to visualize by portraying him as "Le Pere Eternel" (vide the old masters) of parliamentarianism.

SLANG OF THE EAST.

Hindustani Words Adopted by English Tommy.

"Blighty," mysterious word that has come to us out of the East, has not come alone, says The Glasgow Weekly Herald. The man who interlards his more intimate conversation with colloquial idiom possesses, perhaps unknowingly, a varied vocabulary of Hindustani. In other words, much of our middle class slang has an Eastern origin, and has travelled westward with the troops. No doubt the zealous admirer of George Borrow will dispute this, and frame for himself a fanciful alternative theory of Gypsy agency and origin, but ordinary folks will not deny credit to Tommy Atkins for the pungent flavoring and picturesque coloring in so much of our careless everyday speech.

Without question the British soldier has a positive genius for studding his conversation with gems from Oriental and other vernaculars, and as the great war has afforded to many more thousands of our citizen soldiers the opportunity of "slinging the bat" as Kipling would say) in its proper environment, so we must anticipate for the future an even fuller Eastern flavor and a brighter Eastern color in our language. This, therefore, is by way of information and guidance to unfortunate munitions workers and home-keeping specialists, that they may not be unjustly handicapped in their understanding and free employment of after-the-war popular idiom.

The word "Blighty" shows us what to expect. "Wilayat" in Persian for "province," and in Hindustani "Bilaiti" means the province of the Sahibs, i.e., Britain. Now the word has come to signify in the spoken speech of Britishers everywhere, "that glorious place of peace where the wounded go." A happy choice! When the thoughts of exiles in India go straying they will cry, "Oh, when we get back to Bilaiti!" and when they long for their letters—sole link with home—they say, "Hasn't the Bilaiti dak come yet?" So we find that, in the East as in Flanders, the word "Blighty" arouses all the tender sentiment that is associated with the sacred word "Home."

But there are many Eastern words which have already crept into our speech (although not into our dictionaries) as "Blighty" did, and are in familiar use. When the Glasgow mother sees her child sickly looking she sometimes terms it "peelywaly." So, too, does the Indian ayah who nurses little Tommy Atkins in the cantonments, and there are words relating to the more intimate domestic occurrences which have been conveniently borrowed from the same source. A forward child is "cheeky" in Hindustani as in English, and when you playfully tell your troublesome little son to "hook it," you employ a phrase which would insure the precipitate retreat of any Hindu servant.

Floating Islands.

Many floating islands have, at various periods, been found voyaging on the Atlantic. These islands were originally part of the low-lying river banks, which broke away under stress of storm or flood and floated out to sea. The Orinoco, the Amazon, the La Plata, and other tropical rivers often send forth such pieces of their shores. Some of the bits of land are of large size, and carry animals, insects, and vegetation, even at times including trees, the roots of which serve to hold the land intact, while their branches and leaves serve as sails for the wind. Generally the waves break up these islands shortly after they put to sea, but sometimes, under favorable conditions, they travel long distances.

The Tale of Vimy.

A Toronto officer's experience at Vimy is described in a letter written by Lieut. Duke W. Rowat to his mother. Lieut. Rowat went overseas with the 75th Battalion, and is now attached to a machine gun section. He says in part:

"We had a terrible time getting to our jumping-off trench, for most of the approaches were crowded with troops all as eager as we were to get to their positions.

"I shall never forget the awful roar of our artillery and the effect of it on the already devastated country. It really was an inferno, for besides the shells, flares were going up in all directions, flares of all colors, which illuminated the early morning sky like a display of fireworks."

After telling of going over the parapet, he continues:

". . . the shells were dropping like rain and it behooves us to get out of this unhealthy area. . . we must have gone about 300 yards when to my great satisfaction I spied Sergeant Fleming with a number of our men. It appeared when the barrage opened he took hold of the men nearest him and led them over the parapet hoping, like myself, to run across the rest of the party.

"We finally reached our objective about 7 o'clock and placed our guns ready for the counter-attack. The next two days were passed under rather trying conditions for we had many blinding blizzards against which we had no protection, not even our overcoats. The shelling, too, was rather trying . . ."

Types With His Toes.

Among the National Service Volunteers is a man with no arms; but with his toes he works a typewriter with wonderful speed. I have seen him at work. He wears socks made of kid, with separate compartments, and the keys of his typewriter are slightly larger than ordinary ones. No, he was not a music-hall freak out of work, but just a wealthy landowner from the Midlands delighted at the chance of service.—Cassel's Saturday Journal.

An Ancient Seaport.

Kavala, the Grecian seaport, which has been frequently mentioned during the present war, was once known as Neapolis, and it was here that St. Paul landed on his way from Samothrace to Philippi, where there was a thriving colony of Christians to whom the Epistle to the Philippians was addressed. Prior to the beginning of the Christian era Neapolis was the seaport of Philippi, whose ruins are to be found some ten miles from shore, on the highway from Kavala to Thessaly. Here the fleet of Brutus and Cassius was at anchor during the famous conflict on the fields of Philippi in 42 B. C., when the assassinators of Julius Caesar met defeat at the hands of the legions commanded by Anthony and Octavius. Practically all that remains to connect ancient Neapolis with modern Kavala is a Roman aqueduct whose two-tier arches still convey water from Mount Pangeus to the town and citadel.

TWO WAYS TO ACQUIRE AN ESTATE

1—By saving, stinting, sacrificing; fighting the world at every turn, battling the blows of business competition; running the risk of fire, theft, embezzlement and misfortune; skimping your family, and yourself maybe, and standing only one chance in twenty of reaching Old Age without being dependent upon others for support.

2—By securing a Life Insurance Policy—A Policy which guarantees to pay your Beneficiary at your death, either a definite lump sum or an income every month as long as she lives—an income that is fixed, certain, regular, inalienable, unassailable, untaxable, and which cannot be lost, sold, dissipated, squandered or mortgaged.

TWO WAYS TO BEQUEATH AN ESTATE

1—By Testamentary Document: Requires an Executor. Must go through legal red tape at court. Requires court costs. May require months or years to settle. This kind of Will can be broken or set aside. Property is subject to attachment for debts of the deceased.

2—By Life Insurance (when the Beneficiary is named): Requires no executor or administrator—you are your own executor, your own administrator. No need of court proceedings—no expense of court costs. Does not require time to settle. This is a Will direct which no lawyer can break nor court set aside. Policy is not subject to attachment for debts of the deceased.

For the Men at the Front

Over three million copies of this hymn prayer have been sold, and it is sung every Sunday in thousands of churches. All the profits go to the Red Cross.

Lord God of Hosts, whose mighty hand
Dominion holds on sea and land,
In Peace and War Thy Will we see
Shaping the larger liberty.
Nations may rise and nations fall,
Thy Changeless Purpose rules them all.

When Death flies swift on wave or field,
Be Thou a sure defence and shield
Console and succour those who fall,
And help and hearten each and all!
O, hear a people's prayer for those
Who fearless face their country's foes!

For those who weak and broken lie,
In weariness and agony—
Great Healer, to their beds of pain
Come, touch, and make them whole again!
O, hear a people's prayers and bless
Thy servants in their hour of stress!

For those to whom the call shall come
We pray Thy tender welcome home.
The toil, the bitterness, all past,
We trust them to Thy love at last.
O, hear a people's prayers for all
Who, nobly striving, nobly fall!

To every stricken heart and home,
O, come! in tenderest pity, come!
To anxious souls who wait in fear,
Be Thou most wonderfully near!
And hear a people's prayers, for faith
To quicken life and conquer death!

For those who minister and heal,
And spend themselves, their skill, their zeal,
Renew their hearts with Christ-like faith,
And guard them from disease and death,
And in Thine own good time, Lord send Thy Peace on earth till Time shall end!

IRISH PRIEST IN PRISON CAMP

REFUSED TO URGE COMPATRIOTS TO JOIN KAISER'S ARMY.

LONDON, June 20.—Prof. Delmer, the Australian, who has recently returned from Berlin, where he had been detained since the war began, tells this story of a patriotic Irish priest:

"In the Irish prisoners' camp at Limburg," he said, "the Germans even tried to use a priest as their tool after Roger Casement had exhausted his arts in trying to persuade the men to desert the British flag. Father Crotty, whom I look upon as one of the heroes of the war, was asked by the Germans if he would speak a word of authority to the waverers at mass.

"'Men of Connaught,' said Father Crotty from the altar, 'the German Emperor wants you to fight on his side. Some people have been telling you it is the proper thing for you to do. I have been asked to tell you the same. But I was sent to you by his Holiness the Pope not to talk politics to you nor to mislead you, nor to be procurer for any King or Kaiser on earth, but to tell you in the name of God and the Holy Church what is good and right for men to do.

"'As a priest of God I tell you that it is your duty as good Catholics to keep the oaths you have taken and be loyal to your King—and that is all I have to say to you this day. May the grace of God rest and help you.'

"The German officer had to look on helpless and see his prey slipping through his fingers, but he dared not interrupt the priest in his holy office."

The arrest of Col. Grivas and other Greek officers concerned in a fight with the French cavalry patrol which occupied the Greek town of Larissa is reported.

GIVEN VERDICT FOR $225,000

TYPEWRITER OF 25 SUES AGED MILLIONAIRE FOR BREACH OF PROMISE.

NEW YORK, June 20—Miss Honora May O'Brien, the twenty-eight-year-old stenographer who sued John Bernard Manning, an eighty-five-year-old banker at 81 Riverside Drive, for $1,000,000 damages because he failed to keep his promise to marry her, was awarded $225,000 yesterday by the jury which had heard the trial of the case before Justice Cropsey in the Queens Supreme Court. The verdict was reached late Saturday night and returned sealed to the court. So far as could be learned from available records it was the largest sum ever awarded in a breach of promise action in America, the only two that approached it in size being in Pittsburg and Bangor, Me., where two young women were awarded $170,000 and $116,000 respectively.

Mr. Manning was in court when the verdict was opened and read, but Miss O'Brien was not. She was busy at her job as secretary to the manager of the New York Tribune Graphic, and was so little excited by the news when her brother James telephoned her that she had won that she didn't even strike the dollar key on her typewriter. Furthermore, Miss O'Brien in an interview given out through her attorney, Stephen C. Baldwin, said she intended to keep her job even after she collects the $225,000.

M. Jonnart, the High Commissioner representing France, Great Britain and Russia, has issued a proclamation to the Greeks which says: "Hellenes! The hour of reconciliation has arrived. Your destinies are closely associated with those of the protecting powers; your ideals are the same as theirs, your hopes are identical. We appeal to your good sense and patriotism."

Cheese Board Members Unanimous in Expression of Sympathy for Bereaved Family—21 5-16 is Highest Bid.

The Peterborough Cheese Board this morning passed a resolution of condolence to the family of the late Mr. Chittick. President Duff at the opening of the Board dwelt on the loss the community had sustained in the death of Mr. Chittick. It was a loss that the community would not get over for some time. The deceased was known to all the salesmen and buyers and was a man who was honorable in all his dealings. Personally Mr. Duff stated that he had lost one of his best friends.

The resolution was moved by Mr. Bullock and seconded by Mr. W. A. Anderson and was carried unanimously.

The president drew the attention to the fee of $1.50 which is now due and those factories and buyers that have an X opposite their names were requested to donate to the treasurer at once.

LIBERAL MEMBER IS AT ODDS WITH SIR WILFRID

Hugh Guthrie Insists on Coalition Goverment and Maintains Conscription Cannot be Enforced by Party Adminstration—Sir Sam Hughes' Speech.

OTTAWA, June 20.—Hugh Guthrie, Liberal member for South Wellington, deeply impressed the house of commons by an eloquent plea for the immediate formation of a coalition government. He declared the published correspondence between Sir Robert Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier plainly showed that there was no insuperable obstacle in the way of an agreement. They should and must come together, otherwise it would be the duty of the back benchers on both sides to take the matter into their own hands. To pass the conscription bill, in his opinion, would under present circumstances land us nowhere, because it could never be properly enforced by a government.

Hughes' Slashing Speech

Mr. Guthrie's speech was contributed to the adjourned debate on the second reading of the conscription bill. The debate was resumed by Lieut.-General Sir Sam Hughes, who earnestly supported the bill and opposed a referendum. Incidentally, he reviewed the causes which led to the fall down of the voluntary system and among these he said was the effort of the Prime Minister to slow down recruiting in response to a demand from the larger employers of labor. Sir Sam offered to read a confidential letter from Sir Robert Borden to himself, if the Prime Minister would release the veil of confidence. The Prime Minister would go no further than to say that Sir Sam could pursue his own course, and the letter was therefore, not read.

General Hughes was followed by Mr. Guthrie, who supported the bill and vigorously opposed the Laurier amendment calling for a referendum. He added, however, that the bill should not pass unless the government pledged itself to bring down at this session concurrent legislation for the conscription of wealth.

Every Day a Sabbath

Every day in the week is a Sabbath for some one. The Greeks observe Monday; the Persians, Tuesday; the Assyrians, Wednesday; the Egyptians, Thursday; the Turks, Friday; the Hebrews and several Christian sects, Saturday, and the remainder of the Christians, Sunday.

Flowers Most Fragrant

Flowers are more fragrant when the sun is not shining on them, according to a French scientist, because the oils that produce the perfume are forced out by the water pressure in the plant cells, and this is diminished by sunlight.

"Utility" in fowls does not mean "mongrelism" any more than "thoroughbred" means "standard-bred."

Sweet corn requires from 54 to 118 days from planting to reach the edible stage, depending on variety.

Cause of Engine Noise

A cause of engine noise sometimes not suspected by the motorist is the slapping of worn pistons, which, of course, is likely to occur only when the engine has been run a long time and the cylinders and pistons are considerably worn. The lateral thrust of the connecting rods rocks the pistons.

HISTORY OF PAPER

Introduced Into Europe About the Towlfth Century

From time to time, almost from the very earliest days of the war, there has arisen in many European countries a shortage of paper. Many factories, often unlooked for, have contributed to bring about this result, a scarcity of labor, the increased cost of shipping freights, and deficiency in the supply of the many and various ingredients which go to the making of paper in all its many forms of to-day.

The manufacture of paper was first introduced into Europe by the Moors, also about the twelfth century. They held a great part of spain in those days, and the industry quickly grew. It was good paper, "cloth parchment" it is styled in the laws of Alfonso of 1263, and well styled, for it was stout of substance, and could withstand hard use. At Xativa, Valenca and Toledo the industry grew and flourished until the fall of the Moorish power. And then came a change. The Christian conquerors were less skilled, and the great industry deteriorated, both as to quantity and quality. Meanwhile, however, the Arabs had brought their knowledge of the craft with them when they invaded Sicily. From Sicily paper making ultimately spread to Italy, and there it became a great industry. From Italy it extended to France and Germany.

And then the art reached England, and, in Wynkyn de Worde's "De Proprietatibus Rerum," printed in 1495, at Caxton's Press, we find mention of a paper mill at Stevenage, in Hertfordshire, kept by one John Tate. Master Spielman, with his ten years' license from Queen Elizabeth to make paper at Dartford, in Kent, is the next great figure in the paper trade, and so on to the establishment of the famous mills at Maidstone, where John Whatman turned out his paper in and around the year 1760. In 1799 came machinery, and from the small mill at Boxmoor, in Hertfordshire, where Fourdinier, the inventor, first set up his plant, the industry spread all over the country.

CROP OUTLOOK HAS NEVER BEEN BETTER, WEEKLY REPORT SAYS

Weather is Excellent for Growth and Roots, Grain and Pasture all Show the Effects.

Spring grains are coming forward in a most satisfactory way. Oats and barley have never looked better, and there has been a wonderful recovery of fall wheat.

Wet weather during the week has still further delayed the planting of late crops. On Sunday, the 10th inst., a precipitation varying from 2½ to 2 3-4 inches occurred in the Prince Edward-Frontenac region, and some newly planted corn and potatoes were injured.

Corn planted late, taking the Province over, has done better than the seed put in earlier in the season, some of which rotted in the hills and had to be replanted. There is some planting of corn and beans yet to be done, and considerable millet and buckwheat will yet be sown.

Potatoes have been slow in coming up, but the warmer weather of the week has given them a nice start, and most fields are looking encouraging.

Roots generally are looking well; many have some turnip land yet to sow.

Pastures.

Pastures have come along amazingly well of late, and at present look in first-class condition where not too closely cropped by live stock. Clover and timothy are growing rapidly, and an average yield of hay is now looked for, while earlier in the season a small return was anticipated.

Vegetables are coming along well. Early tomatoes are doing nicely, and there will be more grown than usual in both town and country.

Orchard fruits, with the exception of winter apples, will do fairly well, cherries and plums being in the lead. Many growers are through with the third spraying. Small fruits are described as being very promising.

Live Stock.

All classes of farm stock are in good general condition. The market for horses is improving, as they are not so plentiful, owing to heavy shipments to the West in the spring. Prices for cattle have had a downward tendency, beef animals selling at $11.50 a cwt. and dry cows 1½c lower. Good grade milch cows, however, can still command $100 for the dairy. Cattle on the grass are putting on flesh. Welland County reports Breeders' Clubs as exerting a most marked influence in encouraging farmers to take an interest in raising purebred stock.

Bacon hogs are a little down in value, although young pigs from six to eight weeks can hardly be got "at any reasonable price," as one representative puts it.

With most farmers all kinds of fodder except hay are practically exhausted, although here and there a little ensilage or other feed is yet in store.

The lush pastures are having a marked effect upon the milk flow, which was never fuller, taking the number of cows into consideration. 2,000 boxes of cheese were sold at Peterborough during the week for 20 3-4 cents a pound, while over 21c a pound was offered in Frontenac County. Dundas County reports that the price fixed for cheese at 21 3-4 cents a pound f.o.b. Montreal, nets the producers only 20½c a pound or a trifle over.

Labor.

Requests for help during the hoeing and harvest seasons are now bequiries for boys and men being about ing made to representatives, the enequally divided. Fruit and vegetable growers are also asking for assistance. The demand for help is being met in most cases.

STREET CARS COLLIDE.

Serious Accident Narrowly Averted on George Street.

What might have been a serious accident occurred on the Street Railway last evening at the North George street switch when a collision took place between the regular car and one of the "Hour Ride Cars" of the railway.

Fortunately no one was hurt, but the passengers got a severe shaking up as well as a considerable scare.

Something going wrong with the brake of car No. 30 was the cause of the collision. The excursion car will have to undergo some repairs before being put back on the route again.

Can the "Y" in Peterboro be Made Self-sustaining?

Perhaps it can. And always we are striving to make it so as much as is possible and desirable. Yet the question remains:

Will it be godd for our "Y." if it ever becomes independent of the assistance of Peterborough's citizens? War years are years of opportunity for the Y. M. C. A. to increase its service to men, and it must lean heavily on its friends.

Here are a few figures for the year 1916 showing from whence the local "Y." received its support last year:

	Senior	Junior	T'l.
Membership enrollment	325	350	675
Number taking physical training	55	272	327
Total monies received other than subscriptions (memberships, dormitories, etc.)..			$4211.00
Total monies expended for all purposes ...			8687.00
Showing a dependence on Peterborough's citizens of			$4476.00

Of the $8687 expended, $450 was for work among our Peerborough soldiers overseas, and much of the balance was devoted to soldiers being trained in Peterborough.

You must always remember that our "Y." is not run to make money, but to help young men and lads—to give them the kind and amount of help provided by no other class of institution—not even by home or church or school or club.

That young men of Peterborough appreciate the Y. M. C. A. is seen by the statement that the aggregate attendance in 1916 was 100,000, nearly one-third being visits from soldiers. If there were no "Y." Peterborough would be much poorer, and many a youth and lad would be furnished with nothing to take up slack hours in profitable ways. The Devil works most successfully in those communities where the "Y." is absent. Let us keep a short rein on Satan in Peterborough, for we have no boys for him to recruit.

The "Y." is really a citizens' affair. In all cities where a "Y." is found, its best citizens join gladly in keeping it up. It is interdenominational, and church men and men having no church affiliations support it. They say:

> "As a citizen I want to see our young men and lads built up in right ways, and the "Y." is doing just the kind of work I believe in. So the "Y.." can have some of my money."

We must never divorce the "Y." from public interest and public support.

To do so would be to cut off the mainspring of the "Y.'s" life and strength. Besides which there are hundreds of men who actually enjoy giving to the "Y.". It fills out their idea of Doing for Others—Prevents a man from becoming self-centred.

What they very rightly ask is:
Is the "Y." well managed
Is the money we give well used?
Is the "Y." doing its work well?
Are young men and boys being helped in right ways?

Citizens of Peterborough, we have given you figures as one answer. But there is also this:

The "Y." is open to you at all times to find out for yourself who attend it, what they get, who direct and teach.

Your stewards—the men who give their time heart and brain to the carrying on of the "Y.'s" work in Peterborough, are:

INTENSIVE FARMING

Farmers Must Try to Produce More on Eevry Acre

What is required of the farmers is more intensive farming. Each acre should produce more this year than it has ever produced before; each cow should produce more milk than ever before. No farmer should kill a calf until it is at least a month old, so that it will be valuable for food and its skin valuable for leather; moreover, more heifer calves should be raised so as to increase the dairies and provide for an increase in milk. The cattle have been killed in nearly all countries at war to an alarming extent, hence there will be a great scarcity of milk products and beef for

How Could He Live?

A curious delusion haunted Pascal, the noted French philosopher. Although the most brilliant genius and wit of his time, he always thought he saw a yawning abyss on his left hand.

In the crop of a pigeon shot in Wiltshire, Eng., were found 65 grains of corn, enough, if matured in the ground, to produce half a sack of wheat.

Give the colt plenty of exercise and get him used to having his feet handled.

Loose feathers, broken shells, etc., about the poultry house should be removed.

Isn't This True?

When you "feel mean"—dull, tired, nervous, bad digestion, no appetite—

Don't you find out, afterwards, that your bowels were not acting freely and naturally?

Due, of course, to a liver gone on a strike.

Take two or three pills—once. After that, only one, until your're all right.

NATURE IN PICTURE; CAMERA SHOOTS WELL

Wild Life May Furnish Many Interesting Snaps When Gun Cannot be Used Legally

A sportsman writes: While [illegible] through an old album some time [illegible] I was astonished to see [illegible] many different subjects represented. There were pictures taken during [illegible] trips, duck and partridge [illegible]ings, quiet camping and canoe[illegible] trips, and even long walks, and as I turned over page after page of photographs many pleasant and sometimes humorous reminiscences flooded my mind. The writer has not arrived at the stage where he would be willing to entirely put aside the gun for the camera but he considers the camera almost as important as the gun.

Squirrels and Birds

Much pleasure can be derived during closed seasons with a camera. If you are fortunate enough to possess one that could be used to photograph birds on the wing, you can enjoy yourself immensely by visiting the breeding grounds of shore birds and ducks. Even a picture of our friend the Red Squirrel chattering from a branch of a tree is a great addition to the album.

I have found that the vest pocket camera is ideal when you wish to go "light" as on account of its small size and its small bulk it is readily slipped into a pocket and forgotten until needed.

What He Missed

Once when paddling up a swampy creek in a canoe, I came suddenly upon a great blue Heron standing in the middle of the stream not over twenty feet away. What a beautiful picture it would have made the great blue grey bird standing there doubtless half asleep! Of course, as luck would have it, my camera was at the other end of the canoe, and it would be useless to attempt to reach it without disturbing the heron. However I had a try and as a result the magnificent bird rose and majestically winged his way across the marsh.

Once while on a tramp through the bush I heard a sound of rushing water. Upon investigation it proved to be a piece of "white water," a part of some river, of which I have forgotten the name, so swift that a canoe could not run its rapids. It was but the work of a moment, but I returned home with a picture of those rapids that was really beautiful.

A NEW BREED OF CATTLE

Dexters may be said to be a new breed of cattle, at least they are not largely known, which is shown by the fact that the 26 head which comprised an exhibit of this stock, at a fair in British Columbia, is said to be the largest of the breed ever shown in America. In fact, it is said that no Dexters or French-Canadians have ever been shown at any of the Eastern fairs. The Dexters while little known comparatively, are said by people who have studied their characteristics to be the coming cattle in British Columbia for the small farmer and the householder. They are a little black animal, seldom ranging more than 40 inches in height, docile, easily kept, hardy, and excellent milkers. They are also good beef cattle in spite of their smallness, the steers maturing early, and the meat usually commanding from two to three cents more per pound than other breeds.

DOUKHOBORS THRIVE

Strange Communists Make Good as Fruit Growers in British Columbia

The Doukhobors of British Columbia who are in a sort of "get together" movement are known as "The Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood," and it is claimed for them that they live in peace and contentment which is not enjoyed by any other sect of people in the world. M. Veregin claims they would all have been enormously wealthy had the Dominion Government, in 1907, not cancelled the 3,000 homesteads in the Yorkton district which the "community" had improved. The reason for this cancellation was because the brotherhood could not by reason of their religion, take the oaths necessary to be taken in obtaining a homestead.

The religion of the brotherhood prohibits them from partaking in war, and consequently no members ever enlisted. When they found it impossible to secure homesteads, the brotherhood decided to purchase 20,000 acres of orchard lands in British Columbia, and they have since about one-quarter of this land in a splendid state of cultivation, and have erected on it a jam factory, saw mills and other industries. About 20 car loads of fruit each year are shipped from the community.

Mr. Veregin has a proposition to have the fruits from his orchards sold in markets on the prairies which have previously been stocked with United States fruits. The crops from the Saskatchewan and Alberta brotherhood farms have been very good and the whole brotherhood is experiencing increasing prosperity.

No Railway Tickets

In the early days of railways in Great Britain the Chancellor of the Exchequer would not have been able to tax tickets, for the simple reason that they did not exist. The adventurous traveller who desired to journey by rail presented himself at the booking office about an hour before his train was due, and a clerk leisurely took down his name and address and other particulars, which he entered on a way bill like so much goods. He then gave him a receipt, and this constituted the contract note for his journey.

The average is less than 100 eggs per hen per year. First aim to make that average 120 eggs. Then go to 150 eggs. And, finally, if that is possible, reach the 200 egg record.

FORESTS OF GREAT BRITAIN

Many Canadians who have not visited Great Britain suppose that there is little woodland in the old country, and it is natural to think of the United Kingdom as cleared of timber and cultivated like a garden. In England and Wales there are nearly 2,000,000 acres of forest, and large areas of uncultivated land on which it is the intention to cultivate a growth of timber. There are, it is estimated, 2,500,000 acres of afforestable land in England and Wales. Of course most of the British forests are held for park and estate purposes. The area of Crown forests in England and Wales is only 65,766 acres, made up mostly of the historical estates of the Crown. —Canadian Forestry Journal.

HOW OLD IS YOUR BRAIN?

Mental Development is One True Test of Age

What is your mental age? It makes no difference what your actual age is, you have what is now known as a mental age—somewhere between six months and twenty-five years or thereabouts. Among school children it has long been noticed that some, much older than others in point of years, were a good distance behind them mentally. The idea was evolved that if children, imbeciles, and criminals could be given simple tests to determine exactly how far advanced they were mentally a good deal of trouble could be saved—in children by placing them in the proper grade at school, in imbeciles to determine exactly what would be best for their welfare, and in criminals to determine the responsibility in a moral way for their crimes. Thus if a criminal were found to be only eight years old mentally, then the proper way to treat him, no matter what his actual age happened to be, would be the way a boy eight years old committing the same crime would be treated.

Binet has a good many tests that have been modified by experience into what are known generally as the Binet tests. They run all the way from recognizing a hand waved in front of the eyes for a tiny infant to remembering sequences of numbers and describing the various articles seen in a picture but for a moment, for older ones.

It is the endeavor of some humane societies to have a law passed to test all criminals, and that, if found of small mental age, they shall not be punished in the ordinary way. It has also been suggested that our own Civil Service use these tests instead of the oftentimes absurd examinations now used. Results from testing criminals have been startling and peculiar. In a great many cases grown men and women have not gone higher than ten or twelve years in mental age. In the case of children the tests have indicated other things besides their mental age—they have indicated the general vocation for which the child is best adapted.

Three things will insure success on the average farm, namely: Cows, Alfalfa, and Cream Checks. If a farmer gets the first two and looks after them properly the last will come naturally.

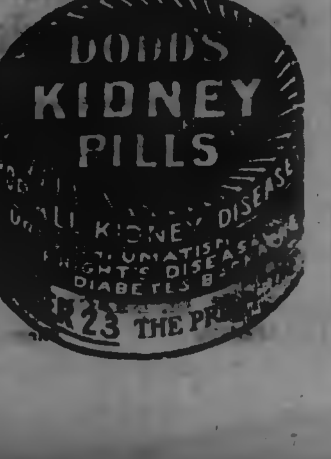
Four of the teams are now tied up with three wins and three losses. Tonight the Allies meet the King Pins and promises to be a fast game.

One great drawback to the popularity of the inevitable is its refusal to make concessions.

The Papal Nuncio at Madrid has reported to the Pope that Spain's entry into the war on the side of the allies is now very likely.



DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

OLE OLSON'S NERVE

He has the greatest nerve in baseball, this bird.

Nothing discourages him. No bonehead play is too rank, no error too inexcusable to make him duck his head.

There is no star in baseball so great but Ole can give him some advice and in addition he is a pretty good ball player.

He's Ivan "Ole" Olson, shortstop of the erstwhile champions of the National league and former Cleveland player.

There was a lot of talk around Brooklyn this spring about releasing Olson. His performances in the world series were not regarded with the most kindly feeling by Brooklyn fans and they were not slow in letting Ebbets and Robinson know that it meant nothing in their lives if Ole never included Flatbush in his future trips east.

Did this worry Olson? Not that anyone with perfectly normal eyes could notice. Ole just showed up at Hot Springs and brazened out the rides he got at the home park.

There is no shrinking modesty about Ole.

Several years ago when he broke into the big show at Cleveland he took it upon himself not only to play shortstop, but also to coach the infielders and batters.

About the first day out he took Larry Lajoie under his wing and told him the fine points of handling ground balls. Larry was in his prime then.

Then he decided that Joe Jackson could improve his batting by stepping into the ball in another way. Joe had hit .408 the year before and, of course, needed expert instruction.

But nerve like Ole's has its good points along with its bad. It probably has kept him in baseball because no matter how the breaks are going against him he does not lose confidence in himself.

A great mass meeting in a London theatre demanded the adoption of a system of reprisals against Germany for the air raids.

The German steamer Thuringen, plying regularly between Hamburg and Rotterdam was torpedoed on Thursday off Terschelling and sank.

IN THE BASEBALL WORLD

H—stands for Home-run, delight of the crowd;
The player who makes one is cheered long and loud.
A home-run is good at any old time,
But when bases are full it is simply sublime.

Pipp may not have a euphonious name, but the fans don't care. The sound of his bat cracking the ball makes up for whatever tone deficiencies there may be in his name. And that batting sound is becoming more frequent and louder every day.

There have been frequent rumors that this was going to be a bad year for baseball, but the rumor-mongers—as is most frequently the case—have been on the wrong track. Reports from everywhere indicate large and enthusiastic crowds, and the owners are correspondingly enthusiastic.

Old Bob Beach is getting to be a regular terror to the pitchers. Every time he steps to the plate the moundsman has to think twice before he uncorks.

Connie Mack is gathering recruits wherever he thinks he has spotted likely timber. His latest rookie, Joe Dugan, the Holy Cross star, is all excited over the prospect of joining the Athletics, which he will do at once. The young collegian played with the New Haven Colonials, and, like Jack Barry and Billy Kopf, who have played in Mack's infield, hail from the Nutmeg state.

If anybody has an idea that Ping Bodie hasn't got major league stuff in him, that person had better revise his notion. Ping is displaying great form, and has developed into one of the mainstays of the Athletics

Grouchy Gus says: "The only consolation an umpire gets when he is booted for a bum decision is this—some day the player whom he has decided against will be an umpire himself."

It will take a long time before anybody breaks the record recently made by Umpire Lord Bill Byron of the National League in the recent game at Cincinnati between the Giants and Reds. Lord Byron chased no less than six players out of the game, and, as everybody knows by this time, he had a very pleasant day. Nothing pleases Byron so much as the jeers of the fans, and he just felt in a jeery mood, so he let 'em have it. A player merely had to look cross-eyed at Byron and the axe fell, the player trundling himself off the field. In fact, it was a regular funeral procession, and the fans enjoyed it as much as they did the game.

The horseshoe of flowers will this day be presented to Eddie Cicotte, the White Sox's star pitcher, who celebrates his thirty-second natal anniversary. Therefore, everybody gather around so that we can purr about Eddie's great life and works. Eddie was born under the constellation of baseball in the well known and justly celebrated city of Detroit. He made his first bread and butter out of baseball playing with a semi-professional club. It was in 1905 that he got his first chance to play some real ball, with the Detroit Tigers. But Eddie hadn't "arrived" yet, and after a brief tryout he was sent on his merry way to pitch for the Augusta club of the Sally League. That was in 1905. The following year we see our hero playing with the Indianapolis club of the American Association. But the Hoosiers were not particularly smitten with Eddie's performances, and they let him go. He went to Lincoln, Neb., and did very nicely, thank you, in the Western League, where he also played with DesMoines. After the 1907 season Eddie seemed to show up well, and signed up with the Boston Red Sox. His chief work with this team consisted sitting on a nice hard bench until 1912. That year he was traded off to the Chicago White Sox, the latter team never having had to regret the swap. But Eddie was sore. He had been traded just about the time the world's series money was in sight, and he decided to revenge himself. Not alone that, but his compensation as a ball artist had been considerably reduced in the exchange. So Eddie set to work to show those Boston fellers a thing or two. And he certainly has done wonderful work. As a pitcher he has steadily increased his effectiveness, and the same can be said of his fielding. He a reputed to be one of the highest-paid mound artists in the American League.

PUGILISTIC ANNALS

1895.—Young Lustig, the little Hebrew boxer, was born in New York. Lustig, whose first name is Max, began his ring career in 1911, and soon became a favorite preliminary boxer because of his cleverness and his willingness to mix it up. In 1913 he began taking on some of the higher class boxers, and was usually victorious. He scored knockouts over Young Saylor, Young McDonough and Ah Chung, the Chinese boxer. He has made excellent showings in bouts with Kid Herman, Tommy Houck, Willie Chandler, Benny Leonard, Young Britt and One-Round Hogan.

1909.—Jimmy Clabby knocked out Dick Fitzpatrick in eight rounds at Hammond, Ind.

1911.—Knockout Brown knocked out Brant Dorsey in 4 rounds at Albany N.Y.

WHEN MOTOR CAR RATTLES

How Best to Locate Troubles and Cure Them

There are many unpleasant noises heard when the motor car is in operation and which may be remedied without very much trouble. A hood rattle is most annoying and usually is caused by the holding down device having loose springs. There are so many different types of hood fasteners that specific instructions cannot here be given, but it will be worth the owner's trouble to investigate this small part and determine just how the fasteners can be made to hold the hood more firmly in place. Door rattles and floorboard hums are easily removed by using felt inserts and, although these soon become compressed and the noise returns, they constitute a good temporary remedy. Tools under the front seat often rattle, giving rise to the belief that some part of the car is causing it.

ART OF MAKING FRIENDS

Often you come across people who complain that they have but few friends. The matter is easy enough to explain, for, as some one has well said, "The only way to have a friend is to be one." For friendship cannot possibly be a one-sided matter. Just as it takes two to make a bargain or a quarrel, so does it take the same number to make a friendship.

What really does happen is this: Two people meet, and gradually they find points of congeniality, gradually each does little favors for the other, gradually a feeling of affection takes root in each heart. Neither one is thinking of what can be gained from the acquaintance; rather, each is thinking and planning to give instead of take. In other words, both are trying to be a friend unselfishly. And, lo, it is the very thing which makes their friendship.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

DOBBIE—HANMER.

There was a war wedding in Littleham Church, Exmouth, Devon, England, at 2 p.m. on Wednesday, May 30, when Captain Wallace Hugh Dobbie, 1st Canadian Siege Battery, R. G.A., who is at home on short leave from France, was married to Miss Marguerite J. Hughes Hanmer, only daughter of Mr. J. Hanmer, J.P., and of Mrs. Hanmer, of Peterborough, Ontario, Canada. The bride, who wore a blue moire travelling suit and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley, was given away by Mr. Herbert D. Vansittart. The bridegroom and his best man, Doctor Willoughby Hodgson, were in khaki. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. W. Millett. The wedding was very quiet, as there was no time to issue invitations. Amongst those present were Mrs. Dobbie (the bridegroom's mother), Miss Dobbie, Mrs. Hunter, Miss Shadbolt, Mrs. Vansittart, Miss Vansittart, Miss Hilda Vansittart, Miss Kensington, Miss Galpin, Miss E. BUCK'S GRAND HOTEL.

Opened Last Night Under Most Promising Auspices.

Buck's Grand Hotel, George street, opposite the opera house, was formally opened under new management last evening, with a free dance, the cordial invitation to which was cheerfully accepted by a large number of citizens of both sex. The arrangements for the comfort of the ladies were perfect in every way, and a generous dance program was liberally responded to. Music was furnished by Tucker's five-piece orchestra.

This hostelry has been thoroughly renovated from top to bottom, and is now prepared to cater to patrons in the most approved manner. It will be run on the European plan, which means one pays only for what one eats. Its business men's lunch from eleven to two each day offers a very acceptable menu, and should prove an appreciable feature in Peterborough's hotel accommodation.

Mr. Reginald Winch is the new proprietor of the "New Grand," and is supported with an exceedingly capable staff, who will see to it that nothing is left undone to assure the comfort and convenience of guests.

CANADIANS CLEAR ROAD TO LENS

CAPTAINS OF INDUSTRY IN FAVOR OF PUMPER FOR NEW FIRE MOTOR TRUCK

Leading Manufacturers Urge Necessity of Modern Appliances for City of Importance of Peterborough---No Money for Extra Outlay in Sight and Aldermen Defer Action.

The Mayor and the Aldermen met the Manufacturers Committee of the Board of Trade last night and had an informal discussion on the motor apparatus which is being purchased for the Fire Department. The industrial chiefs as represented were all very strong for the city to buy a pumper and hose truck rather than a combination chemical and hose truck as recommended by the Council.

Mayor Duffus in calling on Ald. Dobbin, chairman of the Fire, Water, and Light Committee, stated that he had called the conference at the request of the President of the Board of Trade.

Ald. Dobbin Explains.

Ald. Dobbin reviewed the deliberations of the Council as they concerned the buying of motor driven fire apparatus. He told of the trip made to get the best advice possible on the subject and had returned to the city strong for the purchase of a hose truck and pumper. When the underwriters were made acquainted with the ideas of the Council, a letter was received from their headquarters advising the purchase of a hose and chemical truck rather than a pumper, pointing out the good water system in Peterborough and the small chance of it ever giving out.

Acting on this suggestion the council had decided that they would like to get a triple combination but finding that the cost was greater than the money at the disposal of the council for this purpose it was decided to follow the advice of the insurance people and put in a chemical and hose combination. It had been also pointed out to the committee that the weight of the triple combination truck was a bar to it going over the soft roads of the city in the spring.

Brigade Up To Strength.

Referring to the difficulties that had been encountered by the Committee in keeping the man power of the department up to full strength. Ald. Dobbin was glad to be able to state that they had been overcome and there were now fourteen experienced men at the station and two more would be added shortly. This brought up the standard to that required by the underwriters' inspector. Peterborough was better off than the other cities of the same size in the matter of fire protection.

Two Sets of Apparatus.

Mayor Duffus pointed out that after the trip to Canadian and American cities the recommendation had been for a pumper. Peterborough was different from Ottawa, Hamilton, London and other places in that Peterborough had only a central fire station while the others had two or three stations and if the apparatus from one station met with an accident there was the apparatus from the other halls to fall back on. He was quite sure that during the winter months that it would be necessary to have a few horses at the hall. It would not be a safe proposition to depend on the one set of apparatus.

Ald. Duncan thought that the lighter piece of motor driven apparatus would be better. In a few years they could add another piece with the pumper.

COUNTY COUNCIL HEAR AN ADDRESS ON GOOD ROADS

S. L. Squire of Department of Highways Explains County System -- Members Impressed With Advantages---Action Likely.

When the County Council resumed their session this morning Mr. Jas. Thompson, M.L.A., was present with Mr. S. L. Squire of the Department of Public Highways and addressed the council on the advantages of the County Road System. Just how the townships interested will be benefitted should the County adopt the system was explained by Mr. Squire and he also answered several questions as to the maintenance of the roads. He also told the council that the Province would bear 40 per cent of the cost of bridges constructed and of the money spent for the necessary road machinery.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Squire for his splendid address.

Mr. Anderson stated that he had been in favor of the County Road System for some time and it was only because citizens were paying out so much money for patriotic purposes that he had not introduced the bylaw before. He would like the different reeves to have a meeting between now and the November meeting so as to be able to have the bylaw passed and advantage taken of the system next year.

Mr. Squire. Reeve of Norwood, was more impressed with the advantages of the county road system than ever before and moved the vote of thanks to his namesake.

Property Committee Report.

Mr. Anderson, chairman of the County Property Committee, presented the report which was adopted. It was as follows:

Your committee have carried into effect the initial proceedings necessary to reconstruction of the building that was damaged by fire December 11th, 1916.

We found that it was impossible to get the work done by day work and asked for tenders. Getting only one tender, and after carefully considering the situation, we came to the conclusion that no definite plan could be followed and friction would follow changes.

We resorted then to the Commission basis and Messrs. Finnie & Gordon have been secured from the fact that the conditions set out in their offer appeared the best to avail ourselves of.

We respectfully submit the same trusting ratification will follow.

House of Refuge.

Mr. M. Walsh presented the report of the House of Refuge Committee as follows, which was adopted:

To the Council of the County of Peterborough, for the year 1917.

Gentlemen:—

I ask your indulgence to allow me to report to you at this the June Session the conditions that exist at the House of Refuge.

Nationalist Moves Six Months' Hoist for Conscription Bill.

A TEST OF STRENGTH

Quarter of a Million Single Men Eligible for Military Service.

OTTAWA, June 21.—J. A. Barrette (Conservative-Nationalist member for Berthier) upset the political apple cart by moving that the government's conscription bill be given the six months' hoist. This action came as a surprise. The French-speaking Conservative members, ncludag the Nationalists from the province of Quebec, were known to be opposed to the bill, but it was generally understood that they would join with the government in voting down all amendments. Mr. Barrette in his speech clearly indicated that the Nationalists at least would not only oppose the bill but would support any destructive amendments that might be offered by the opposition. The Barrette motion for the six months' hoist will call for the first test vote on conscription. If it is defeated, the Laurier amendments calling for a referendum vote will then be voted on.

He said that 108,965 of the cards were returned in envelopes without any of the questions being answered, but in the majority of cases the names of the senders had been obtained.

Canadians Again Victors and Help to Clear Way of British Army to Lens-

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, June 21.—Today's official report says there were no events of special interest on the Franco-Belgian front.

On the fighting fronts in France the British forces under Field Marshal Haig have recaptured important positions from the Germans east of Arras, while the Germans in the Champagne region have gained a foothold in French first line trenches.

The British gain was made east of Monchy-le-Preux, where Monday the Germans under cover of a violent bombardment drove back the British and occupied their trenches. Between the Ailette River and Moulin de Laffaux the Germans in a strong attack in which huge effectives were issued, captured a section of a trench held by the French. The attack was delivered over a front of about two-thirds of a mile and it followed a violent bombardment of the French line.

Near Lens the Canadians in an assault on a position held by the Germans which was barring the way to the coal city, routed out the defenders and captured the trenches and incorporated them into the British lines. The Germans in vicious attacks endeavored to regain the lost terrain, but were beaten off.

FRENCH LOSE TRENCH.

The official report issued by the French war office reads:

"After the bombardment between the Ailette river and Moulin de Laffaux, the Germans attacked our positions on a front of more than one kilometre. The attack was very violent and was carried out with large effectives. It resulted in the enemy gaining a foothold in a section of trench of our first line east of Vauxaillon.

"South of Filain another German attempt against the salient in our line east of La Royere farm brought no result.

"The artillery fighting was lively between Hurtebise and Chevreux, and on the Verdun front in the sector of Vacherauville and Chambrettes."

"Belgian communication: An enemy patrol attempted to surprise one of our advanced points south of Dixmude at night, but was repulsed by our trenches east of Ramscapelle and in the neighborhood of Dixmude and Lizerne. During the day the two artilleries were moderately active along the whole front, except near Dixmude and Steenstraete, where the action was more spirited."

FIRE ON LIFE BOATS.

PARIS, June 21.—The French Admiralty announces that a French patrol boat picked up fifty men belonging to a submarined British steamer and drove off with its guns two subs which were still close to the boats in which the vessel's crews had taken refuge. The patrol boat of the same flotilla saved forty men from a British steamer.

The sub which torpedoed her had turned its guns on the lifeboats, killing eight of the occupants.

ITALIANS LOSE VESSELS.

ROME, June 21.—Two Italian steamers and five sailing ships were torpedoed last week. Two other steamers were attacked and captured.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

DUBLIN, June 21.—Sin Feiners who have held several demonstrations since the release of persons arrested during the uprising of last year, brought about further disorders today. Five hundred of them, carrying Sinn Fein flags, attacked the residences of former soldiers over which the Union Jack was flying. Windows were smashed and the police stoned. Eight men and five women were arrested.

New Brunswick Legislature Has Shelved Equal Suffrage Bill.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

FREDERICTON, June 21. — The New Brunswick Provincial Parliament last night adopted a resolution favoring negotiating with Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island relative to the formation of a legislative union of the Maritime Provinces. By a party vote of twenty-four to fifteen the Legislature agreed to shelve the woman's suffrage bill until the next session.

COUNTER ATTACK IN VAIN.

Germans Are Now Busy Preparing New Defences in the Rear.

(By Stewart Lyon.)

Canadian Headquarters in France, (via London) June 21. — The approach to Lens has been made less difficult by a successful minor operation north of the Souches river. The object of the attack was a nest of German trenches lying at the foot of Reservoir Hill. These trenches radiate from the reins of mining building buildings which are to be the chief places of shelter for the enemy between our front and Lens. Tuesday afternoon parties of bombers went out to capture these trenches by bombing operations. The attack was entirely successful. The trenches were cleared of the enemy, and the dugouts in which the Germans were believed to have been lurking were blown in and the ground incorporated into our system. Thirty-five prisoners were taken

During the evening and night the enemy, after an exceptionally heavy

107 PUPILS ADMITTED TO COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE WITHOUT EXAMINATION

The Best of Those Mentioned by Principals Are Recommended to Department and Escape the Ordeal of Writing at Entrance.

There are eighty-seven candidates writing at the Entrance examination at the Collegiate Institute, and if the high standard of instruction in the local public schools has been maintained during the past twelve months, a large percentage of these will be successful. Besides these, there are 107 public school pupils who will be admitted to the classes of the Collegiate without examination.

The school authorities this year have followed the usual custom and have recommended to the department for admission to the Collegiate from 40 to 60 per cent. of the pupils who are named for examination by the various principals. This is a formality insisted upon, although the recommendation of the local educationists is always accepted by the department at Toronto.

Admitting pupils to the Collegiate without examination proves an incentive to work in the public schools during the year. The pupils regard it as a high honor and are encouraged to strive for it, knowing that those who stand highest in their classes will be spared the ordeal of an examination. It is a boon to nervous pupils who would be likely to fail to do themselves justice in such a test. The proposition has been made to abolish the entrance examination altogether, but if this were done one inducement to the prospective candidates to make extra efforts would be removed. The pupils so admitted always do as well as those who are required to stand examination.

The paper on spelling submitted to the candidates last evening was as follows:

SPELLING.

(Note: — The Presiding Officer shall read section A and each sentence in section B at least three times—the first time, to enable the candidate to grasp the sense; the second, slowly, to enable the candidate to write, repeating words, if necessary, in order that every candidate may hear clearly; the third, for review.)

The trail left the river and climbed the cliff where it wound along a stony ledge with a sheer drop of a thousand feet to the canyon floor below. In spite of the danger and fatigue we were keenly alive to the beauty of the scene. The gorge was one of the loveliest in all tropical America. Its walls were hung with every variety of luxuriant vegetation and curtained with countless waterfalls.

The pathway was very narrow, not over forty inches in width, with projecting crags and sharp turns. My horse, no doubt recalling the fate of pack animals who had struck the wall with their loads and had fallen into the abyss, decided to avoid this catastrophe by keeping to the very edge; so that my feet hung over the yawning chasm. I dimly recall a faint, silver thread far below in the mist where the river wound its way through the gorge below. It was midnight when we reined up at a hut on the edge of the forest after nineteen hours in the saddle.

FRESH TROOPS FROM RUSSIAN FRONT HURLED AGAINST FRENCH

Brief Advantage Gained But Held Only for Short Time---Fourteen Enemy Airships Destroyed Since June 8.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, June 21. — "An attack made by the Germans on our positions east of Vauxaillon was extremely violent. it was preceded by a heavy bombardment and conducted by special assaulting troops belonging to fresh divisions which have just come from the Russian front. The Germans made every effort to procure some advantages, but they encountered desperate resistance on the part of our troops. Some slight gains which they obtained at first were finally overcome under our fire, and German counter attacks succeeded only in penetrating our first line trench in two places, south of Mont Des Singes on a front of about 400 metres, and north of Moisey farm on about 200 metres of ground.

"Our troops undertook an energetic counter offensive which permitted them this morning to retake a part of the occupied ground south of Mont Des Singes, where we found numerous bodies, indicating the heavy loss sustained by the enemy. We captured 50 prisoners.

"In the Champagne we took some prisoners and captured five aviation machine-guns. Fourteen airplanes and a German captive balloon were destroyed on our front in the period from June 8 to 20. Eleven of these machines were brought down by our pilots during aerial combats."

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, JUNE 21, 1917

LET THE PEOPLE DECIDE.

THE CONSTITUTION of the Liberal-Conservative Association of West Peterborough provides for the calling of a general meeting of the organisation at least once every year. Every Conservative of recognized standing in the riding is a member of that association and entitled to a voice in its deliberations and in shaping the policy of the party. The general meeting is something altogether different from the conventions that are called from time to time, made up very often of hand-picked delegates selected for the purpose of placing a candidate in nomination for Parliament or Legislature.

There has been no such meeting of the association for over two years. That there is a sentiment throughout the riding today for such a gathering is generally admitted. This feeling has not arisen as the result of recent events, but dates back for over a year, as those on the inside well know. The country finds itself face to face with a crisis, and a full and free discussion of the best ways and means for dealing with the issues is in order. Regarded either from a national or a local standpoint, the situation is unusual.

The Conservative party cannot afford to go into an election while there are any differences of opinion among the members. The rank and file must be given a chance to express their views on the grave issues of the day and on other matters that are of local interest. The leaders of the party themselves should be the first to suggest that such an opportunity be given the masses. This suggestion has already been made, and the next duty is to take some definite action one way or the other.

There is a matter now at issue of vital interest to the party, locally and in the wider field of Federal politics. There is only one way in which the differences of opinion can be satisfactorily adjusted, and that is by calling a meeting of the association and letting the people decide. All factional disputes can be smoothed out in this way. The majority will rule, and the minority can be depended upon to fall into line and accept the verdict. Strength lies in union, and the best way to unify all elements is to take a poll of the sentiments of the voters. No section of the party should fear such a test if they are convinced that they are in the right or that the people are with them. A general meeting of the association would make such an element and the party at large stronger than ever.

Every member of Parliament is elected to support one or other of the parties. On minor issues he may find himself at odds with his leaders, and even his own supporters will think all the more highly of him if he gives evidence of the possession of a healthy independence. On matters of vital importance, when the very existence of a government may be at stake, anything like a bolt is an entirely different proposition. Any member of Parliament finding himself in such a position should resign his seat and make way for another. If he does not do this, he should at least show the courage of his convictions by voting against his party and accepting the consequences to himself. He cannot hope to escape responsibility, to remain in favor with all factions, by neglecting his duty in refusing to vote on one side or the other on the pretext that he holds no mandate from the people to take one course or the other.

Hon. E. L. Patenaude, Minister of Inland Revenue in the Borden Cabinet, is opposed to conscription. Finding himself at variance with his colleagues, he resigned his position, giving up at the same time a salary of $7000 a year. He was not content to forfeit all claim on the shadow while still retaining the substance. For his courage and sacrifice such a man is likely to hold the admiration even of those who have no use for his principles.

The voters at large decide the issue on election day. If the sentiment of the electors is taken in the early stages of a campaign, useless friction can be avoided. Any members of the executive committee who find themselves at variance with the rank and file can resign their positions and their successors can be chosen by the members of the associaiton at once. Such a gathering would mean a harmonious party and a united front on election day, no matter what was decided upon by the majority.

THE GREATER PETERBOROUGH.

MR. W. H. DENHAM spoke like a man with the proper spirit of civic pride when he stated at the public meeting last night that no city in Canada of the population of Peterborough can boast of so many large manufactories. It is belittling this city to compare it to other places where the leading industries are blacksmith shops and small factories. Such places do not require the fire protection that is essential in a city as important as Peterborough, and the aldermen would do well to keep this fact in mind when making comparisons.

THE EXAMINER AND CONSCRIPTION.

THE EXAMINER finds it impossible to break the shell of partisanship that has encrusted it for a lifetime, and discuss the conscription bill on its merits. It is unable to go the length of the Toronto Globe, the Star, the Brantford Expositor and other devout Liberal organs and take issue with Sir Wilfrid Laurier's stand on the measure now before the House.

The papers referred to are out and out opposed to a referendum. The Examiner is at least non-committal on that point.—While it does not condemn, it does not recommend a reference of the issue to the electorate. It contents itself with an academic discussion of the principle involved, and earnestly insists that the provisions of such a drastic measure must be fair by applying to all classes alike. Then it, rather unnecessarily it would appear, advocates the conscription of wealth as well as manhood.

Our contemporary finds objections to the bill, all of which will vanish on a close investigation of the measure as it now stands. One of these objections has to do with the matter of registration. The Government, our contemporary argues, when it calls for men, will be unable to locate the eligibles. The man who wishes to dodge his duty will still be able to do so.

When the Military Service Bill goes into effect every man in Canada between the ages of 20 and 45 years, or any other age specified, will become an enlisted soldier to all intents and purposes, and as such will be subject to military discipline. If the Government desires to call out members from the rst class, single men from 20 to 23 years, suppose Peterborough is required to furnish fifty of these, there will be no difficulty in locating them. A complete enumeration is in the hands of the military authorities, an enumeration that has been made in the past year by the recruiting officers. There is a civic census taken every year so that information available is full in every detail.

Every member of the first class in this city would, when such a call is issued, be required to register at the nearest recruiting station or at some other designated point. The fifty men required could be selected from the number, those who could best be spared to be taken.

If any man fails to report when called out, he places himself in the same class as a deserter and renders himself liable to the punishment usually meted out to such offenders. There will be no difficulty in locating the slackers under such a system. If men fail to register they can be picked up on the streets by the military authorities and required to furnish an explanation. Ask the members of the local branch of the Great War Veterans' Association if there will be any trouble in finding the members of the various classes or if anything further in the way of registration is required. The provisions of the bill are ample and the details are complete.

There is nothing to be gained by attempting to belittle the bill, by assailing it with inconsequential objections. The selective draft is in force in the United States and men are still volunteering. There is no stigma attached to any man who complies with the law. Anything of the kind falls only upon the man who attempts to dodge his responsibility as a citizen. Registration was necessary as a preliminary to the draft in the United States, simply because no enumeration had been made there as in Canada.

The man in Peterborough who responds readily to the call will be in the same position as the man who renders the State any other service voluntarily, even though he could be forced into it if he failed. The law compels a man to pay his debts, but there are plenty of citizens who do this as a matter of principle and not from any fear of the courts.

OUR GULLIBLE CONTEMPORARY.

OUR CONTEMPORARY last night published what purported to be a report of the meeting of the Conservative executive committee Tuesday evening, its main object apparently being to discredit The Review. Suffice it to say that on th matter at issue, one of the greatest political sensations the local field has ever produced, The Examiner has lost every point of interest from the beginning, and that its alleged report last night was another failure. Talking of hysterics, almost any emotion would serve the purpose better than the bovine credulity that besets our neighbor.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

IF THE PEOPLE really rule, then by all means let the people have a chance to decide.

• • • •

OF COURSE, there are men who regard themselves as astute politicians when they are merely heelers.

• • • •

THE PRESENT is no time to discuss the conscription bill, using baseless objections instead of arguments.

• • • •

THE MAN convinced of the justice of his cause is seldom nervous about submitting it to a popular test.

• • • •

THE CITY THAT LEADS in manufacturing industries should stand at the head of the list in the matter of fire-fighting appliances.

• • • •

THERE HAS BEEN no official statement with regard to the conscription of wealth any more than there was before all this trouble started.

• • • •

WHO WILL EXPLAIN IT? Even white collars have gone up in price, although 400,000 young Canadians no longer include such articles in their wardrobes.

• • • •

SIR SAM HUGHES adds one more to the list of his blunders when he attempts to associate Canadian labor with German gold scattered as a bribe to oppose conscription.

Anarchy in Harriston.

(Harriston Review.)

As an instance of the contempt in which our town by-laws (and the makers of those laws, as well) are held: On Saturday forenoon a man mounted on a bicycle traversed the greater part of our business street upon the sidewalk, and among the many who subserviently made way for him were two of our town councillors and a magistrate.

The Company Accepted.

(Dublin Times.)

A wealthy Irish lady, whose summer home is situated near a garrison town in Ireland, once sent an invitation to Captain Armstrong to take tea with her, saying "The pleasure of Captain Armstrong's company is respectfully requested, etc." To her astonishment she received by an orderly the following note: "Enlisted men Jones and Smith have been detailed to do guard duty, but the remainder of Captain Armstrong's company accept with pleasure Mrs. Weyler's polite invitation."

Caught Up.

(Philadelphia Record.)

In applying science to the art of war, the British appear to have caught up with the Germans. The latter have never done anything bigger of its sort, or more perfectly worked out and executed in every detail, than the capture of Messines Ridge. Of course, the British and French were lamentably behind the Germans three years ago, because they have lived for peace and the Germans for war, but the decadent French and peddling British are up at the head of the class now.

PART OF A WORLD MOVEMENT

One of the revelations of this great war has been the indispensable character of the work of the Y.M.C.A. Before the outbreak of hostilities, it had not only built up Christian manhood in the tens of thousands of young men at home, but with the commencement of the war, it followed them to the training camps in Canada, to the reserve camps in England, to the base camps in France, and even to the front line trenches. For its splendid work in all of the great battles in the war, including the more recent and critical one at Vimy Ridge, our boys at the front will be eternally grateful to the Y.M.C.A. Today the Premier of Great Britain, the President of France, and the Commanding Generals of all armies, bear testimony to the value of the Y.M.C.A. work.

These splendid results have been made possible only because of the effective work the local Y.M.C.A.'s have been doing in Canada and the United States for over sixty years, in developing leaders, perfecting their organizations, their methods, etc. By divinely guided, persistent efforts conducted through all these years, there has been created a great Y.M.C.A., which today is receiving such world-wide approval.

In all of this work, the Peterborough Association has played its part. 285 of its members are at the front or have given their lives for the Cause. Free privileges have been granted to all enlisted men by the Peterborough Y.M.C.A., for over two years, and over 25,000 visits were made to the building by enlisted men in 1916. The great work thus far accomplished has been made possible only by prayers, financial contributions, and efforts of the friends of the movement at home. The need of the hour is to maintain this great work at home and abroad at the point of highest efficiency. This is something in which all may have a part either by being members or by making liberal financial contributions. The present need of the Peterborough association is a fund of ten thousand dollars by which existing obligations may be met and the needs of the current year provided for. In view of what other communities are doing for their local association, this should not be a very difficult problem. The board of directors has planned a campaign to be carried on next week and looks to its friends to be generous in their response, that the needed objective may be reached in the allotted time, three days.

HOW A GREAT ADMIRAL DIED

Lord Nelson was one of the greatest sea men that ever lived. He commanded the British fleet at the battle of Trafalgar, when the navies of France and Spain were beaten, and England was saved form a great danger. He did not look like a famous admiral on board his ship, the Victory, that day. He was a small man, and his clothes were shabby. He had lost one arm and one eye in battle; but with the eye which remained he could see more than most men with two, and his brain was busy planning the course of the coming fight. Just before it began, he went over his ship, giving orders to the crew, and cheering them with kind words, which touched the hearts of the rough men who loved their leader and were proud of him. "England expects every man to do his duty" was the last message he sent them. Every man did his duty nobly that day, though the battle was fierce and long; but it was the last fight of the brave commander. He was shot in the back as he walked the deck with his friend Captain Hardy, and was carried below.

He lay dying for several hours, but, in spite of his great pain, his one thought was of battle. "How goes the day with us?" he asked of Hardy, and when told that many of the enemies' ships were taken, he cried eagerly, "I am glad. Whip them, Hardy, as they have never been whipped before." Later, when his friend came to tell him that the victory was won, Nelson pressed his hand. "Good-bye, Hardy!" said he, "I have done my duty, and I thank God for it." These were the last words of one of England's bravest sons.

CAN VEGETABLES AT HOME

The shortage of labour and the scarcity and high price of tin cans has very materially reduced the output and increased the cost of canned vegetables; so much so, in fact, as to make some lines almost prohibitive to the average family.

There is little reason, however, for any Canadian family not providing a sufficient supply for next winter. Home canning of vegetables is a simple matter; when put up in ordinary glass jars, securely sealed, they are equal if not superior to the factory brand, and the cost is much lower.

Peas, string beans, sweet corn, pumpkins, beets, tomatoes, and all vegetables which will not keep without cooking, may be canned.

After cleaning and preparing the vegetables to be preserved, they are enclosed in a cheesecloth bag and parboiled for five minutes. They are then dipped in cold water, packed in glass jars, boiling water poured over them to fill up all crevices, and the lids loosely adjusted. The jars are then placed in an ordinary boiler filled with water, with plates or dish covers to prevent the jars touching the bottom of the boiler, and are allowed to boil steadily for 3½ hours. When lifted from the boiler, the lids must be screwed down tight, and the jars allowed to gradually cool, care being taken that they are not exposed to drafts, as a sudden cooling may crack he glass.

Vegetables thus canned will keep and be a welcome addition to the table in lieu of the high-priced canned goods, and the surplus supply of vegetables, which otherwise might be wasted, will be conserved.

Guns, Shells and Thrift Essential

More guns, more shells and more men is the plea of Gen. Sir O'Moore Creagh, V.C., writing from the British headquarters in France. To provide those guns, those shells and those men, Great Britain is under conscription and exisiting on rations. Canada is passing through the most critical period since Confederation. On the firing line, its troops continue to win distinction for the Dominion. At home, the Government is urging thrift upon all. By the practise of economy throughout the Dominion millions can be saved for war purposes. The need of such saving is great. The financial problem is as great as any problem confronting the Allies. Canada is expected to raise six hundred million dollars this year for war purposes. Since the war began the Dominion has added over half a billion dollars to its national debt. The demand for the exercise of economy is imperative. Every possible dollar should be invested in War Savings Certificates.

"Well, youngster," he said, jovially, "the old story, I suppose—the fool of the family sent to sea."

"Oh, no, sir," replied the boy; "that has all been altered since your day."

Tomy's uncle asked him the name of Mary's young man.

"I call him April Showers," replied Tommy.

"Because he brings May flowers," Tommy explained.

The two girls were talking with a young lieutenant who had got a bullet through the arm.

"And what were your emotions during the first battle?" asked one girl.

"What were my emotions?"

"How did you feel?"

"Oh, slightly boored," was the reply.

"William, when we were married you promised to stop smoking."

"So I did, my dear. You will remember that I said to you, holding up three cigars I had in my pocket, 'As soon as I smoke these, I'll quit.'"

"Well, you haven't kept your promise."

"Oh, yes, I have. You see those three identical cigars are still unsmoked. I have them in my desk."

UNFAMILIAR MARZO

Soon to be Sung In Victoria, British Columbia

Who knows Marzo's Messe Solennelle? It will be sung soon in Victoria, B. C., by the choir of St. Andrew's Cathedral, under the baton of Mr. Frank J. Sebl and with Mr. G. Jennings Burnett at the organ. Here is an instance of enterprise on the part of a church choir which cannot be too heartily commended. Any choir can sing Rossini's Stabat Mater, Gounod's Messe Solennelle for St. Cecelia's day, Gounod's Redemption, and the various ladylike compositions of Mr. Maunder. A good choir can sing Mendelssohn's Hymn of Praise, St. Paul or Lauda Sion and the standard oratorios. But when they are sung, there are still whole libraries of choral music almost completely neglected. Marzo is, of course, an old-time melodist, but it is well to hear him once in a while, and there are many choral works of a newer type trat are never heard save at some stupendous festival where expense—and waste effort are not always unknown.

Spasmodic efforts are never as valuable in the matter of educating public taste, as the week-in week-out work of a permanent organization. For that reason choir directors in the churches would find the study of unfamiliar works of musical genius extraordinarily interesting, not only for the singers, but for themselves. He is a poor conductor who does not learn as much from his choir as the choir learns from him.

The art of finding good music is one of the requirements of a choral director, and by "good" is meant, not only worthy in an artistic sense, but suitable for the voices at his command. If the singers have a small range, as amateurs frequently have, let him beware of long-sustained top-A's and repeated soprano G's. A squealing choir is rather worse than a silent one. But let him not be hopeless and declare that there is no good music suitable for his organization.

If he says so, he will be hopelessly and for ever wrong. Especially let him not descend to the banal, maudlin favorites of the third-rate evangelist, songs which frequently have no more color sense than a cheap chromo, and no more perspective an astonishing thing what a hold some of these songs have on the uneducated—for a little time. It is true that they are soon forgoten, bu their that they are soon forgoten, but their narrowing and pernicious influence on the intelligence of the community persists after the tinkling melody and the appalling poetry are no longer in mind. Choir directors have a great responsibility which they can hear well, if they are respectful towards men who suggest the use of inferior music but make their own selection.

THE IDEAL PROGRAM

Object Is To Expand The Horizon Of The People

It is no sinecure to arrange a programme for the general public. No person finds it an easy thing to decide what numbers shall find a place on such a programme. Which is better to have in mind, "uplift" or "what the people want?" There is in reality no such question," said Mr. Arthur Farwell in his address to the Canadian Club when he once visited Toronto and told of the work of conducting municipal concerts in New York. "It is all a matter of theory," said he. "'Uplift' is what someone thinks the people should have, and that is theory. 'What the people want' is what someone thinks they want, and that again is theory. We don't know these things. How do people know whether they want good music until they know what it is?

"Of course there is a response to the music of the hurdy-gurdy. If people hear their familiar street tunes of course they will respond. But that does not mean they will not respond ten times harder to music which is ten times as great, if they hear it under proper conditions. That is true. It is not a question of uplift or what the people want; it is a question of conditions, not theories. And the whole question resolves itself into one of horizon—what is needful to expand the horizon of the people. The millions will respond if they see what the world contains and most of them are as appreciative, when you give them a chance to hear it, as anyone else. Music becomes to them not what they would call before 'high-brow,' but human, and they feel it."

MUSICAL THERMOMETER.

The Harp is Symbolic of Good Music.

The remarks people make in an offhanded way often indicate their real ideas more accurately than when asked for them. One has but to overhear snatches of conversation at a concert to get a glimpse of how musical tastes run. At Massey Hall not long since in the course of an orchestral programme different persons were heard to make commendatory references to the human appeal in the strains of the harp.

While trivial in itself, this expression of an appreciation of harp music is just a duplication of what one might hear in any part of the hall. It speaks well for the average Toronto audience. It indicates a high plane of musical ideals as a peep below the surface will show.

The harp is symbolic of good music. The name is never associated with ragtime, or any form of frivolous music. Its very shape, the gracefulness of its outline, spells symmetry. Its tone is sympathetic, readily reaching the heart. It stands apart as the instrument most requiring the caressing touch. Peculiarly fitted as it is for the rendering of the old familiar tunes and the hymns that have become favorite through a lifetime's acquaintance, the harp is perhaps most loved by those who have passed the mid-day of life, those to whom home means more and the outside world less.

For this reason there are those who have faith in the harp some day becoming a home instrument even more than a concert instrument. It is said that some time ago a large audience heard a harp orchestra of sixteen members play Handel's immortal Largo, on which occasion there was not a dry eye in the assembly.

As a people we Canadians are reaching greater heights of musical appreciation, and our love of the harp is a thermometer which shows it.

MUSIC GAINING GROUND.

The formal opening of the beautiful and spacious home of Ye Olde Firme's piano and phonographs attracted thousands of visitors last Saturday afternoon and evening. This indicates how firm a grip music is gaining on the home life of Peterborough citizens. No home is complete without an instrument of some nature, and these days they can be obtained on terms which make their acquisition quite easy. The young folk insist on opportunity for entertaining and also demand musical education. Their elders are falling in line and fostering the development of music in their homes. Consequently any event which offers a demonstration of musical instruments is sure to command public interest. This speaks well for the spirit of our century which is enveloping the masses with the refining influences of music from the cradle up.

Pictures of Heintzman's new hall of music in Peterborough will appear in an early issue of this paper.

HAYDON'S PROUDEST MOMENT.

The Father of Instrumental Music Proudest When He Played the Bass Drum.

It is a curious thing that the greatest souls are the simplest. An interesting and amusing example of this is shown in a little anecdote told about Joseph Haydn, the famous composer. When in his years of greatest achievement he was asked what was the proudest moment of his life, he paused for a moment, then smiled. Everybody expected him to answer that it came when his oratorio, "The Creation," or his cantata, "The Seasons," was played. To the surprise of all, he answered, "When I played the bass drum in the march at Hainburg."

It seems that when he was a very small boy and a very ragged one at the same time there was a grand procession being held at Hainburg, a little town near the composer's birthplace. He was staying there at the time through the kindness of an old music teacher who had seen the latent powers of the boy and had taken it upon himself to bring them out. The man was poor, and as a result of this the embryonic genius was unkempt and half-starved most of the time. It was little wonder, then, that young Haydn was not asked to take part in the parade to which his more fortunate friends were invited. What that means can only be appreciated by the small boy who has looked with envious eyes at the more favored of the gods. Haydn was heart-broken. When the time came, however, for the procession to begin its triumphal march, it was discovered that the drummer was missing. Young Haydn was not. He was quickly recruited, placed behind the big bass drum, and "stuck up" with a spirit that was more fiery on account of its sudden unexpected rise. Little did anyone imagine then that the happy-eyed ragged little drummer would in time grow up to be known as the Father of Instrumental Music.

NEWS AND VIEWS.

"German music of the old-time Germany" says an English editor "is one of the great art possessions of humanity; but it is a remarkable fact that one of the great German composers was a Prussian." From a list compiled by Professor Dickson we learn that Bach was a Thuringian; Handle, a Saxon; Gluck and Mozart, Bavarians; Haydn, an Austrian citizen and probably a Croat; Weber and Schubert, Austrians; Schumann and Wagner, Saxons; Beethoven was born in Bonn and was of Flemish decent. Brahms was born in Hamburg. Mendelssohn was a Jew; Richard Strauss is a Bavarian.

France does not take the piano as seriously as Canada does, that is as a home instrument. The reason is that the Frenchman of the towns does not take his pleasure en famille but rather in small gatherings or cafes and cercles. He has his music in public or semi-public where the Canadian sees the greater benefit of having his music in the home.

"The composer who writes a sequel to a popular song does so at his own peril" affirms a British critic, who adds "Sequels are dangerous. They often miss fire. Why? Because as a rule they are made and not born. A composer gives to the world a song that leaps straightway into popularity. In order to keep the world's smile a sequel is offered. Generally speaking the sequel is but a concoction, not a spontaneous effort."

The following verse has been received. It is an ode to the Violoncello from the pen of one, William Watson:

Well, O 'Cello, love I all thy mellow
Deeps of golden sound.
Tell, O 'Cello, tell me where they fellow
May on earth be found.
Or, if such be past our finding here,
In what sphere
That brooks no galling bound,
Far beyond the light wherein thou dwellest,
What immortal, what celestial 'Cellist
Wields the bow that bids the world go round.

A TRIP TO TURKEY.

Lancashire Lad Presents An Organ To Sultan From His Queen.

The spirit of the sea-faring Britisher, which from the early days has led the sons of Britain to set out on long adventurous voyages, did not escape the musical fraternity. It is learned from a lecture by Westminster Abbey's renowned organist, Sir Frederick Bridge, that an organ builder, one Robert Dallam, a native of Lancashire, sometime about 1604 set out to take an organ to the Sultan of Turkey as a present from the Queen. And, by the way, had Turkey imported more music instead of German influences, and on the same scale as she did the latter, she would perhaps have had a different story to tell today.

It took Dallam about six months to reach Turkey in a sailing boat and he fell in with pirates. He took with him a pair of virginals to practice on during the voyage. When he landed at his destination, he opened the box containing the organ and found the glue all melted and the whole thing in pieces. Sir Frederick interjects that the voyager took a very "gluemy" view of the situation.

The organ ran by clockwork. There were all manner of birds which sang. First of all the clock struck twenty-two, then there was a chime of sixteen bells and the organ played a song of five parts twice over. It was set to play at a certain time. The Grand Seigneur after hearing it, asked if it would play again and the attendant said it would in an hour's time. The attendant then went to Dallam who stood outside to ask if it would play again and Dallam told him that, if he touches a little pin with his finger it would play at any time. The Grand Seigneur said that was very good but he wanted to know what the keys were for. Dallam was then called in to play the keys and did so with some fear for he was not sure of his head being safe. He was afterwards rewarded with forty-five pieces of gold.

MOVING PICTURE MUSIC.

The press agent of a moving picture firm announces the engagement of several distinguished musicians to write incidental musc for some of the productons they have in hand. He admits the difficulty which the composers must face in the rapid change of subject. For example, one scene running two minutes may be the affecting separation of a mother and her boy. The next may be the interior of a cabaret, or even a burglary. It must be evident that a descriptive strain suitable for the one would hardly be begun until it would be violently unsuitable. Therefore the design is to avoid "detail" music, and to secure something in the "key" of the picture.

Three most distinguished Suites were written as incidental music, Mendelssohn's Midsummer Night's Dream, Grieg's Peer Gynt, and German's Henry VIII Dances. There are others, but these are outstanding works in the repertoire of every competent symphony orchestra. There is just as much possibility of expressing the general theme of a moving picture as of a play, provided the composer is something more than a journeyman in his art. The old belief that no music could be beautiful if it expressed or illustrated a definite idea or chain of deas is not held so strongly as it once was. Music for musicians may be "absolute," but it would be none the worse for the general public if it had a definite "programme."

BOY'S HEART MASSAGED

Action Restored After Thirteen Minutes' Suspension

The story of how Albert Davies, aged 6, had his heart's action restored by massage after thirteen minutes' cessation is related in the privately circulated "Gazette" issued to the staff of Guy's Hospital, London, Eng. After the boy's tonsils had been removed he stopped breathing. Other means failing to restore respiration, which had ceased for twelve minutes' an incision was made to enable the surgeon to massage the heart. After about twenty squeezes the heart was suddenly felt to be beating and respiration was re-established, though at first the pulse was not perceptible, and the boy's condition remained extremely feeble. He was unconscious for two days. Only by unremitting care was he brought round gradually to perfect health.

The medical statement on the case concludes: "There have been several successful cases recorded of heart massage, but this case is perhaps unique, in that recovery took place after so long a time of cessation of the circulation. It can be imagined that it is extremely difficult to estimate time in emergencies, but it is certain that the heart had stopped at least thirteen minutes, and the impression of those present was that this figure should lie between fifteen and twenty minutes."

ONTARIO BABY MADE STRONG

Mrs. Jarvis Says Dr. Cassell's Tablets Cured Her Delicate Child When Nothing Else Could

Mrs. Jarvis, Box 286, Penetang P.O., Ontario, writes: "It is a pleasure to tell you what Dr. Cassell's Tablets have done for my baby. When only five months old he fell ill, and though I had medical advice for him he got worse. I tried several special foods, but none of them would stay on his stomach, and he became so thin that he seemed just skin and bone. He only weighed 10 pounds, and we never thought he would live. But chancing to hear of Dr. Cassell's Tablets I got some for baby, and am thankful I did. He is a bonny boy now, quite cured, and weighs 25 pounds at twelve months old."

A free sample of Dr. Cassell's Tablets will be sent to you on receipt of 5 cents for mailing and packing. Address: Harold F. Ritchie & Co., Ltd., 10, McCaul St., Toronto.

KING AS HERB GROWER

New Industry to Replace German Supply

"Will the Government protect belladonna growers by a tariff?" was one of the inquiries at a conference of medicinal herb growers in the Carlton Hotel, London. They had met to discuss the organization of various societies for producing home-grown herbs to replace supplies formerly received from Germany and Austria. The inquirer explained that 6 pounds of fresh belladonna leaves produce only 1 pound of dried leaves, and for this 50c is offered. "It's impossible to produce them profitably at that price," he said.

"I have got 7 pounds of foxglove leaves and 3 pounds of dandelion roots." What good was that to a man who had orders by the ton, asked Mr. Latimer, whose point was that it was a huge industry. Sir Sydney Olivier, Permanent Secretary of the Board of Agriculture, intimated that if any reliable organization was founded with prospects of supplying medicinal herbs in remarkable quantities the Development Commission would doubtless give favorable consideration to the question of a grant.

"Both the King and Queen have taken the greatest personal interest in the movement," stated Mr. H. C. Cust, the chairman of the Central Committee for National Patriotic Organizations, who presided. At their Majesties' request there had been a consultation with the head gardener as to what could be done in growing the herbs in the royal gardens, and he (Mr. Cust) had since received a letter from the Queen's secretary stating that the matter was being proceeded with. Many owners of large gardens had started to grow medicinal herbs, some putting down 15 to 20

BANDGRANT DIVIDED BETWEEN TWO MUSICAL ORGANIZATIONS 50-50

No Favors Shown This Year and Each Band Receives a Grant of $300.

Mayor Duffus at the Committee of the Whole Council last night brought up the question of dividing the Band appropriation. He had thought that this had been attended to long ago and was not aware that it had been overlooked until he had read the editorial in last night's Review.

Ald. Stratton stated that the appropriation was there ready to be divided at the discretion of the Council.

City Clerk Armstrong stated that the division last year was $150 for the Salvation Army and $450 for the 57th Band.

Ald. Smith thought that the grant should be divided 50-50. The Salvation Army Band were ready at all times to play for any purpose and it made no difference to them what time or day it was or what the occasion. He thought that they gave the city as much service as the 57th Band.

Ald. Stratton moved, seconded by Ald. Taylor, that the appropriation be divided $300 to each Band.

Ald. Langford would stick to the same division as last year and moved accordingly.

Ald. Weir felt the same way as Ald. Langford and seconded the amendment. Ald. Dobbin was in favor of giving the Salvation Army Band more consideration than last year and suggested a division on a basis of 57th $350 and S. A. $250.

Ald. Duncan was in favor of giving more consideration to the Army Band. They gave concerts in the Park the same as the other band and were always ready to assist at any occasion when requested.

Mayor Duffus called for a vote on the motion and amendment and the amendment was voted down and the 50-50 division carried.

Ald. Langford then wanted the division made as suggested by Ald. Dobbin but there was nothing doing.

Two highwaymen, who felled Bernard Tellinger, bank messenger, in the fashionable residential section of Williamsburg and escaped with $15,000 in cash and cheques, were captured a few minutes later in a battle with policemen. The money was recovered.

100,000 UNION MEN IN KHAKI

THAT IS THE ESTIMATE OF MINISTER OF LABOR CROTHERS.

OTTAWA, June 21.—Hon. H. T. Crothers resumed the debate on the Laurier amendment to the conscription bill in the Commons yesterday. Mr. Crothers declared that at the very beginning every member in the House had pledged himself to take part in the European war and to stay in it till the end. To do so, men must be secured, and there was now only one way to get them, namely by compulsion on a selective basis.

Labor Favors Conscription

Mr. Crothers expressed the opinion that the best elements of the labor classes were in favor of conscription, but resolutions were passed against it by labor leaders "notwithstanding that upwards of 100,000 union men had already gone.

The leader of the Opposition, said Mr. Crothers, wanted a referendum. He wanted to ask a slacker from British Columbia or Quebec whether he desired to be conscripted. The amendment was designed to make Canada a "quitter"

NEW RULES FOR AUTOS.

The new traffic regulations issued by the Ontario Government require the City Bylaw to be changed and the council last night asked that the City Solicitor prepare a new bylaw to cover the amendments.

In the new regulation the motor or vehicle to your right has the right of way instead of the north and south bound ones having the right over those going east and west.

Doing something well is doing much.

CAPTAINS OF INDUSTRY IN

Mayor Duffus would like to see the insurance key rate for Peterborough the lowest. We have an "A" rating and he was much concerned that the rate would not be increased. He was strong to have the Department 100 per cent efficient.

Manufacturers Heard.

Mr. W. E. Breyfogle of the DeLaval Co. had no criticism to make of the choice of the Council. It was the small difference in the cost of the better machine that had induced the manufacturers to ask the council to consider the advisability of reconsidering. He felt that two pieces of motor apparatus was absolutely necessary. If the cost was $10,000 more a city the size of Peterborough should have the best of fire protection. The manufacturers were entitled to it. He was also very anxious to see the man power of the fire department increased. It should be one man for every 1000 of population. Some weeks ago they were much concerned when the report got out that the strength of the department was only nine. He was glad to hear that those conditions were remedied.

Where Peterborough Excels.

Mr. W. H. Denham of the Quaker Oats Co. stated that the fire department of any city was a very vital question. The council should not be satisfied to compare the city with St. Thomas, London, Ottawa or any of the places mentioned from a fire fighting standpoint, for the reason that Peterborough was in a peculiar position. For population Peterborough had more important industries, more large buildings than cities with very much larger departments. They should look at the Fire Department from that standpoint only. The manufacturers were not interested in the general fire fighting ability of the city. A chemical engine would take care of a small fire but it was absolutely necessary for the large concerns to see that a pumper was on hand.

He did not agree with the objection raised to the weight of the larger piece of apparatus. He would get a separate hose truck for the small fire and have the pumper ready for the large fire in case a boiler explosion put the water main out of commission. The time when a large fire occurs is when the necessity for a pumper is best seen. The people do not appreciate Peterborough. He compared the rapid growth of the city in the last 10 years. It had about outlived the stage where a central department could handle it. He would put hose trucks in the south end and at East City. For the Quaker Oats Co. he pointed out the necessity for fire protection of a high standard during the rebuilding operations. After the building was built the company would have pumps and other devices of their own installed to help. He would find the $3000 some way and get the better apparatus. Mr. Denham was glad that the strength of the department was at its limit but would not stop there. You can never tell when a man will get sick or hurt. If it was a question of wages, pay it. The Quaker Oats Co. were paying $3 where they only paid $1.50 before. He would relax the discipline of the department to some extent so that the men would be satisfied.

Protect the Schools.

Mr. V. Eastwood was anxious to have the manufacturers satisfied with the fire protection and pointed out also the necessity for ample protection to our fine schools and hinted at the new school that is to come in the near future.

A Trip to Hull.

Ald. Smith had not changed his mind as to getting a triple combination. All American cities were putting them in and he was over at Hull a short time ago and the department there were now wishing that they had got a triple instead of a pumper and hose truck. The only question with him was where was the extra money coming from.

Mr. Wm. Sangster was in favor of a pumper and then two small trucks for the outlying districts. An ordinary truck can go along the streets nearly all winter.

Ald. Stratton stated that the general opinion of the council was for a hose and pumper combination but the money was not in sight, and it was against the law to have a deficit. Maybe the extra taxes from the Hydro would help? The committee adjourned without taking any further action.

POOR BLOOD AND WEAK NERVE

(By F. Raymond Ward, M. D.)

Lack of strength is about the first symptom of violation of the laws of health. Then some nervousness, unsteady hands and limbs, skin eruptions, dizziness, sleeplessness, heart palpitation, and with the feeling that the blood is being sapped comes complete prostration. In this condition the sufferer is indifferent to all things—and looks upon life with a gloomy, melancholic view.

It is given as a statistical fact that seven out of every ten people in the United States are suffering from nerve exhaustion, and of this number less than half realise it. They know that they have gloomy thoughts, depression of mind, an impaired memory, dizziness and headache, wakeful nights and spells of extreme exhaustion, but they attribute it to any other cause but the right one. They feel languid, irritable and restless, the why and wherefore of which they cannot explain. They are suffering from nerve exhaustion, a condition which is undoubtedly the means of causing more misery and crushing more hopes than any other trouble that flesh is heir to.

Nervous exhaustion will not cure itself. The sufferer who thinks that nature alone will bring about a restoration of health is simply deluded by a false hope. He will realise that (if the power of realizing is left him), when he becomes a hopeless victim to one of the many diseases which follow in its path.

Those suffering from nerve exhaustion or loss of energy as a result of overwork, mental worry or violation of nature's laws are quickly restored to sound health by Dr. Ward's special treatments. Dr. Ward's office is located at 79 Niagara Square, Buffalo, N. Y., which is right opposite the McKinley Monument. His office hours are Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays 9 A. M. to 9 P. M., and Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays 9 A. M. to 6 P. M. Sundays 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. Consultation and examination is always without charge.

LICENSE BOARD HAVE SENT OUT REGULATIONS

WHICH HAVE TO BE COMPLIED WITH BY STANDARD HOTELS.

The new regulations of the Ontario License Board for Standard Hotels licensed under the Ontario Temperance Act, have been issued and sent to all hotels to be placed in a conspicuous place.

Besides giving regulations as to the accommodation needed in bedrooms and dining-rooms, the regulations have also a few additions to the old ones.

Every standard hotel now has to have a candle placed in each bedroom. This is for the purpose of helping the guest who may be in the hotel when a fire breaks out and the lighting system is put out of business. There have been cases where the lights have gone out and in the confusion without a light lives have been lost.

Every standard hotel must in future keep a supply of pure cold water for drinking purposes for the guests.

Another thing is that storm windows are barred from bedrooms. The board recommends that instead metal weather strips be used, as this will keep out cold draughts in winter and dust in summer. Storm windows, it is claimed, would prevent the free opening of windows in case of fire.

The situation of ropes used for the purpose of escaping from bedrooms in case of fire has been changed. The old rule used to be they had to be fastened from the sill, but the Commercial Travellers' Association have pointed out the danger of this to the board, and the rule is now that they must be fastened from the side of the window at least two feet from the sill, thus making it easier for the guests to get out in case of danger.

In future no licensee of a hotel may sublet any portion of the hotel's premises without the board's permission.

NO REDUCTION IN PRICE OF FORD CARS

Mr. Duffus, Ford dealer for this district, has received a letter from the Ford Motor Company stating positively that there will be no reduction in the price of Ford Cars on August 1st as in former years.

This letter also states owing to the increased price of material and other conditions in connection with manufacturing, that instead of a reduction there will probably be an increase.

THE "Y" HELPS PETERBORO' AT SMALL COST

Last year the "Y" in Peterboro helped 775 young men and boys who were in its membership during the year, and 1,600 soldiers, to whom free privileges were granted.

It provided its help for 365 days, daytime and evening. On an average the "Y" was open 12 hours a day—4,380 hours in the year.

The "Y" cost to run last year $8,600—or about $1.95 per hour.

That is: 1 cent per hour provided help for 13 individuals.

It gave physical training to 450 men and boys. On a calculation, 2,200 hours were devoted in the year to the physical upbuilding of this number of men and boys.

The money-worth of such training cannot be reckoned. Men and boys are helped to do more and better work every day, now and for the future, in school and factory and shop and office. They are made better able to ward off disease and less dependent on doctors.

All told last year 535 hours were devoted to study-classes in connection with the High School Clubs and the Canadian Standard Efficiency work.

All told, 275 boys and men took these classes and reckon who can, the benefit to them of this study.

Such study makes men and lads better workers, keener and more diligent, in the offices, schools, shops and factories where they work. So those who profit by their work are better rewarded at no increase of cost to them.

And always, in class play and leisure, the influences are wholesome and inspiring. Boys and youths are taught leadership, initiative, resolution. They are encouraged to live and speak clean, to be neighborly in the true sense, to eschew bad habits, and to make their lives count for good. They take all this discipline and all these ideas into their homes and places of work, to the enrichment of those they serve.

Can you count the value of all this help the "Y" gives?
Let us emphasize it:

These young men and lads helped by the "Y" at such very small cost live in your homes, work in your shops factories and offices, and you get the benefit.

You get back in dollars and cents many times the cost per individual of keeping the "Y" going.

These boys and young men pay the big end of the cost of the "Y" out of their own pockets. The light end of the load falls on you.

SO IT means that the part the citizens of Peterborough are asked to contribute to make up the shortage in operating the "Y" is very, very small when reduced to unit costs—per hour, per individual, per contributor.

Those who own motor cars in Peterborough spend on them each year more than it costs to keep the "Y" going. Peterborough's citizens spend in cigar stores more money in a year that they are asked to contribute for the upkeep of the "Y" and so we could go on.

The point of it is:

The "Y" does a work in Peterborough, for Peterborough, of incalculable worth at a very small cost when reckoned in relation to individuals, and the fruitage of the "Y's" work of benefit to the citizens of Peterborough from a dollars and cents point of view is real and many times greater than the cost.

IT should be a real joy—to many it IS a real joy—to contribute to the maintenance of our "Y." Their gifts and your gifts are invested in a work that makes young men and boys strong, clean, and earnest. But beyond the joy side of it is the business side. We put our appeal for continued help before the citizens of Peterboro as a STRAIGHT BUSINESS PROPOSITION.

Yours For a Greater Peterborough

Mr. W. G. Paterson, former manager of the local branch of the Bank of Toronto, was presented by a number of friends with a club bag on the eve of his departure for Toronto, an expression of the high esteem in which he is held. Mr. Paterson made a suitable reply to the kind remarks made by those present, and thanked them for their splendid gift. The best wishes of the community go with him and his family for their future success and happiness.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. McRoberts of Pontypool were in town on Tuesday.

The services in the Millbrook Methodist church on Sunday evening last were largely attended, the auditorium being filled to the doors, and many took seats in the gallery. The occasion was a service held to do honor to the memory of one of Millbrook's heroes, the late Signaller Harry Orr, who fell in action in France. The church was beautifully decorated with flags and flowers, and the Methodist church honor roll was draped with the Union Jack. The music by the choir was in keeping with the occasion, and the services, although bright, were solemn and impressive. The sermon by the pastor was earnest, eloquent and sympathetic.

An event of more than passing interest and unique in its character from the fact that it was the first of its kind ever held in this community, was held in the Cavanville Methodist Church on Thursday evening, June 14th, when the community in general, irrespective of denomination, gathered to pay a tribute of respect and homage to Pte. Walter Howard of the 20th Battalion. The event was one of widespread interest as everyone showed themselves anxious to welcome the hero home again. The chairman of the meeting was Rev. W. H. Clark, who presided in his usual pleasing manner. The meeting opened with a selection by the choir under the able leadership of Mr. B. F. Carley, and later in the evening Miss Annie Tinney contributed a solo very acceptably. Mr. James Douglas, called to the platform on behalf of the committee, read an address, and the presentation was made by Mr. H. Keegan. Pte. Howard, although taken completely by surprise, replied in a very neat speech, thanking the people for their kindness in extending to him such a warm welcome home, and expressed the hope that all the other boys would be treated as well when they arrived back. During the evening splendid addresses were delivered, each being full of patriotism, and inspiring to a remarkable degree, by Canon Allen, Rev. W. H. Higgs, Councillor F. Clark, Messrs. Mellville Staples, B. F. Carley and J. Mason. The meeting was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

The Epworth League service Monday evening was in charge of the literary committee. The topic, "Rational Recreation," was taken by Miss Stella Pethick. Readings were given by the Misses J. Widdis and C. Richards. Mrs. G. W. Sayles sang a solo, which was much appreciated. Thursday afternoon the Junior and Senior Leagues joined in a picnic on the Mansion grounds. The meeting next Monday evening is in charge of the citizenship department.

DOGS RUNNING AT LARGE LAW SHOULD BE ENFORCED

The City Council last night passed a resolution asking the Police Department to more strictly enforce the bylaw regulating the running at large of dogs. It was pointed out by Mayor Duffus that some of the owners of dogs were strictly obeying the law and were keeping their pets either tied or shut up, and it was unfair to them to have neighbors' dogs running at large and treating the city regulation with contempt.

COUNTY COUNCIL

resignation to take effect June 1st, handed to me in writing without any solicitation from the Board.

There being no other alternative I called the Board together, who, upon accepting such resignation, authorized the asking for applications to fill the vacancies, through the newspapers.

In response we had several applications and decided to appoint Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Campbell, from Chandos, and would submit such appointment to this council for ratification by bylaw.

On the 1st of June we visited the House to meet the new incumbents, and while there we decided to have certain repairs made to the sewage disposal, water supply, and heating apparatus, that were absolutely necessary, engaging Mr. Archibald to carry out such repairs, and I have asked him to explain to the Council the necessity of the same.

There are some 40 inmates now in the House and the report of the Grand Jury on June 13th would show that the inmates are all apparently happy and satisfied save some two or three that should not be there, not being responsible. One, Kelly, was committed to the hospital for insane some time ago, and in response to a letter from the Clerk the Department says that unless dangerous he will have to remain out of such Institution until such times as congestion lessens. In the meantime the municipality to where he belongs has been requested to remove him at once from the House of Refuge, as has also been requested of the municipality from where one, McMillan, came, also an unfit subject.

Conditions are such that I think and would recommend that the whole Council visit the House during this session in order that an intelligent and satisfactory understanding of affairs could be obtained by all.

The county council paid a visit to the House of Refuge yesterday afternoon, and met Mr. and Mrs. Campbell, the new superintendents. The council were very pleased with the condition of the institution and also the stock. The inmates were all contented.

After leaving the Refuge the council visited the Chemong Bridge and saw how the repairs to the structure were progressing. A few of the older members of the council were warmly greeted at Chemong by Mr. Andy Joe, a former member of the council.

PAY MORE WAGES

"The fact that the Grand Trunk management will not pay the union scale of wages is making it more than difficult to obtain workmen in their shops," declared a trainman. "There are 68 locomotives dead at Stratford terminal waiting repairs."

The wages paid mechanics in the G.T.R. shops is said to be 32 cents an hour, in all other places the wages run from 45 to 50 cents an hour.

COUGHING PLANT

Travellers tell us that in Eastern lands there is a peculiar plant called the coughing bean. The strange feature about this plant is that every once in a while it will make a sound that is just like the cough of a human being. When this plant is about to cough, it shakes all over, and then tightening up as a man does when he is about to sneeze, it gives a violent cough, which is followed by a little cloud of dust. Some of our readers are no doubt asking, "Why does the plant cough?" This seems to be the explanation: In the long, dry heat which prevails in the desert, where the coughing plant grows, the pores of the plant become choked with dust, and it would die of suffocation, but for the fact that a powerful gas accumulates inside the plant, and when this gas has gained sufficient pressure, it explodes with a sound just like a human cough. This explosion shakes the pores of the plant free from dust, and thus once more the coughing bean is in good health again.

CUSTOMS OF BURMA

Burmese Idea of the Soul After Death is Strange

Burma is the one place on earth where the death of a man owing large sums of money is no cause for worry to his creditors. In fact, the Burmese think that a creditor has a better chance of recovering a debt from the dead than from the living, provided the deceased has relations who are at all concerned for his welfare in the life beyond the grave. If the debt is not paid they believe that the dead man will come into the creditor's power as his servant, ox or dog.

The Burmese appear to have no ideas regarding the direction of the land of the dead, or of the country from which the race came. The curious custom prevails of holding a complete funeral and burial ceremony in the hope of deceiving the Destroyer, and inducing him to leave a sick person alone.

The Burman regards it as a matter of course that the soul should continue to exist after death, and he believes that it remains in the house, and is cognizant of all that goes on there, for seven days. The bed of the deceased person is laid, and a fresh supply of food and water is placed by it every morning and evening. During the same period hospitality is offered to all who come, and monks are invited to preach as well as to eat.

At the end of the seven days, the spirit departs. According to the Burmese, he is ejected by the house-god, Min Magayi, the mighty blacksmith who was burned alive by a king of Tagaung, and whose spirit watches over every Burman household. But during the seven days he is not absolutely confined to the house. He may wander about visiting the places he was wont to visit in life.

BABOONS ARE HARMLESS

But One in Africa Fought Two Dogs "Manfully"

A letter from Capetown, South Africa, says: Two dogs and a baboon had a frightful battle at the Rietkuil farm in the Vitenhage district, and the "old man" would undoubtedly have finished off both his antagonists had not humans interfered. Natives seeing a troop of baboons walking up a small hill set out after them with the two dogs, which intercepted and drove one of the baboons towards a farm house. The baboon made for a tank at the corner of the house. The dogs vainly tried to get at it from one side, and the baboon jumped down the other side and made for a small wood, where seating itself behind a bush, it calmly awaited the oncoming enemy.

The foremost dog had no sooner reached the bush than the baboon made a grab for it and with one bite bits its head off. The second dog pounced on the baboon, but before long its side was ripped open. The dog's end was near when a shot from a native's gun killed the baboon. A curious part of the affair is the way the local newspapers' treat it. Apparently no sympathy is conceived for the baboon, although these animals are inoffensive harmless animals unless attacked. They go about in troops, the old valiantly defending the young. When in trouble they moan and cry like children and their conduct is often remarkably human.

SOME QUAINT SIGNS

Don't Believe All You Read But Go in and See

A notice has been seen in a shop window in Norway which reads: "English spoken here; American understood." In foreign countries where English tourists foregather some very quaint notices have been seen at various times. On most of the large stations in Switzerland for instance one can see, "It is prohibited to traverse the rails unless one is invited to do so by the chief of the station."

In Milan Cathedral there used to be a notice—it may be there now—which read: "Appele to charitable. The Brothers, so-called, of Mercry ask slender arms for the hospital. They harbor all kinds of diseases, and have no respect to religion."

Japan has the most harmonious notices displayed. Nearly every shop in Japan exhibits a placard, printed in English, advertising goods, some of which are very comical. "Horseshoe maker instruct by French horse leech," you read; or, "if you want sell watch, I will buy; if you want buy watch, I will sell. Yes sir, we will, all will. Come at my shop. Watchmaker."

A Japanese laundry company announced: "We most carefully and cleanly wash our customers with cheaper prices. Gentlemen, $1.75 a hundred, ladies $2.00 a hundred," while a certain dairy announced that they sold "Extracts of fowls." [illegible]

FRENCH ARE PRACTICAL

War Prices Have Developed the French Industries

It is quite true that all the warring countries are paying topnotch prices for everything they buy from neutrals. Just as it is likewise true that they bitterly resent this fact. Their resentment might have a touch more of reason if their own merchants did not do their best to squeeze the last ounce of profit out of each contract. France has recognized these things quite clearly and has guarded herself as well as she can. In the first days of the war she bought a lot of American leather. It was not satisfactory. It was most decidedly not satisfactory. To-day she is only buying American leather when she can buy leather nowhere else.

So the army started a tanning department. Soldiers oversee it and work in it. The hide of every animal killed in France goes to it. They come back from the slaughterhouses just back of the firing line, which are worthy of a story in themselves, and from the great military depots. The leather for army boots costs less, for the aggressions of private enterprise are guarded against, and it is of the highest quality. Something similar was done in the dye-stuff situation. French cloth faded just as white as the English and American cloth did, because the German dyes were missing.

"We will make dyes here," said France. "We must."

Factories were erected and chemists went to work. The product has not been overly satisfactory as yet, but it is improving in quality all the time. The French chemists are gradually getting the hang of the coal tar puzzle. And this is not a merely temporary expedient to meet an emergency. These dye factories and the tanneries and a score of other similar industries are being subsidized by the State. The hope is that under the forced draft of war they will be able to so develop that when peace comes they can take their own part in the world markets.

HUGE RAILWAY SHOPS

Efficiency in Repair Work Sought by Canadian Roads

The principal car repair plant of the Grand Trunk Railway for the lines west of the St. Clair River at Port Huron for many years, was destroyed by fire during the winter of 1914-1915. Their old plant was of limited capacity and located at what was the old terminus of the line previous to the construction of the tunnel under the St. Clair River. After the fire negotiations were carried on between the town of Port Huron and the railroad, resulting in the acquisition of the property vacated by the Port Huron Thresher Company, which property was very much more advantageously situated, being near the tunnel line.

The plant was first planned to consist of a power house containing 6 150 h.p. boilers serving double turbo-steam generating units of 300 k.w. for developing the electric power for lighting and operation of machines, all motor driven; a passenger car shop accommodating 27 modern passenger cars; a freight car shop accommodating 70 freight cars; and other buildings. These buildings, including tracks, were to take a space of approximately 55 acres; arranged for economical operation, special attention having been given to this feature to ensure maximum efficiency. The total cost was estimated at $700,000.

McGRAW BACKS FROM CHARGES

NEW YORK. June 21.—The dove of peace fluttered around the meeting of the National league directors and the McGraw case, which promised to cause a big commotion in the organization, proved to be a tempest in a teapot. The quick-tempered Giants' manager flatly repudiated all the statements with which he has been credited during the past week, reflecting on the manner in which President John K. Tener has been conducting the affairs of the league. After the signed statement of McGraw, denying all that he was alleged to have said against President Tener, was read to the directors they announced that the incident was closed. President Tener refused to comment on the statement in any way.

The statement in which McGraw repudiates the alleged interview is as follows:

"I have this day read for the first time certain scurrilous newspaper articles, under date of June 14, purporting to represent interviews between myself and reporters criticizing the National league, some of its clubs and its president, John K. Tener. After having read the same carefully I desire to state that I did not make the statements nor give out by intimation any utterance that might be construed to reflect in any way upon the ability, honesty and integrity of the president of the league or any of its clubs, members or officials, or upon the league or the game itself.

"JOHN J. McGRAW."

Manager McGraw was present to answer any questions the directors wished to ask him, but after sitting in the waiting-room at National league headquarters for nearly three hours he was not invited into the meeting

After the meeting President Tener refused to comment on his statement of yesterday in which he said he would not be a candidate for re-election in December. When asked point blank if he would accept the office as president of the league again if the eight club presidents unanimously tendered the position to him, he replied: "I refuse to answer that question."

IN THE BASEBALL WORLD

I—stands for innings, of which there are nine,
When soft breezes blow and the weather is fine.
But fandom rejoices when tied is the score,
And the game goes to ten or twelve inings or more.

John McGraw ought to gather around him his little group of pitchers and say a few serious words to them. Every time the Giants' moundsmen get away from their own hill, they seem to suffer from stage fright.

Joe Wood, billed as a stellar attraction in the Cleveland pitching outfit, has been a costly investment so far. The Cleveland management paid $15,000 for his release, and signed him up at a salary said to be over $7000 per annum, which is some salary, all will agree. So far Joe has done most of his performing as a bench warmer.

Effective batting seems to be a lost art with the Yankees. The air seems to be about the only thing the Yanks can hit every time.

The opinion seems to be generally held that the ball teams of both major leagues lack pep this season. No particular reason is given for this condition, but the fact is that the players go through their performances in the most perfunctory manner. They will all probably wake up one of these days, and we'll again see some of the old stuff that made all of us stand on our toes. Let's hope the change will come soon.

HUGE INCREASE IN THE BANKING BUSINESS HERE

INCREASE OF NEARLY ONE-QUARTER MILLION OVER SAME WEEK OF 1916.

The past week has been a very remarkable one so far as the volume of the banking business of the city is concerned. The increase over the same week one year ago is nearly a quarter of a million dollars and considerably more in comparison with the same week last month.

The comparisons also show that in two years the clearings have more than doubled. This is another evidence of the progress of the Electric City. The figures are:

Clearings for the week ending June 21st	$807,833
Same week last month	514,563
Same week, 1916	567,376
Same week, 1915	349,976

QUEBEC UPSETS

As a result of the returns reviewed by the National Service Board it is estimated that there are, or were at the time the registration cards were distributed, a total of 252,034 single men between the ages of 18 and 45 in Canada apparently fit for military service. Commenting on this estimate of men eligible for service, the secretary of the national service board states that, at the request of the militia department, he had not included men who are not British subjects, those who have more than three dependents, those who suffer from obvious physical disabilities, those who had suffered one month's illness during the twelve preceding their registration, and finally those who had been rejected for military service. He estimates that the returns were received from approximately 80 per cent. of the total males in Canada between the ages of eighteen and sixty-five, but states that of the 20 per cent who did not respond the majority were likely eligible for military service.

bombardment, made three separate and sustained assaults with the object of recovering the ground he had lost, but all were beaten off. This morning the situation is reported as again normal. The Germans are still hard at work on their new line of trenches, concrete dugouts and wire entanglements, which run across the open ground east of Reservoir Hill.

COBB NOT INFALLIBLE

It is possible for Tyrus Cobb to pull a bone. A lot of fans did not believe it was, but Ty pulled one at Cleveland upon an occasion, and it lost the game. The field was roped off, with a ground rule in force limiting drives into the crowd to two bases. The score was tied going into the last half of the ninth; two men were out, with O'Niel on first and Graney at the bat. Graney hit a line drive between Cobb and Veach. The former was playing deep and cut across the field to head the ball off. Just as the ball was about to roll under the ropes, Cobb made a dive for it and picked it up. He returned it to the infield, but O'Niel had scored the winning run, while Graney was perched on third. If Cobb had permitted the ball to roll into the crowd, the hit would have been only a double, and O'Niel would have been compelled to stop at third base.

TRADES COUNCIL PROTESTS AGAINST GEN. HUGHES' CHARGE

No German Gold Has Influenced Labor to Oppose Conscription

At the regular meeting of the Trades and Labor Council last night Secretary Stevens was instructed to write the secretary of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress urging him to protest against the statement made by Sir Sam Hughes in the House recently to the effect that German gold had probably something to do with the attitude of union men on the conscription question. It was felt that there was not the slightest justification for the assertion and the delegates did not propose to submit quietly to what they regarded as an insult.

The Military Service Bill now before Parliament was discussed informally but no definite stand was taken by the adoption of a resolution. The move for an independent political party was also debated. While the majority of the delegates were in favor of the proposition one great difficulty in the way of a local party was recognized in the matter of a suitable available candidate, who has not been prominently identified in the past with one or other of the regular parties.

One matter brought up was the recent suggestion of both parties combining on a win-the-war candidate in the event of an election. The sentiment of the meeting last night was that if such a step was taken Labor was entitled to recognition.

107 PUPILS

This morning one of the severest tests came in the form of the paper on arithmetic, which contained the following problems:

Note.—In the case of each of the questions in Part B (viz. 7, 8 and 9) no marks are to be given by the examiner unless the answer is correct

A

1. A field 100 rods long and 60 rods wide is to be surrounded by a fence 8 wires high, with posts every 15 feet. If one rod of wire weighs 1 lb. and costs $3.50 per 100 lbs., and the posts costs 17 cents each, what will the material for the fence cost? Answer, $149.49.

2. A drover bought 125 cows at $35 a head and sold 85 of them at a gain of $8 a head and the remainder at a gain of $10.50 a head. Find his gain per cent, on the whole transaction. Answer, 25 1-7 per cent.

3. A farmer has an orchard of 120 apple trees. During 1915, 3-5 of the trees bore 8 bushels each, ⅙ of them bore 12 bushels each, and the remainder bore 15 bushels each. He sold the apples at $2.75 per barrel. What was his net profit from [illegible] paid 75c each for pruning the trees, 50c per barrel for picking and packing the apples, and $196 for other expenses? (1 barrel equals 3 bushels.) Answer, $677.

4. On April 4th, 1916, James Ward bought of Henry Smith four acres of land at $250 per acre. He paid half the purchase price in cash and gave his note at 3 months for the balance at 7 per cent. per annum.

(a) Write out the receipt Smith would give for the cash payment.

(b) Write out the note that Ward would give for the balance.

(c) Find the amount that Ward must pay to redeem the note when it becomes legally due. $509.01.

5. I built a house which cost $4,500 on a lot which cost $1200. I insured the house for 7-9 of its value at a cost of 3-7 per cent. The house was destroyed by fire and the insurance company paid the full amount of the policy. I then sold the land at an advance of 65 per cent. Find my total gain or loss. $235 loss.

6. A freight car is 36 feet long and 8 ft. 6 in. wide, internal dimensions. If its capacity is 60,000 lbs., find in feet to two places of decimals the height to which it can be loaded with wheat. (A bushel equals 2218.2 cu. in., and a bushel of wheat weighs 60 lbs.) Answer, 4.19.

B

7. (No marks to be given unless the result is correct.) Find the value of: .0256 multiplied by 1.0071 divided by 2.7975. Answer, .009216.

8. (No marks to be given unless the result is correct.) Find the total value of the following:

1875 lbs. of pork at $8.80 cwt.
2750 feet lumber at $28 per M.
1860 eggs at 42 cents per dozen.
1260 oranges at 2 for 5 cents.—Answer, $540.15.

9. (No marks to be given unless the result is correct.) What will it cost to paint the walls and ceiling of a hall 48 feet long, 27 feet wide and 18 feet high, at 45c per square yard? Answer, $199.80.

"GREEK SLAVE" NETTED $400

PROCEEDS TURNED OVER TO KITCHENER LEAGUE.

The Kitchener League treasury was handsomely enlarged today by the receipt of a cheque from Mr. R. J. Devey for $400, being the proceeds of the recent "Greek Slave" presentation, given under the auspices of the Peterborough Operatic and Dramatic Society. The splendid result of the concerts held by the society speaks well for the leadership of Mr. Devey, to whom neither time nor attention seemed to be any object so long as success was attained. In 1915 the society presented "San Toy" and realized $200 for the 93rd Bn. band fund. In 1916 the "Geisha" was presented for the benefit of the Progressive Club and $250 was the proceeds.

Every presentation of the society has met with increased favor from the citizens. Mr. Devey deserves great credit for his patriotic undertakings.

Ald. Smith objects to the police shooting the stray dogs at the police station. Citizens who wish their dogs destroyed take them to the police, and after shooting them the city has to pay 50c for taking them to the incinerator. The alderman thought that all the dogs should be taken to the incinerator and the police could destroy them there.

ORANGE LODGES TO CELEBRATE AT HOME JULY 12

RAILWAY REFUSES TO GIVE THEM A TRAIN TO PORT HOPE.

The local Orange Lodges have decided to celebrate the glorious 12th of July by a demonstration at home. They had every intention of taking part in the celebration at Port Hope but owing to the railways refusing to give them an excursion train, they decided to commemorate the day here.

The lodges in the immediate neighborhood will likely join in to make the day a big one.

BRITISH RAID FOE'S POSTS AND CAPTURE PRISONERS

Germans Assail French Lines But Are Beaten Back With Heavy Losses---More Successes Reported for Italians.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 22. — "We made successful raids last night southeast of Queant and in the neighborhood of Neuve Chappelle and Armentieres," says today's official statement. "Casualties were inflicted on the enemy, and we secured prisoners."

AUSTRIANS BLOWN UP.

ROME, June 22. — Last night's official statement announces successes for the Italians in both the Donlonia regions and on the Carso plateau. The explosion of a mine laboriously prepared blew up an Austrian position under the spur of Lagasuoi Piccolo and destroyed the garrison, and Italian Alpine troops immediately carried the summit of Hill 2668 and firmly established themselves there.

FOE'S ATTACK FAILS.

PARIS, June 22.—South of Lafere we penetrated German lines in region of Beautor and brought back prisoners. Artillery fighting was continued east of Vauxaillon and was extended during the night south of Filain and north of Brayeen Laonnois, where it attained extreme intensity.

In Champagne at eleven o'clock last night after a severe artillery preparation the Germans attacked our trenches on the Teton height and east of this position on the front of four hundred metres. The enemy succeeded in penetrating our advanced position but was driven out after spirited engagement. We regained all our positions.

A surprise attack by the enemy near Renieres Wood in Lorraine was without result.

VALUE OF Y.M.C.A. TO YOUNG MEN

"Hundreds of young men and boys are seeking in their social, physical, intelectual and religious lives such help as a provided in a modern Young Men's Christian Association, and it is to enable the Peterborough association to better serve them that a campaign has been planned for raising the funds necessary to remove the burden of indebtedness and to provide for a more efficient service on its part."

"The business judgment of the country is that the Y.M.C.A. is the most effective agency for the development of good citizenship among young men extant today. Its adaptability to every situation, its forcefulness, its skillful supervision, its business management and its continuous growth make this statement obvious."

"The Young Men's Christian Association is not a charity. It is a great philanthropy in that it helps young men to help themselves. It appeals for support from the fact that it is successfully doing the work asked of it."

This is particularly true in these days when the association is doing so much for the soldiers and for the young lads who are being forced out to take up life's responsibilities at an earlier time of life than they would under normal conditions.

No wonder that the boy was not sleepy at eight o'clock; he had been flying about while the others had been yawning before the fire. He wanted to tinker his skates, to mend his sled, to finish that chapter. Why should he go away from that bright blaze, and the company that sat in its radiance, to the cold and solitude of his chamber? Why didn't the people who were sleepy go to bed?

How lonesome the old house was; how cold it was, away from that great central fire in the heart of it; how its timbers creaked as if in the contracting pinch of the frost; what a rattling there was of windows, what a concerted attack upon the clapboards; how the floors squeaked, and what gusts from around corners came to snatch the feeble flame of the candle from the boy's hand. How he shivered as he paused at the staircase window to look out upon the great fields of snow, upon the stripped forest, and up at the black flying clouds, amid which the young moon was driven on like a frail shallop at sea. And his teeth chattered more than ever when he got into the icy sheets, and drew himself up into a ball in his flannel nightgown, like a fox in his hole.

For a time he could hear the noises down stairs, and an occasional laugh; and he could feel the wind tugging at the house, even sometimes shaking the bed. But this did not last long. He soon went away into a country he always delighted to be in; a calm place where the wind never blew, and no one dictated the time of going to bed to any one else.

The twilight is sad and cloudy,
The wind blows wild and free,
And like the wind of sea-birds
Flash the white caps of the sea.

But in the fisherman's cottage
There seems a ruddier light,
And a little face at the window
Peers out into the night.

Close, close it is pressed to the window,
As if those childish eyes
Were looking into the darkness,
To see some form arise.

And a woman's waving shadow
Is pasing to and fro,
Now rising to the ceiling,
Now bowing and bending low.

What tale do the roaring ocean,
And the night-wind bleak and wild,
As they beat at the crazy casement,
Tell to that little child?

And why do the roaring ocean,
And the night-wind wild and bleak,
As they beat at the heart of the mother,
Drive the color from her cheek?

CAPT. BURNHAM NOW FAVORS EARLY GENERAL ELECTION

CAPT. BURNHAM'S SPEECH

The Toronto morning papers in the despatches from Ottawa in today's issues, make special mention of the speech delivered by Captain Burnham in Parliament on the Conscription Bill, a report of which address is given in another column. Among the comments by the parliamentary reporters are the following:

Toronto World: "Mr. Burnham (West Peterborough) favored in a general way both the conscription of men and the conscription of wealth, but wanted a mandate from the people by way of a general election. He announced that he would vote against the Laurier amendment."

The Mail and Empire: "J. H. Burnham, of West Peterborough, who a week ago intimated that he would not support the bill, because it did not conscript wealth as well as man power, followed with a speech that was chiefly marked by a lengthy and involved argument that if a mandate from the people was necessary it should be a mandate given by way of a general election rather than a referendum. The Government should assume responsibility and not try any 'artful dodger process' such as a referendum. There could be no question of justification of the Government's course in going to the people if that was decided upon."

The Globe: "Capt. J. H. Burnham (West Peterborough) declared the six months' hoist proposal was 'beneath contempt.' The referendum he was willing to discuss. He believed it was necessary to get the verdict of the people, and it would be better to get it in a straightforward and manly way. Captain Burnham favored the organization of the resources of the country so that the financial slackers, as well as other slackers, would be compelled to do their bit."

In Speech in house Says That Referendum Amendment is beneath Contempt---Insists on Conscription of Wealth.

The following is a synopsis of Mr. Burnham's remarks in the debate on the Laurier amendment calling for a referendum on the Military Service Bill:—

The amendment is in few words and calls for a referendum. If there is to be a reference to the people it is contended by both the Prime Minister and Sir George Foster that it ought not to be by means of a referendum but a general election. Rightly or wrongly, this is their offer, and therefore, strictly speaking, the present debate is on the question whether it shall be election or referendum. As in a referendum, no one is responsible. An answer in the affirmative would leave the present Government in power, but an answer in the negative would leave the situation nowhere. Whom then could be sent for by the Governor-General to form a government. The Nationalists? That would show the futility of the referendum. It must, if anything at all which we had all hoped to avoid, be an Election. Let us examine then exactly what the Prime Minister and Sir George Foster did say.

An Election Justified

The justification for such a reference to the people as the Prime Minister proposed is plain. After all the basis of all our action and contemplated action is the people. They not only do the actual fighting but they do the work of furnishing supplies and pay the bulk of taxes. They also have the franchise and can say what they want done, and thus they furnish the moral and political power likewise. As Balfour says: "If Democracy fails us now, then we are indeed undone".

Nation Must be Organized

But to fight as a nation and to fight strongly a nation, just as an army, must be organized. What is organization? The men on the fighting line are not the whole of the army. The administration, the supplies of money, of food, equipment, and of ammunition, the hospitals, etc., help to make up the force in the field. Each of these must have its counterpart at home. The home centres keep replenishing the stock, and, therefore, all the home centres must do what they can to do their share. If a man has sons and daughters he sends them as fighting-men or nurses, or they work at home or as directed by the administration, or in some other way do their share. In war time the whole nation is at war, not part of it, and if part of it is still unwilling, if it is the minor part, it must give in. That is the law of Democracy. The majority rules.

Minority Must Face The Music

The stability of a nation depends upon the fairness with which its affairs are administered. It is not expected that the administration of a war or of national affairs will be above criticism. But that administration must be sincere and humane. When the nation speaks there is no excuse for a minority's backing up. It must face the music. It may tremble; it may be fearful; it may hate the job; it may prefer platform oratory or politics, or pink teas or the pleasures of peace, but it cannot be allowed to drag the majority with it. If there is any dragging the majority must and will do it.

The Welchers

Bearing this in mind then, we must see that all parts of the nation contribute their share and do their duty. That is organization. Whoever refuses to endorse the providing

CONSTABLES' FEES ARE DISCUSSED IN COUNCIL

Officers Who Helped Run Down Cattle Thieves Want Their Pay---Committee on Equalization in Session.

The County Council this morning resolved itself into a session of the finance committee, where a number of accounts for different items were ordered paid.

A number of claims outstanding against the county for expenses of constables in connection with the apprehension of the Hills and Clarence Sampson were discussed. County Treasurer Elliott cannot pay them without the order of a magistrate or the board of audit.

Reeve Darling asked regarding the expenses of witnesses who were asked to go to London and St. Catharines to identify hides. County Solicitor Peck informed him that an application by Crown Attorney Hatton to the Attorney General would likely result in an order for payment.

The county constables who were interested in having their fees paid are J. Pufferof, Norwood; Wm. Dickson, of Westwood; and Detective Newhall.

The two former, according to Reeve Squire received their instructions to go on the search from acting High Constable Moore.

TO EQUALIZE ASSESSMENT

The committee on equalization of assessment of the County Council held a session this morning, and endeavored to reach an adjustment of the Equalized Assessment so that the total would be greater than the total of the aggregate local assessment. Some of the townships will fare very badly in their school grants if the assessment is raised, and the villages of Havelock, Norwood and Lakefield think that their rating is high enough as it is.

An increase in Otonabee, Smith, Douro, Monaghan, Asphodel, Ennismore of two per cent, would be sufficient if the balance of the municipalities were satisfied to stand an increase.

The adjustment must be made at this session and the council are debating the matter this afternoon.

MADMAN SHOOTS FOUR TO DEATH

FARM HAND THEN DROVE TO TOWN AND SURRENDERED.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WATERTOWN, N.Y., June 22.—Frank Driggs, a farm hand 25 years old, killed four persons at the Doctor Buck farm in the town of Stockholm last night. He murdered them with a rifle. The victims were Henry LaDue, James LaDue, Mrs. Josephine Rogers, a sister of LaDue brothers and Dr. Theron Jenkins, who was called to the house to administer to Driggs professionally.

After the murder Driggs gagged Harriet LaDue, niece of the LaDue brothers, aged 18, placed her in the bottom of a wagon and drove to Potsdam, ten miles distant, where he surrendered.

The girl who witnessed the murder of her relatives told a dramatic story of the tragedy and then collapsed.

Driggs has been subject to fits of melancholy and is thought to be deranged. Though quiet, it was said he became enraged at trifles.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, JUNE 22, 1917

CAPTAIN BURNHAM FOR AN ELECTION.

IN HIS SPEECH in Parliament last night on the Conscription Bill, Captain Burnham takes the same position as that of Premier Borden and Sir George Foster as between a referendum or a general election. The first would lead nowhere. The latter would be decisive, whatever the result. Conscription would be the issue in every constituency in the Dominion just as clearly as in the taking of a referendum.

If conscription alone were submitted to a vote and the people endorsed it, the standing of the so-called moribund government would be unchanged, and it is not likely that the section of the Oppositoin that is now opposed to an extension would agree to it, even with conscription approved as that Government's war policy.

If conscription was defeated by a referendum vote, the Government would be forced to resign, just as it will be if the majority goes against it when the question is voted on in the House. An election then would be necessary and the national unrest and agony would be prolonged. As between two evils, a referendum and an election, the lesser should be chosen. There is a question, however, whether there is a popular demand for either, although Captain Burnham appears to go a step further than his leaders and favors an early appeal to the electorate.

The Toronto Globe and Star are opposed to either an election or a referendum. The Government is receiving the support of both these journals on the momentous question now before Canada. Partisanship has given way to patriotism of the first water. There are Liberals in the House who will vote with the Government when the test comes on this measure. These Liberals will, it is safe to assume, vote in favor of an extension of Parliament, and the point has been raised that a majority vote of the House is all that is required to give the Government a new lease of life.

The sentiment of the best element of Canadians today as reflected in the newspapers is unalterably opposed to either an election or a referendum. One would be as deplorable as the other, even though the first alone would be conclusive. Winning the war is the present great national duty, and the plan adopted by the Government to accomplish that end is endorsed by the best men in both parties.

Captain Burnham devotes considerable of his speech to advocating the conscription of wealth. That issue is no longer a factor in the debate, as the Government's attitude on this question is understood. When the men are raised for national defence, the money to maintain them will be forthcoming, money raised from those best able to stand the strain. In the meantime, the call is for recruits. The real question should not be clouded by dragging in what are really side issues.

THE ENTRANCE EXAMINATION.

EVEN THE CRITICS of our educational system must admit, after a glance at the Entrance examination papers so far submitted to the candidates, that the rising generation are receiving practical instruction in the public schools. Any boy or girl who is able to successfully stand the test is possessed of an education rather above the average, even if no higher course is taken in the Collegiate Institutes.

The local educationists say that the paper on arithmetic, which was one of the tests yesterday, was eminently fair and free from those vexing pitfalls that have in the past so effectively trapped the unwary. The only objection that can be possibly urged against it is that it appeals more to pupils in the rural than in the city schools.

At all events, the farmers of Ontario cannot assert that their children are not receiving training that will be invaluable to them if they decide to take up the vocation of their fathers. The boy who passes on that paper will be able to solve almost any problem that arises in the course of his business life. If he intends to fence a field, he can make to a cent an estimate of the cost, and know just where he is at before he pays out money for a single post or orders a pound of wire. If his talent runs in the direction of livestock, he will be able to tell whether he wins or loses on his every investment. Profit or loss, so far as his orchard is concerned, will not be a sealed proposition to him. If he buys land on time, he will be able to figure the interest down to a fraction, and will not be compelled to call in an expert to draw up legal forms of either receipts or promissory notes. In the event of his house being destroyed by fire, he can take the insurance into consideration, and figure out just in what financial shape the catastrophe leaves him. Suppose he rents a freight car in which to send grain to market. He can take the measurements of the car and easily compute just how much wheat he has in it when it is loaded. The successful candidate, too, will be able to keep accurate accounts if he runs a bill with his merchant in town, and so avoid exasperating disputes when the day for settlement arrives.

There is certainly little fault to be found with a system of education which so equips the pupil for the business of life. The paper on literature, too, shows that the study of this most important subject is not being neglected. The candidate who takes even a fair stand on that paper should be able to read the editorials in some of the big Toronto dailies with at least a tolerable degree of understanding, and no greater tax could be imposed upon the human mind than that.

THE SUBMARINE MENACE.

SOME OF THE AMERICAN papers are given to boast of what the United States is doing and will be able to do in handling the menace of the German subs. If there is one of the Allied Nations more than another who should regard this department of war work peculiarly its own, that nation is the United States, which was so often made the victim of Hun piracy long before the Americans took an active part in the war.

The newspapers of the United States claim that their shipyards can turn out vessels for the carrying trade faster than Germany is able to sink them. There is little comfort in such a remedy. In the first place it is too costly, and again it falls far short in restoring the highways of the seas to their original position as safe thoroughfares.

A man whose house was burned by an incendiary enemy might comfort himself with the reflection that he was financially able to build a residence just as often as one was destroyed or that he was even able to put them up faster than his enemy could burn them. Such a policy would avail him little if just as soon as he got settled in a new place it went up in flames and he was obliged to move to another.

Let Edison do it. The hope of the civilised world, as well as that of his nation, centres upon the wizard inventor. There never was a force yet put into operation in the world, but some agency was sooner or later discovered to combat it. Edison may yet find something to deal effectively with the modern sub. Whether he does or not, some other policy than a race in shipbuilding must be adopted to offset the danger. The evil must be rooted out at its source, and, as some naval experts have always contended, the bases of the subs must be destroyed at any hazard.

THE KAISER AND DIVINE RIGHT.

IN A COMMUNICATION to ex-King Constantine soon after his deluded relative by marriage was packed out of Greece by way of the back door, the Kaiser gives vent to his feelings in the following terms: "I have heard with wrath of the infamous outrage committed by our common enemy upon you and upon your dynasty. I assure you that your deprivation can be only temporary. The mailed fist of Germany, with further aid from Almighty God, will restore you to your throne, of which no man by right can rob you."

With the modesty and reverence for which he has been so long noted, the Kaiser gives himself precedence over the Almighty. He hears with wrath of the outrage upon a sovereign, while the reports of the outrages upon the helpless Belgians fail to ruffle his feelings. What further proof is needed that the man is a monster, a danger to civilization, a degenerate, not only unfit to be trusted with the power of an autocrat but even to be allowed at large?

Rev. T. H. Mitchell, preaching in this city Sunday night, said that the Lord needed help to work out His plans. He is not, however, likely to tolerate as one of His aides, the man who has ravished a peaceful world and paved the bottom of the ocean with the skulls of innocent babes, a Herod whose murders and pillage have filled the corners of the earth with the wailings of Rachel who refuses to be comforted.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Watters' Preference.

(Ottawa Journal-Press.)

"Shackled with the chains of conscription," says J. C. Watters, evidently preferring a spiked helmet and the goose-step.

When Necessary.

(Toronto News.)

We may have to mobolise securities and employ many other financial devices which as yet have not become necessary. We may have to go much further in conscription of wealth than many of those who use the phrase so glibly imagine. But in the meantime we must take care that conscription of wealth does not become the mere cry of partisans to save a political leader and a party organization.

HORSES FOR INSPECTION

An important meeting of horsemen was held in Toronto last week. Representatives of the various Horse Record Associations, including Wm. Smith, M.P., Robert Graham, H. M. Robinson, Jno. A. Boag, Peter Christie, James A. Torrence, Fred Richardson, E. C. H. Tisdale, G. S. McColl and others were present. H. S. Arkell, acting live stock commissioner, J. W. Brant, accountant National Record Office, and Geo. Pepper, of the live stock branch, Ottawa, were also present. The business for which the meeting was called was to discuss the proposed increase in freight rates announced by the railways. On motion Peter White, K.C., and Geo. Pepper were engaged to present the case for the live stock interests before the Railway Commission at its next sesion in Toronto. Peter White will represent the stock men through the National Record Board, so that all live stock interests will be fully represented and will have the active co-operation of the Dominion Live Stock Branch.

The meeting was fovored by several members of the British Remount Commission, now in Canada, buying horses for the British army with a view of effecting a better arrangement for assembling horses than has hitherto prevailed, and of endeavoring to bring the farmer who has horses to sell in more direct touch with the remount officer. The Hon. Mr. Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, asked members of the British Remount Commission to be present and discuss ways and means of effecting this object. They were introduced to the horsemen by Wm. Smith, who represented the minister, and were as follows: General Neill, Charles McNeill, staff officer British Remount Commission; Col. Carruthers, representing the Canadian Government, and the Chief Inspector for British Remounts.

British Authorities Will Co-operate

Members of the British Commission expressed their willingness to co-operate with the horsemen in every way possible in working out some practical scheme that would enable them to buy horses for army purposes direct from the farmers. All they asked was that horses be assembled in sufficient numbers at local points to warrant sending an inspector to make selections. The number required is one hundred.

General Neill, in addressing the meeting stated the commission was very desirous of opening a market for Canadian horses. Since the war a great many of the best horses had gone out of the country. Of the Clydesdale horses sent to France 65 per cent. were still alive. The Canadian Clydesdale purchased were not heavy, weighing about 1,400 pounds. They had proved satisfactory in France, but were used only on heavy guns. Up-to-date 78,000 horses in all had been shipped out of Canada for war purposes, including 21,000 for Canadian forces, 40,000 for British and 15,000 for French. The loss of horses in England and on the battle field averaged about 12 per cent. He stated that there will be a demand for army horses after the war is over. Any extra expense in assembling must be borne by the Canadian Government.

Kind of Horses Wanted

Mr. McNeill addresed the gathering at some length, describing the types wanted, and giving some information upon how they are bred in the United States and elsewhere. The British Commission is at present buying only two classes of horses in Canada—heavy artillery and horse and field infantry. These types he described as follows:—

Heavy Artillery:—Weight not less than 1,500 pounds, height not over 16.2, but 16 hands preferred, short-backed, well-ribbed up, straight hind legs. This type is only required to move at a walk, and with a very heavy load. Price $220.

Horse and Field Artillery:—Height 15.1 to 16 hands, weight about 1,200 pounds. Should be active, short backed, short-legged, straight hind legs; sound hocks essential. They are often required to gallop hard for short distances. The more quality the better. Half of them are ridden. Price $190.

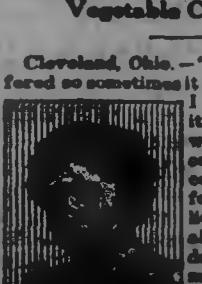
Mr. McNeill stated that it was hard to lay down hard and fast rules regarding weights of horse and field artillery types. This was left largely to the judgment of the inspector, who kept the weights between 1,200 and 1,400 pounds. The ages required are from six to nine years, though in some cases well-matured five-year olds were taken. With regard to color, dark greys are admissable, but on no account are very light and washy colored horses accepted. Horses must be in good working condition, not too fat, nor too lean. The chief defects which would cause an inspector to reject them are as follows: Unmanageable or vicious horses, crib biters, wind suckers, parrot-mouthed or under-shot horses, horses with capped elbows, signs of brushing, damaged knees, injured or deficient teeth and curby hocks.

From 100 to 150 horses are require to be assembled at one point to warrant inspection. In the United States the numbers assembled for inspection were from 200 to 300, but the commission desired to make things as easy as possible for Canada, and had reduced the number required by one-half. They were willing to buy at any point where the horses are assembled.

Action Decided Upon

With this information at its disposal and the expressed willingness of the British Commission to inspect and buy at any point where sufficient horses are assembled, opened the way for definite action on the part of the horsemen in working out a plan for assembling horses at points in Ontario. The Acting Live Stock Commissoner, H. S. Arkell, will take up the matter with the other provinces with a view to working out an effective plan for assembling horses.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted:—That E. C. H. Tisdale be chairman of a special committee to co-operate with the Acting Live Stock Commissioner and Colonel Carruthers, representing the Canadian Government in locating and assembling horses suitable for military purposes in Ontario, and that the other members of the committee be Ed. Jones, Robert Graham, Wm. Smith, M.P., C. F. Bailey, H. S. Arkell and Col. Carruthers. H. M. Robinson, 862 Broadview Avenue, Toronto, was appointed secretary of the committee, who will be glad to hear from horsemen in regard to assembling horses.



FOUR WEEKS IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Brown Finally Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cleveland, Ohio.—"For years I suffered so sometimes it seemed as though I could not stand it any longer. It was all in my lower organs. At times I could hardly walk, for if I stepped on a little stone I would almost faint. One day I did faint and my husband was sent for and the doctor came. I was taken to the hospital and stayed four weeks but when I came home I would faint just the same and had the same pains.

A friend who is a nurse said for me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began taking it that very day for I was suffering a great deal. It has already done me more good than the hospital. To anyone who is suffering as I was my advice is to stop in the first drug-store and get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before you go home."—Mrs. W. C. Brown, 1109 Auburn Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

Wit and Wisdom

Safety First.

"Yes, sir," said the station master, "safety first has spread all over this country. And nobody that comes to Beaver Hill will ever git in no accidents for want o' warnin' signs about. Jest look at that, now."

The stranger gazed appreciatively at the sign nailed on a nearby telegraph post. Its stern message was:

"It is dangerous to walk or stand on these tracks while a train is passing."

His Retort.

Two Englishmen were one day walking along a road in Kerry, when they met an Irishman.

"How many of us are here now?" they asked, jokingly.

"I'm not such an omadhaun as all that," said Pat. "There's one hundred of us."

"Oh," said the Englishman, "how do you make out that?"

"Well," said Pat, "I am the one, and you are the two naughts."

"Look here, Snip!" said Slowpay indignantly to his tailor. "You haven't put any pockets in these trousers!"

"No, Mr. Slowpay," said the tailor with a sigh. "I judged from your account here that you never had anything to put in them."

The One Thing Needed.

"What do we need for dinner, Maggie?" asked the mistress as the maid appeared at the door of the room.

"A new set av dishes, mum," answered Maggie, lugubriously. "Oi've jest tripped over the edge av th' rug."

A lean waman and a fat one nearly always envy each other.

A PLEA FOR THE LOWLY ONION

"I can't eat onions," is a not uncommon expression, and many people seem to think it is aristocratic to show a dislike for all forms of onions, white and green. The author knew recently a woman well past 30 who had never in her life eaten stewed onions! She had always confined their use to a seasoning for soups and had never appreciated how delicious they were served as a vegetable.

The onion family is extensive and consists of onions as we knew them—then scallion, which is a form of young green onion; the leek, which is a full grown different variety; the garlic, beloved abroad; chives and shallots, a thin grass-like form with onion flavor, but no bulb.

All of the family are noted for the flavor, which is made by volatile oils and the sulphur present. Now, it is this sulphur and other mineral salts which are so cleansing to the blood and so healthful. The old French saying advises one to eat a raw onion every night before going to bed, and another saying is that those who eat onions will never need medicine.

The famliar bulb onion, either red, white, or yellow, can be boiled and creamed to great advantage. So can the Bermuda onion, which will be plentiful soon and which is alike delicious cooked or when served raw as a salad. Leeks and scallons both can be boiled, tops and all, and served like asparagus hot or cold. He who has not tasted a dish of carefully cooked scallions with a real cream sauce cannot believe the delicacy and deliciousness of the flavor.

A dish of stuffed Bermuda onions is worthy a place at even a Sunday dinner, and can serve both as meat and vegetable. To make it the onions should be peeled and parboiled whole, then have a forcemeat ready of any chopped leftover meat, bread crumbs and seasoning held together with egg. Remove the inner three or four rings of the boiled onions, fill with the forcemeat, add some of the onion liquor and bake in a deep dish. About fifteen minutes before serving hot with buttered crumbs. Serve in the baking dish.

Dinner.

Stuffed Heart—Mix a cup and a half of bread crumbs, quarter of a pound of suet, chopped fine, a tablespoon each of minced parsley and sweet peppers, the grated rind and juice of half a lemon, salt and pepper, and a little nutmeg. 1—By saving, stinting, sacrificing; fighting the world at every turn, battling the blows of business competition; running the risk of fire, theft, embezzlement and misfortune; skimping your family, and yourself maybe, and standing only one chance in twenty of reaching Old Age without being dependent upon others for support.

2 By securing a Life Insurance Policy. A Policy which guarantees to pay your Beneficiary at your death, either a definite lump sum or an income every month as long as she lives— an income that is fixed, certain, regular, inalienable, unassailable, untaxable, and which cannot be lost, sold, dissipated, squandered or mortgaged.

Which is the EASIER and MORE SENSIBLE Way to Acquire an Estate?

TWO WAYS TO BEQUEATH AN ESTATE

1—By Testamentary Document: Requires an Executor. Must go through legal red tape at court. Requires court costs. May require months or years to settle. This kind of Will can be broken or set aside. Property is subject to attachment for debts of the deceased.

2—By Life Insurance (when the Beneficiary is named): Requires no executor or administrator—you are your own executor, your own administrator. No need of court proceedings—no expense of court costs. Does not require time to settle. This is a Will direct which no lawyer can break nor court set aside. Policy is not subject to attachment for debts of the deceased.

APPETITES OF RULERS.

Good old roast beef is the favorite dish of the Queen of Holland. She is also partial to mutton. The late Czar of Russia has a great fondness for all kinds of fish, especially codfish seasoned with oil, pepper, and garlic. He once remarked to a late President of France that he could "eat codlings twice a day"! The Kings of Italy and Spain both have weaknesses for sweets, such as whipped cream, chocolate and tarts. King Victor Emmanuel is also fond of the Italian national dish called polenta. This is a kind of meal porridge. The late Pope considered polenta to be his favorite dish. He was an exceedingly plain eater. The late Emperor of Austra had a craving for the peculiar dish of calves' tongues in red wine. The German Emperor is exceptionally susceptible to the temptation of well-buttered toast.

COOKING PRUNE CAKE.

One-half cup of shortening, 1 cup of sugar, 1 egg (omit when eggs are expensive), 1 cup of prunes (cooked), 1 cup of prune juice, 2½ cups of flour, 1 teaspoon of cinnamon. Cream shortening, add sugar and mix until creamy. Remove stones from prunes and add them to the creamed shortening and sugar, add egg and prune juice, then add dry ingredients mixed and sifted together; beat well. This may be baked in a loaf, square biscuit pan or in layers. If baked in layers, a white or cream filling is best.

CORN DODGERS.

Sift four cups of sweet cornmeal, add a teaspoonful of salt and stir in cold water. Kneading all the time until the mixture is of the consistency to be easily moulded with the hands into little oblong-shaped cakes. Place these cakes in a baking pan and bake until a brown crust has been formed. This is an excellent breakfast dish served with strained honey or maple syrup.

When You Market Consider Your Less Fortunate Neighbor.

"Every citizen who uses more in his household than his household actually needs is increasing the cost of living for those less fortunate, and he is hindering the prosecution of the war."
Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance.

THE well-to-do woman who sits at her phone and orders provisions lavishly, regardless of price, is abusing the power of money as a bully abuses brute strength!

No longer can we help ourselves as we see fit from an unlimited food supply—we are either limiting our buying to our own real needs or "hogging" someone else's share.

Extravagant buying by those who can afford it, with waste in some kitchens, and excess at some tables, will inevitably bring still greater hardships to those who cannot afford the prices, and hunger to those who must live on less.

Buy for your household as carefully and economically as your husband buys for his factory, store or office. Study food values as well as prices—make it a point to know just what you are getting—eliminate waste—and you'll find that you can feed your family well on far less than you spend now.

Bishop O'Brien Presents Diplomas and Speaks in Praise of the Profession the Young Ladies Are About to Enter.

Misses Laura O'Brien, Alice Maloney and Theresa Fallon have been granted their diplomas and medals as nurses and are now ready to take up the highest of all earthly vocations, the care of the sick and helpless. The graduating exercises were held at St. Joseph's hospital last night in which institution the young ladies received their training, and the medals and diplomas were presented by Bishop O'Brien, who spoke to each recipient a few kindly words of encouragement and congratulations. The reception room in which the exercises were held was beautifully decorated with flowers and there was a large attendance of friends, clergymen and physicians.

Dr. McNulty, who presided, made an address in which he praised the work that is done by trained nurses and spoke of how that profession has risen in the esteem of the public since the war broke out and women in the uniform of the order have distinguished themselves by acts of heroism.

A splendid musical program was rendered in which the following well-known artists took part and every number of which was heartily encored: Instrumental solo, Miss E. Sullivan; solo, Miss E. Leahy; instrumental duet, Misses Leahy and McAuley; solo, E. Hanrahan, who sang as a response "Mother Machree," the selection that never fails to entrance his audience when rendered in his inimitable style; solo, Miss O'Donnell and an instrumental solo by Miss M. Lonergan. Mr. E. Deseautels rendered with admirable expression and faultless diction two of the always popular dialect poems by Dr. Drummond.

The Bishop's Address.

In presenting the medals and diplomas Bishop O'Brien praised the profession which the young ladies are now equipped to enter. He said it dated not from the days of Florence Nightingale but from the very foundation of the Christian religion itself.

Rev. Father McGuire of Ennismore made one of his characteristic speeches sparkling with Celtic wit, and addresses were also made by Rev. Father O'Brien, McAuley, Ferguson of Warkworth and by Drs. McClelland, Neal, Gallivan, and others. Dr. Neal, who has just returned from a course in a Cleveland hospital, was in a position to speak for the superiority of the medical and nursing professions in Canada over those of the American members of the vocation.

After the singing of the National Anthem dainty refreshments were served and a pleasant social hour was spent.

CLOSING EXERCISES AT THE LAKEFIELD PREPARATORY SCHOOL

The closing exercises in connection with the Grove School, the Lakefield Preparatory School for boys, was held last evening with a large representation of the parents and the pupils present.

The occasion is always one of great importance, particularly to those boys who have been very apt in the studies and have carried off the high honors of the school. It is equally delightful to the parents to be present and hear the words of praise which are given to the boys who are leaving the school to attend the higher educational institutions of the Dominion.

Those present last evening were Rev. A. W. and Mrs. Mackenzie, Mr. and Mrs. Strickland, Mr. and Mrs. Hilliard, Mr. and Mrs. H. Fitzgerald, Mr. and Mrs. Fawcett Valentine, Dr. and Mrs. Lingwood, Rev. H. and Mrs. Britten, Mrs. A. D. George, Fort Francis; Mr. Todd, Mrs. Marling, Mrs. Roper, Ottawa, Cadet K. A. Mackenzie, R.N.C., Mrs. Wallace Nesbitt, Mrs. and Miss Atwood, Mrs. Massie, Mrs. Hope, Miss Trail, Mr. Munroe, Mrs. Wainwright, Winnipeg, Mr. and Mrs. Heron, Mrs. H. D. Robertson, Mr. and Mrs. Tate, Mr. P. A. C. Ketchum, Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Langley, Mrs. Claude Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Stratton and others.

Addresses were made by Rev. A. W. Mackenzie, Mr. G. B. Hilliard and Mr. A. H. Stratton.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies attending the closing the boys all joined in giving three cheers for Capt. Marling, formerly assistant master of the school, but now at the front somewhere in France.

NEW EMBARGO ON SHIPPING COAL

AMERICAN ROADS TO KEEP CARS ON THEIR OWN TRACKS.

TORONTO, June 22.—An embargo placed by the Pennsylvania Railroad against letting steel hopper cars go off its own road has increased the difficulties of getting coal into Ontario from the United States mines, according to information that was received from Buffalo dealers yesterday. It is also understood that similar embargoes are contemplated by the New York Central and Lehigh Valley Railroads.

The reason given for the embargo is that it will enable short freight, such as coal, to be delivered at loading points for water shipment. The P. R. R. will give no information as to when shippers may expect this embargo to be lifted. This is the principal road for soft coal entering Canada for manufacturing purposes, and the present embargo is particularly hard on the soft coal consumer, who is trying to get a little supply ahead for the fall and winter.

WARNING NOTE FROM QUEBEC

MEMBER SAYS PROVINCE WILL FIGHT CONSCRIPTION TO LIMIT.

OTTAWA, June 22. — Louis Gauthier, Liberal member for St. Hyacinthe, Que., said last night in the House of Commons: —

"This is one of the most solemn hours of my life. It may be the last opportunity afforded me to address the House of Commons of my country. If you press the passage of this bill my people, declaring that this government has no mandate, will use the very bill to fight it out. There will be suffering; there will be pain. They may have to go to the direst consequences, but my people will go to the limit if you impose this legislation. I believe they will be right and I will do as they intend to do."

Mr. Max Schleuter, who has been connected with the Cressman Co., Limited, for nine years, leaves on Tuesday for Preston to conduct a business in that city.

The address was as follows:

Mr. Max Schleuter:

Dear Friend: For nine years you have been associated with us in our business duties. Some in our midst witnessed your arrival, and you in turn witnessed the coming of others. Those of long and short acquaintance alike unite in expressing regret that circumstances necessitate your departure.

This occasion has presented an opportunity for us to convey our appreciation of the cheerfulness and good fellowship that have been so characteristically yours. Therefore, we ask you to accept this writing desk, which inadequately expresses our sentiments.

Trusting that continued success will greet you in your new field of endeavor, we remain,

Where close the curving mountains drew
To clasp the stream in their embrace.
With every outline, curve, and hue,
Reflected in its placid face.

The ploughman stopped his team to watch
The train, as swift it thundered by;
Some distance glimpse of life to catch.
He strains his eager, wistful eye.

His glossy horses mildly stand
With wonder in their patient eyes,
As through the tranquil mountain land
The snorting monster onward flies.

The morning freshness is on him,
Just wakened from his balmy dreams;
The wayfarers all soiled and dim,
Think longingly of mountain streams:—

O for the joyous mountain air!
The long delightful autumn day
Among the hills!—the ploughman there
Must have perpetual holiday!

And he, as all day long he glides
His steady plough with patient hand,
Thinks of the flying train that glides
Into some fair, enchanted land;

Where day by day no plodding round
Wearies the frame and dulls the mind;
Where life thrills keen to sight and sound,
With plough and furrows left behind!

Even so to reach the untrod ways
Of life are touched by fancy's glow.
That ever sheds its brightest rays
Upon the page we do not know!

9. (a) What is the subject of the first three stanzas?

(b) What is the subject (i) of stanzas 4 and 5 and (ii) of stanzas 6 and 7?

10. Give in your own words, the main thought expressed in the poem.

11. Explain:—

(a) every outline, curve, and hue, reflected in its placid face (lines 3, 4);

(b) tranquil (line 11);

(c) snorting monster (line 12);

(d) wayfarers (line 15);

(e) perpetual holiday (line 20);

(f) some fair, enchanted land (line 24).

Where are the swallows fled?
Frozen and dead,
Perchance upon some bleak and stormy shore.
O doubting heart!
Far over purple seas
They wait, in sunny ease,
The balmy sunny breeze,
To bring to their northern homes once more.

Why do the flowers die?
Prisoned they lie
In the cold tomb, heedless of tears or rain.
O doubting heart!
They only sleep below
The soft white ermine snow,
While winter winds shall blow,—
To breathe and smile upon you soon again.

The sun has hid his rays
These many days;
Will dreary hours never leave the earth?
O doubting heart!
The stormy clouds on high
Veil the same sunny sky,
That soon, for spring is nigh,
Shall wake the summer into golden mirth,

Fair hope is dead, and light
Is quenched in night;
What sound can break the silence of despair?
O doubting heart!
The sky is overcast,
Yet stars shall rise at last,
Brighter for darkness past
And angels' silver voices stir the air.

9. Give in your own words the main thought expressed in each stanza.

10. What does the poem teach?

11. Explain:—

(a) in sunny ease (line 6);

(b) Prisoned they lie in the cold tomb (lines 10,11);

(c) ermine snow (line 14);

(d) to breathe and smile (line 16);

(e) wake the summer into golden mirth (line 24);

(f) quenched in night (line 26);

(g) brighter for darkness past 31(.

of the funds, and refuses to contribute as his means allow, refuses to organize. He really refuses to fight, even in so far as he is able to fight. He is a financial coward—a welcher. He will not do his share. Those who refuse to provide the men also refuse to organize. They refuse to do their share also. Such fundamental failures as these denote national disorganization and decay, if not worse. Must we say that the best have gone, leaving the dregs behind? As the Minister of Trade so splendidly said, let us all take a strong, responsible, manly stand, if necessary, go to the people, but not as dodgers and self-seeking politicians, but recognizing the extremely serious need of the hour.

Let All Do Their Part

When the people have approved, who can stand in the way? A strong, united people, knowing their business, and stout of heart, and impressed with the fairness of all concerned, will move forward with immensely improved vigor, if, in addition to their goodwill, they have capable, just administrators of that goodwill. Let no man welch. Let all come forward with themselves, their sons, their daughters, their jewels, their possessions, their resources. Let none try to escape, and with a brave heart in a great cause who shall say nay? We have all had a lead given us by those brave men who have gone to the front. Let us follow it whether we are British or French; and once again let no man plead that he is willing that another man shall give all in the world that he has, but that he himself cannot do so, because he only knows what the conscription of men means; he does not know what the conscription of wealth means. Such men are welchers wherever they are, and are like those who say this is not our war. Well, if this is not their war, what war is it? Would they ask others to help them and they not help others? Such talk sounds like fear and meanness. It is not courage, and it is not justice, or mercy, or sympathy, or any other thing than selfishness and degeneracy. If we must go to the country, let us go, and let us hurry, for I am persuaded that under such conditions there can be only one answer. It will be a good thing for the war and a good thing for Canada to get it settled.

When Conscription is Not Compulsion

There are a few facts that must be borne well in mind in considering the bill. One is that conscription or compulsion ceases to be such when it becomes the will of the people. The other is that if we trust our judges and juries with the administration of justice, and with our lives and properties, we can safely trust them with the selective draft. The apportionment of numbers to districts all on the simple principle of a just proportionate yield will necessarily provide for the rest. If the country is to be united and strong, no class must be exempt from service and sacrifice. It must also be remembered that it is not those alone who are highly optimistic who oppose an election, but those also who want Canada's support to be broken up and go down in disorder and confusion.

Those overseas who write to someone—and who is there who does not—can vote just as easily as they can write.

Soldiers Can Vote

Flavelle, high in the confidence of the Imperial Government, has said to Canada to be careful about her men, or he will fall away in munitions. This warning is both a warning and an excuse. It should give some of us pause, and it gives others the excuse they have been looking for, viz., to make a protest. However, all these difficulties that time has brought forth can be settled. No soldier is on the fighting line for more than ten days. All can vote. Let it be a definite question, and it can easily get a definite answer. But come on with it.

KING DESIGNS TWO NEW ORDERS

WOMEN WHO WORK FOR EMPIRE HAVE CHANCE FOR TITLES.

LONDON, June 22.—Orders of chivalry open to women will be one of the outcomes of the war. It is announced that in recognition of the manifold services rendered in connection with the war, both by British subjects and their allies, the King has been pleased to institute two new orders. The first is an order of knighthood styled "Order of the British Empire"; it will follow the precedents of other similar orders and consist of five classes or grades and will be awarded both to women and men for services rendered to the empire at home or abroad. The first two classes will, in the case of men, carry the honor of knighthood, and in the case of women, the privilege of prefixing the title "dame" to their names.

The second order which will be closely restricted as to numbers, will be entitled "Order of Companions of Honor." It will consist of one class only, to which women will be eligible equally with the men. It will carry no title.

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY SYSTEM.

Marie, Fort William, Port Arthur and Duluth.

There is a Commercial Value in the Luxuries of Dress and it Pays a Man to Cultivate a Taste for it.

The success of many a prominent business and professional man can be traced to the time he chanced into a clothes shop and was induced to put a few extra dollars into a suit of clothes.

We young men in the prime of life are prone to picture ourselves like those we expect or hope to be. Why, then, should we not dress for the part? Shabby clothes don't go with the successful man. What is more natural than that the man who wants to be successful should know the value of feeling and appearing so? When he once has felt the pleasure of looking the part, the virus of success is at work in him and sooner or later he is sure to be heard of.

The Canadian Young Man is to-day the best dressed in the world, both in quality and design. His success dates, however, from the time he begins to show discrimination in his clothes.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

WILMER—CALLAHAN.

St. Luke's Roman Catholic Church, Downeyville, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Tuesday morning, at nine o'clock, when Kathleen, youngest daughter of Mr. Patrick and the late Mrs. Callahan was united in marriage to John F. Wilmer, of Mimico, Ont. The Rev. Father Galvin performed the ceremony, and the bride's cousin served mass, after which the former presented both bride and groom with prayer books. Mrs. Costello, of Downeyville, played the wedding march, and during the signing of the register, Mr. Costello sang "O Salutaris." The bride wore white crepe de chine, with white hat to match, and carried white roses and lilies. Her bridesmaid, Miss Evelyn O'Neill, wore champagne silk and carried carnations; she also wore the groom's gift, a sunburst of pearls with diamond centre. Mr. Martin Murphy acted as best man. A reception was held by Miss Irene Callahan, sister of the bride, assisted by the bride's godmother. Later in the evening the happy young couple left for a tour to Chicago and points in Indiana, the bride traveling in a navy blue suit with hat to match. On their return they will reside in Mimico.

CARSON—STEWART.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Stewart, 406 Sheridan street, was the scene of a very quiet wedding on Thursday evening, June 21st, when their eldest daughter, Bessie, became the bride of Mr. Ralph B. Carson, son of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. G. Carson, of Halifax. Promptly at 6 o'clock the bride, looking very sweet gowned in white and wearing the customary veil, entered the beautifully decorated drawing-room, leaning on the arm of her father, to the strains of the wedding march played by her little sister, Laura. The attendants of the bride were Miss Belle Thompson, of Hastings, as bridesmaid, and little Helen Thompson, of Toronto, who made a charming flower girl, while Mr. W. D. Stewart ably supported the groom. During the signing of the register Miss Annie Waddell sang beautifully "A Perfect Day," after which all adjourned to the dining-room, where full justice was done to an excellent dinner. The happy couple left on the midnight train for Halifax, where they will spend their honeymoon, and on their return will reside at 406 Sheridan street.

OTONABEE CHAPTER FETE

The garden fete held by the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., at the residence of Mr. J. J. Lundy, Burnham street, Ashburnham, yesterday afternoon and evening was most successful from every standpoint. The weather was ideal, the attendance large and the entertainment of a most pleasing nature to all. The beautiful grounds overlooking the Little Lake are admirably adapted for such an event and the kind hospitality of Mr. Lundy and his sisters will not be forgotten for a long time.

For the entertainment of those attending, all kinds of amusement was available, bridge parties in charge of Mrs. Spence were arranged. Then there was the fish pond under the watchful eye of Miss N. Hall and Mrs. Brewer, and the palmistry booth supervised by Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Goodwill.

The work table was in charge of Mrs. Adam Hall while the candy table, which held a bountiful supply of homemade confections was presided over by Mrs. G. H. Thompson.

Mrs. Aylmer and Mrs. C. G. Graham, assisted by a number of young ladies catered to those who had ice cream appetites and at another booth a number of young ladies dispensed lemonade to the thirsty ones. Other refreshments were supplied under the direction of Mrs. Carmichael.

During the very delightful evening Miss Eastwood contributed a vocal solo and Miss Eloise Mennel in her rose petal dance was very entertaining. The Faust dance in which nine young ladies took part was splendid and more than pleased the gathering.

During the evening the 57th Band under Lieut. Gliddon rendered a number of very fine special musical selections.
